HOUSE IN DOUBT; DEMOCRATS HOLD SENATE BY 12

Uncertain Which Party Will Dominate in the Lower Branch of Congress.

Lippitt, Sutherland, and du Pont Defeated—Clark Loses to Kendrick.

NEW BALANCE OF POWER

Prohibitionists, Progressives, Protectionists, Independents, and Socialists Seated.

The control of the House of Representatives, which at midnight seemed to have been transferred from the Democrats to the Republicans, may be shifted back to the Democrats, according to later returns. It is now uncertain which party will dominate.

The present Democratic majority in the House is 21. Last returns indicated that the House would stand:

Republicans	215
Democrats	213
Socialist	1
Progressive	1
Protectionist	1
Prohibitionist	1
Doubtful	2

This means that even if the Democrats carry the two doubtful districts the Republicans will have a majority of two over the present party in power, but not a majority over the combined opposition. Representative Meyer London, Socialist, has been re-elected from the Twelfth New York District. Returns at an early hour Wednesday morning indicated that Victor Berger and W. R. Gaylord, Socialists, had been elected to Congress from Milwaukee districts. This morning's figures show that the Republicans had elected a solid Congressional delegation in Wisconsin. They also elected a solid delegation in Iowa.

Democrats Hold Senate.

The next Senate will be safely Democratic. The latest figures indicate that the Senate in the Sixty-fifth Congress will stand:

Democrats	54
Democratic majority	12

These figures are based on the probable election of Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Democrat, in Nebraska; A. A. Jones, Democrat, in New Mexico, J. B. Kendrick, Democrat, in Wyoming, and Senator Atlee Pomerene, Democrat, in Ohio. Returns up to an early hour Wednesday morning seemed to show conclusively that Hitchcock had been defeated by John L. Kennedy, Republican, and that ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick, Republican, had triumphed over Pomerene. Meagre returns from New Mexico have indicated the election of Frank A. Hubbell, Republican, but last night the election of Jones was indicated by the returns. Mr. Jones is a former Assistant Secretary of the Interior. He will succeed Senator Catron, Republican.

The Senatorial elections furnished many surprises. The greatest of these was the defeat of Senator Lippitt for re-election in Rhode Island by Peter G. Gerry, Democrat. Rhode Island was considered one of the banner Republican States of the Union. Mr. Lippitt was the successor in the Senate of Nelson W. Aldrich.

Changes in New York.

A considerable number of changes in the New York delegation to Congress will take place as a result of Tuesday's election. William M. Calder, Republican, who will succeed Senator James A. O'Gorman, represented a Brooklyn district in Congress for many years. He became a candidate in the Republican Senatorial primaries in 1914, but was defeated by James W. Wadsworth of Genesee, who was elected to the Senate over James W. Gerard. Calder made a remarkable run Tuesday, leading his ticket by a wide margin and getting a substantial majority in the Democratic stronghold of Greater New York. His Democratic opponent, William F. McCombs, was Chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1912 and managed Woodrow Wilson's campaign for President in that year.

There will be several changes in the New York delebation in Congress as a result of Tuesday's election. Thomas G. Patten, who has represented the Eighteenth District in Congress as a Democrat, was defeated by George B. Francis, a Republican. The Eighteenth is a district of the upper west side lying between Central Park and the North River.

In the Twentieth District Isaac Siegel, who was elected to Congress in 1914 as a Republican, was defeated by Bernard I. Rosenblatt, Democrat. William S. Bennet, Republican, who represents the Bronx Congressional district, was defeated by Daniel C. Oliver, Democrat.

Congressman Michael F. Farley, Democrat, was defeated in the Fourteenth District by F. H. La Guardia, Republican.

Up-State Archie D. Sanders, Republican, of Stafford, won the contest in the Thirty-ninth Congressional District

PROHIBITION FAVORED BY FIVE MORE STATES

One-Half the Union Now in the "Dry" Column—Big Cities Vote Against It.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—Headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League at Westerville, a suburb, today reported it had information that the dry forces had won State-wide prohibition fights in five States at yesterday's election. The States named were Michigan, Montana, South Dakota, Utah, and Nebraska—Michigan by 80,000.

With the addition of these States, Anti-Saloon League officials said, twenty-four States, one-half the Union, are now in the dry column.

HELENA, Mont. — The prohibition amendment in Montana appears to have been carried by more than 15,000 majority.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 8.—Prohibition was defeated in seven of the eleven localities in which the proposition was voted upon in the State. Baltimore city voted against it by a majority of 43,000. Annapolis rejected it by 500, while Havre de Grace, where racing is going on, went "dry" by 22 votes. Hagerstown voted dry.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 8.—The overwhelming vote in St. Louis against prohibition apparently defeated the amendment to make the State "dry." With the total vote of St. Louis and Kansas City reported, and a few rural votes in, the count was 49,561 for and 173,785 against prohibition.

This city voted 13,272 for the proposition and 140,900 against. Kansas City, which five years ago gave a majority of almost three to one against the proposition, this year voted 31,000 for and 30,000 against.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—A tremendous vote was cast in San Francisco against the State amendment to impose rigid restrictions on the sale and use of alcoholics. There had been a good majority for the proposition all day.

Amendment No. 1 for complete prohibition did not seem at any time to be a winner.

MINEOLA, L. I., Nov. 8.—Returns today from Nassau County show that the entire Republican ticket for local offices was victorious yesterday. The pluralities range from a few hundred votes to more than 3,500, the heaviest since the county was established, nearly eighteen years ago. John J. Graham, the Democratic nominee for Surrogate, was defeated by from 300 to 400 by Leon Howell, Republican.

James P. Niemann, Democratic candidate for County Judge, who is also serving out a term of six years, was defeated by about 1,200. Lewis J. Smith, the present District Attorney, who ran on the Republican and Progressive tickets, will be Judge Niemann's successor. Daniel J. Hegeman, Democratic nominess for County Treasurer, was defeated by William E. Luyster of Glen Cove.

For Sheriff, Phineas A. Seaman, county detective, was elected. Earl J. Bennett, Controller of the county, defeated Dr. D. N. Bulson of Rockville Centre. Thomas S. Cheshire, the Republican nominee for County Clerk, had no opposition.

WYOMING.

Special to The New York Times.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 8.—With about fifty small precincts still to hear from Wilson leads Hughes by 4,588 in Wyoming, and the Republicans concede that he has carried the State. Governor Kendrick is 2,823 ahead of C. D. Clark in the race for the Senate. Congressman Mondell is probably re-elected, the returns indicating that he has defeated John D. Clark by about 750 votes. It is not expected that further returns will materially change the result in the case of Mondell. Wilson's plurality may reach 5,000.

HUGHES READS BULLETINS

In Headquarters at Hotel Astor He Encourages Those Who Watch With Him if Spirits Flag.

While the Democratic managers claimed early yesterday morning that President Wilson had been re-elected, Charles E. Hughes, the Republican nominee, refused to give up the fight. He felt that the returns from California and Minnesota indicated that he would carry both of these States and would be elected.

Those who had laid wagers on the result of the election held back and awaited the official count. While the excitement over the result of the election was at its height, President Wilson played golf and Mr. Hughes went for an automobile ride. Both candidates appeared confident of election.

During the long day of conflicting reports which alternately seemed to assure him victory and then to snatch it from him, Mr. Hughes, in his apartments at the Astor Hotel, remained apparently calm and unruffled. He rallied his assistants at times when their spirits flagged, but refused steadfastly to make any statement until he was definitely assured of the outcome.

Only once was there any official indication of Mr. Hughes's state of mind. That was at 7 o'clock in the evening, after a short conference with William R. Willcox, Chairman of the Republican National Committee. When Mr. Willcox came into the hotel corridor from Mr. Hughes's room he said with a smile:

"I am confident that Mr. Hughes is elected and he shares that belief. We want only that to which we are entitled, but we intend to have that."

Intended No Innuendoes.

The Chairman added that this was merely a statement of fact, and was not to be construed as any indication that he or Mr. Hughes believed the Democrats sought any advantage which was not fair. He declared that neither he nor the nominee was indulging in any wild speculation, or intended to be drawn into any false position through too roseate views.

Mr. Hughes began his day at 8:15 o'clock, when he waked to be told that the victory which had appeared so certain the night before now was undecided through a remarkable shifting of political balances in the West. He listened without comment to the reports brought to him by Laurence H. Green, his secretary, and after breakfast studied the bulletins as they were flashed over the private wires, occasionally discussing their significance with his son, Charles E. Hughes, Jr.

Just before noon Mr. Hughes's three daughters, who came to New York for Election Day, went back to school. Miss Catherine went back to Wellesley College and Miss Helen took Miss Elizabeth, 9 years old, back to the National Cathedral School in Washington. Mrs. Hughes rivaled her husband in calmness.

After luncheon the candidate, who had been hailed as President-elect the night before, and his wife went automobile riding on Riverside Drive and Pelham Parkway. During the two hours and a half they were out they were recognized and saluted by hundreds.

No Eight-Hour Day for Watchers.

On his return Mr. Hughes again went to reading reports, which alternately seemed to assure him that California and Minnesota were safe, and then to veer them to his opponent.

Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney, who has been almost constantly with Mr. Hughes since Tuesday, was at the telegraph wires again last night. It was not until 10 o'clock in the evening that the bulletins from California and Minnesota seemed to indicate positively that they would give Mr. Hughes majorities, and then the reports were greeted with yells of joy. Two of the secretaries to Mr. Hughes rushed with them into Mr. Hughes's room.

Mr. Hughes laughed at the enthusiasm of those messengers and read the reports. Then he said:

"Now, you young men haven't been to bed for twenty-four hours. You go to sleep."

"Not us," retorted Mr. Sheppard. "We're not out for any eight-hour day," which made Mr. Hughes laugh again.

Mr. Hughes retired at midnight last night without making any statement.

Hudson County Gives President Less Than 3,000 Lead—Good Roads Proposition Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 8.—New Jersey Republicans yesterday not only carried the State for Charles E. Hughes by a plurality of over 59,000, but they elected Walter E. Edge as Governor and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen as United States Senator, retained their proportion of eight Representatives in Congress to the Democrats, four, and they also increased by seven votes the party control of the Legislature on joint ballot. They won the Senatorship in eight of the nine counties, and apparently have elected forty-four of the sixty Assemblymen.

Edge will have about 60,000 plurality over H. Otto Wittpenn, and Frelinghuysen has defeated James E. Martine, the Democratic candidate, by 15,000 or more.

With sixty districts missing out of 1,893, the vote for President was: Wilson, 207,458; Hughes, 266,719.

The vote for United States Senator in the same districts was: Martine, 162,394; Frelinghuysen, 327,641.

The vote in the same districts for Governor was: Wittpenn, 168,636; Edge, 237,757.

Republican Congressmen were elected in the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, and Tenth districts, the Democrats carrying the Fifth, Ninth, Eleventh, and Twelfth.

Republican Senators were elected in Atlantic, Bergen, Camden, Cumberland, Essex, Mercer, Morris, and Ocean. The Democratic nominee won in Hudson.

There will be fifteen Republicans and six Democrats in the Senate at the coming session of the Legislature.

Mercer County elected a Board of Freeholders of seven members to take the place of the present one of twenty-three members, and all the new officials are Republicans.

Incomplete State returns on the Egan road building referendum indicate its adoption by a majority of about 90,000.

BOTH SIDES READY TO FILE CONTESTS IN CLOSE STATES

Chairmen McCormick and Willcox Employ Counsel and Set Watchers.

MAY DEMAND RECOUNTS

Leaders of Both Parties Still Declare Themselves Sure of Victory.

LONG NIGHT AND DAY WAITS

Few at Either Headquarters Have Slept Since Monday—McCormick Goes Home to Rest.

With the result of the Presidential election still in doubt, a contest in States where the vote is close seemed certain last night, regardless of which side wins. The campaign maangers of both the leading parties were then preparing to take their fight into the courts in case of an adverse decision on the face of the returns.

Chairman Vance C. McCormick after a conference with United States Attorney General Gregory and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo retained John B. Stanchfield and De Lancey Nicoll to represent the National Committee in any legal proceedings that may be found needful for the protection of the party interests.

Chairman William R. Willcox of the Republican National Committee, after consulting with George W. Perkins and Republican leaders actively identified with the Hughes campaign, sent word to the National Committeemen in all States to retain the best lawyers available to represent their organizations and look out for the party interests in any recount proceedings that may be commenced in close States.

From both the national headquarters in this city orders were sent to party managers and candidates in all States where the count of the vote has not been completed to adopt every possible safeguard to prevent fraud in the interest of rival candidates.

The Democratic campaign managers actually have ordered quo warranto proceedings looking to a recount started in New Hampshire. Late returns last night indicated that the result in five other States would be so close as to call for recount proceedings by the party losing on the face of the returns. These States were West Virginia, North Dakota, New Mexico, Minnesota, and California. In all it appeared to be a neck-and-neck race between the two candidates.

There was tense interest at both headquarters all day yesterday. Great crowds surged in and out of the assembly rooms where the returns were being chalked up on big blackboards.

McCORMICK ACTS PROMPTLY

Orders Ballots Guarded and "Victory Safeguarded."

National Democratic leaders took prompt measures yesterday because of the closeness of the election to have the ballot boxes in the uncertain States amply guarded and the count protected. Chairman Vance C. McCormick of the Democratic National Committee admitted last night that there was a likelihood of a recount of the votes in one or two of the extremely close States and that attorneys had already been engaged to represent the committee.

This action was taken in the afternoon after a conference of Chairman McCormick, Henry Morgenthau, William G. McAdoo, Thomas W. Gregory, United States Attorney General, John B. Stanchfield and DeLancey Nicoll. Mr. Stanchfield and Mr. Nicoll were called in as special counsel to represent the National Committee in any legal steps it may be found desirable to take. Chairman McCormick would not discuss what the first move would be, but he had already sent a telegram to every Democratic State and county chairman and every Democratic candidate for Congress in the close States to be on the alert. This is the message:

"President Wilson has been re-elected. Our opponents are desperate. You must personally see that the ballot boxes are guarded and the count protected and nothing left undone to safeguard this victory."

Chairman McCormick did not charge that his opponents might attempt corruption or the stuffing of ballot boxes, but he said he was not taking any chances. As a result of Attorney General Gregory's visit to headquarters, it was reported that no matter whether President Wilson or Mr. Hughes was elected, it was considered certain that when Congress meets in December its first action will be to consider the enactment of the Corrupt Practices bill which failed of passage at the last session, as well as the authorization of a Congressional investigation into the political expenditures of the recent campaign, regardless of party lines or interests.

Word came from Bridgeport, Conn., last night that the Democratic State Committee, through Chairman David Fitzgerald at New Haven, had made a request for verification of the returns in Fairfield County, where Hughes received 45,000 votes or a plurality of 5,000 over Wilson. Bridgeport, which is in CALIFORNIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—With votes from more than 100 precincts in Los Angeles locked up for the night and the San Francisco returns virtually complete, 5,347 precincts of 5,917 in California give Wilson a plurality of 4,410. The vote was: Hughes, 435,486; Wilson, 439,896.

The latest returns, with only seven precincts missing, show that Wilson carried San Francisco by a plurality of 10,804.

Despite the figures in favor of Wilson, local Republican headquarters tonight express confidence that Hughes would carry the State.

Wilson took the lead in the returns late in the afternoon. At 4 o'clock his plurality on the returns available at that hour was 1,538, and subsequent counts added raised it to 2,945 and then to 4,694. Then it fell to 1,400.

Thomas McAleer, County Registrar of Voters, locked the ballots of Los Angeles City and County in a vault, around which Deputy United States Marshals were stationed as a guard, and announced tonight that the tabulation of returns would be resumed tomorrow morning. The ballots of 118 precincts in Los Angeles City and County remain to be recorded on the returns for President.

The count of the ballots of the other 1,097 precincts gave Hughes 122,062 votes and Wilson 104,835.

Three hundred and seventy-seven precincts out of 428 in Los Angeles County outside the city give Hughes 45,424, Wilson 29,286—a Hughes plurality of 16,138. Six of the eight Southern California counties—Imperial, San Diego, Ventura, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, and Orange—with only six precincts for all six missing, give Hughes a plurality of 4,883.

Chester H. Rowell, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, predicted tonight that Hughes would carry California by a small plurality. Mr. Rowell's statement follows:

"Figures gathered by the Los Angeles office of the Republican State Committee, covering more than 1,000 precincts, and close estimates of the remaining precincts now remaining indicate that Hughes will carry Los Angeles County by 23,000. The Los Angeles office estimates that this lead will be increased 12,000 more by other Southern California counties. If these figures are borne out by the final count, Hughes will carry California.

"Our figures on San Francisco indicate a majority of little, if any, above 15,000 for Wilson."

O. K. Cushing, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, issued the following statement late today:

"Basing my opinion upon verified reports from every county in California, I confidently assert that President Wilson will carry California by 15,000."

MINNESOTA.

ST. PAUL, Thursday, Nov. 9.—Charles E. Hughes was leading President Wilson in Minnesota early today, but his margin was so slight that it was believed virtually complete reports from the State would be necessary to determine definitely the outcome.

When 2,500 precincts out of a total of 3,024 had reported, Hughes was leading by 803 votes, the count standing: Wilson, 162,285; Hughes, 163,088.

Hughes had been gaining steadily at the rate of about sixteen a precinct in the country precincts, absorbing the majority of 15,000 given to Wilson in St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Duluth.

Virtually all the large normally Democratic counties have reported, and most of those still to report have usually gone Republican. Normal political conditions, however, have failed to be maintained, except in a few instances. Judging, however, from the trend in districts neighboring on those yet to be heard from, it is believed Hughes will have a slight plurality.

When the closeness of the vote became evident last night, several State officials expressed the belief that the definite outcome would not be known until the votes cast by the Minnesota guardsmen at the Mexican border had been tabulated.

The guardsmen's vote was taken Tuesday by special Commissioners, appointed by Governor Burnquist under the provisions of a law enacted by the recent special session of the Legislature. It is not expected that these returns will be entered in their proper precinct records before next week. Unofficially, it was estimated that the guardsmen's vote aggregated 2,800.

NORTH DAKOTA.

FARGO, N. D., Thursday, Nov. 9.—At an early hour this morning the result of the vote in this State for Presidential Electors was still in doubt, owing to the lack of returns from 178 precincts.

The figures at that time were: Wilson 50,305, Hughes 49,057.

At midnight, after being behind several hours, Wilson again took the lead. Returns from 1,504 precincts out of 1,850 in the State gave Wilson 45,988, Hughes 45,889.

Early yesterday Wilson had a lead on the face of the returns, but this speedily changed to a slight plurality for Hughes.

Hughes swelled his plurality to 1,500 when complete returns from Emmons County gave him 1,040 votes to 579 for Wilson. Democratic leaders declared they were undisturbed by the change in complexion of the vote, asserting that the lead would revert to Wilson before returns were complete.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 8.—Complete returns announced by Secretary of State Edwin C. Bean at Concord tonight give Hughes a plurality of 161, the smallest plurality ever attained in a Presidential contest in the State. The figures are: Hughes, 43,856; Wilson, 43,695.

In connection with this the Secretary of State says:

"The vote for Presidential electors in New Hampshire is probably the closest of any State in the Union. It will be necessary to await complete official certificates from the town and ward clerks to determine to an exact vote the status of the candidates. One hundred and twenty of the certificates are lacking out of 294. The Secretary of State's office feels that it would not be safe to say that either Hughes or Wilson has carried the State until the official returns are more complete."

The vote of the New Hampshire militiamen now on the border may decide the result of the election in this State. There are 1,375 militiamen from here in Texas, and their ballots have not yet been counted.

Late tonight the Republicans asserted that Hughes's plurality in this State was 200, with two towns missing. These towns aggregate twenty-three votes.

In contradiction of that announcement George E. Ferrand, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, gave out figures indicating a plurality of 238 for Wilson. Chairman Ferrand's statement said that with thirteen towns missing Wilson had 42,464 votes; Hughes, 42,320. Newspaper figures, with two small towns in the White Mountains missing, gave Hughes a lead of 524.

A recount of the vote for Presidential electors will be demanded by the Democratic State Committee, according to information received tonight. It was learned that on account of the closeness of the result the committee was directed by the National Committee to call for a recount at once and obtain the best available counsel to assist in the work. The National Committee is said to have guaranteed all the expenses of the recount aside from that which in the course of events would fall upon the State. As far as is known here, no charge of fraud has been made.

The result of the Presidential vote in this State, which had been generally regarded as safely Republican, was in doubt all day. Early returns gave Hughes a plurality of 1,869 votes over Wilson.

At 8 o'clock Secretary of State Bean announced that, with seven small towns to hear from, Hughes had a lead of 434.

Henry W. Keyes, Republican, has been elected Governor by a plurality of 8,500 over John C. Hutchins, Democrat. The two Republican Congressmen—Cyrus A. Sulloway and Edward H. Wason, were re-elected.

NEW MEXICO.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 8.—A sudden shift from Wilson to Hughes developed late tonight as belated returns from distant counties were received here. These gave to the Republican candidate a lead of 258 in 336 out of 338 precincts. The count stood: Hughes, 14,794; Wilson, 14,536.

Chairman Arthur Seligman of the Democratic State Committee tonight said that on the basis of reports received from all parts of the State Wilson had carried New Mexico by a plurality of 2,500. Republican leaders gave out no figures, but did not concede the State to Wilson. A conference of Republican leaders was held in Santa Fé tonight,

And Wilson Ran Behind Ticket in Home State — Deaths Complicate Results.

The Presidency is still in doubt, and the courts may have to settle it. Both parties yesterday took preliminary measures, the Democrats retaining John B. Stanchfield and De Lancey Nicoll as counsel and the Republicans instructing the State Chairmen in all the doubtful States to retain counsel. A recount has already been demanded by the Democrats in New Hampshire.

At 2:30 A. M. President Wilson had 251 votes assured, and Mr. Hughes had 247, with 33 in doubt in four States—California, 13; Minnesota, 12; North Dakota, 5, and New Mexico, 3. Mr. Wilson can win by carrying either California or Minnesota and also one of the two lesser States. Mr. Hughes can win with California and Minnesota, but if he only carries one of them he will have to get both the smaller States in addition. He is in the lead now in Minnesota.

Wilson's lead in Minnesota, originally 10,000, steadily decreased all the evening until at 2:30 A. M. it reached the vanishing point, and Hughes now leads by 803. California, as yet, is anybody's State; for though Wilson is in the lead, the returns which put him there have come from the part of the state where he is strongest, and much less has been heard from Southern California, where Hughes is supposed to be strongest. Still less has come from the northern part. As for New Mexico, only 336 precincts out of 838 have been heard from, and Hughes's lead there is too small to give any indication of the final outcome.

At 2:30 A. M. Hughes led in Minnesota by 803 and in New Mexico by 258. In the other doubtful States Wilson led in California by 4,410 and in North Dakota by 1,248.

Swings in Two Big States.

Interest centred on the two big States of California and Minnesota, for with either of them Wilson would come within two or three votes of a majority, while without one of them Hughes would have no chance. Minnesota was in the Wilson column yesterday morning. In the afternoon the Wilson majority began to come down, and it was steadily whittled further hour by hour through the night, until it disappeared altogether.

California, which on Tuesday night had seemed safely in the Hughes column, was thrown into the doubtful list near daybreak by a sudden turning in of an unexpected block of Wilson precincts. It was this which gave rise to the Democratic belief that California had gone for Wilson, and to general Democratic jubilation. But it soon appeared that these precincts were in and about San Francisco, a part of the State which Wilson had carried handsomely—his plurality in San Francisco is 15,000—and which the Republicans had conceded to him. It was therefore evident that this did not necessarily indicate a Wilson gain throughout the State, and thereafter the returns from California were watched nervously by both sides.

As returns came in from other parts of the State Hughes's chances began to loom up, and State Chairman Chester H. Rowell claimed the State for him.

The Republicans finally rested their hopes on Southern California. They carried Los Angeles County, but the returns were incomplete from the other parts of the immense territory comprised in the southern part of the State. Finally word came that the count in Los Angeles had been stopped for the night and the ballot boxes locked up.

But meanwhile that part of Los Angeles County which lies outside of the city reported a Hughes majority of 10,138, and right on the heels of this came the news that six of the southern counties had given him a majority of 4,628.

Since if Wilson carried either Minnesota or California, he would need only the three votes of New Mexico to win, the course of that State was followed with intense anxiety.

North Dakota, which had apparently gone for Wilson, became doubtful during the day and with California, Minnesota and New Mexico, made a total of thirty-three doubtful votes. West Virginia remained shaky throughout the evening, but at midnight the chances favored Hughes by a safe though small plurality, which, unless disturbed by later returns, might remain at 3,000. In North Dakota the slight swing away from Wilson was maintained.

Indiana was claimed by the Democrats as doubtful, but there seems to be no sufficient reason. At 1:30 A. M. 2,801 precincts out of 3,143 in Indiana had given Wilson 305,136 and Hughes 311,697, with Hughes leading by 8,561.

It may be that the vote of the soldiers on the Mexican border will determine the election. That will not be the case if California is the pivotal State, probably, for the majority in that State is not likely to fall so low that her 460 soldier votes will affect it. But Minnesota, which see-sawed from Wilson to Hughes last night, and was for Wilson by 386 at midnight and for Hughes by 224 an hour later, has 4,047 men on the border, and West Virginia, where Hughes has apparently not more than 3,000 majority, has 1,038. New Hampshire also may be swung to Wilson if there should be a strong vote for him among the 1,375 men she has in Texas.

A dispatch from McAllen, Texas, to THE TIMES says that the total vote of the Minnesota brigade is indicated as 1,906, apportioned as follows: Minnesota Artillery, 360; First Infantry, 705; Second Infantry, 413; Third Infantry, 397. An unofficial ballot of the First Regiment went three to one for Wilson, but the officers say that in the other units the Republican vote was predominant.

Death as a Factor.

With the election so close, importance attaches even to individual electors. There appears to be a possibility that, although Wilson carried Washington, Hughes may get one of that State's seven votes. The death of A. Stream, a Democratic candidate for elector, shortly before election, and the substitution of E. M. Connor in his place on the ticket, came so late that in many counties the name of Stream, not Connor, appeared on the ballot. All votes cast for Stream will be invalid.

A similar question may arise in Missouri, in which State an elector committed suicide before election. In West Virginia an elector withdrew.

Though most of the great States of the Union went for Hughes by large majorities, the small majorities cast one way or the other by the smaller States were a curious feature of the result. Delaware went for Hughes by only 356 and was long in doubt. The Democrats actually claimed New Hampshire, so small was the Hughes majority there.

It was also noticeable that Hughes was weaker than his party in the smaller States of the East. Vermont gave him only 17,000, Maine only 9,000, Rhode Island 4,800. Vermont emphasized her vote by giving Graham, the stand-pat can candidate for Governor, 25,000, and by re-electing Senator Page by an even larger plurality.

The most mixed result of all, however, was not in the East but in the West. Washington went for Wilson, but re-elected Senator Poindexter, Republican, and also re-elected Governor Lister, Democrat, and chose a solid Republican Congress delegation.

Kansas made it plainly manifest that the Progressive vote had not been coaxed back, so far as Hughes was concerned. That State went for Wilson, but at the same time re-elected the Republican Governor, Capper.

Two of the figures most constantly in the public eye in the present Congress were defeated for re-election. They both came from Illinois. One was Frank Buchanan, the labor leader, who was indicted for his pro-German activities, which were alleged to have transgressed the bounds of law, and who retaliated by getting Congress to investigate United States District Attorney Marshall of this city with a view to his impeachment. The other was Clyde H. Tavenner, noted for his opposition to an army and navy of any size and his semi-socialistic oratory. Both were Democrats.

Congress is to have its first woman member. She will be Miss Jeannette M. Rankin, a tall and red-haired Republican, who was elected Representative-at-Large from Montana. Montana went Democratic, and it was presumably the woman vote which saved this one Republican candidate from the defeat.

MISSOURI.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 8.—With the cities complete and 576 precincts missing in the country Wilson has a lead of 23,004, which assures that he will carry the State handily. The missing precincts are very scattered and are about evenly divided. Even with an unexpected adverse vote in these precincts Wilson is certain of a plurality.

Returns from 2,882 precincts out of the 3,459 in the State gave Wilson 349,749 to 320,845 for Hughes. The lead of F. D. Gardner (Dem.) for Governor went to 4,852 tonight, when returns were received from 2,877 precincts. Gardner's vote was 333,458 and the vote of Henry Lamm (Rep.) was 328,806.

Senator Reed had a plurality of 26,536 over Walter S. Dickey, Republican nominee for United States Senator, in 2,844 precincts.

Jackson County, in which is Kansas City, complete gave Wilson 44,229; Hughes, 32,819.

The City of St. Louis gave Hughes a plurality of nearly 10,000.

IOWA.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 8.—Hughes will carry Iowa by 65,000, acording to estimates based upon returns from practically one-half of the State. In 1,150 precincts out of 2,297 Hughes has 144,409; Wilson 113,130.

Returns from 1,087 precincts for Governor give Harding, Republican, 151,019 and Meredith, 90,555. Harding's plurality probably will be 128,632. Republicans elect the Congressman in every district with the probable exception of the Eleventh, where indications are that Congressman A. L. Steele has been re-elected over George Scott by a small margin.

UTAH.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 8.—As the returns from outlying precincts come in it appears that Wilson's plurality in Utah should be close to 16,000. King, for Senator, and Bamberger, for Governor, are running well alongside the President. Thus far only one county, a small one, shows in the Republican column, although three remote counties, also small and usually Republican, are not yet in with their full returns.

There is no longer any doubt that the entire Democratic State ticket has gone through from 10,000 to 15,000 strong, and indications are that the Democrats will have a majority in both houses of the Legislature. It appears that little remains to the Republicans in this Legislature save their holdover Senators.

COLORADO.

DENVER, Nov. 8.—Additional returns tonight continue to pile up a commanding lead in Colorado for President Wilson, and the figures indicated that a majority of the Democratic State candidates had been swept into office with the Presidential vote, although by smaller pluralities.

Based upon returns received up to 9 o'clock tonight, conservative experts placed President Wilson's plurality in Colorado at 50,000. Out of 1,491 precincts in the State 1,165 gave Wilson a lead of 34,710 votes.

TEXAS.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 8.—The full State Democratic ticket was elected by a majority ranging from 130,000 to 175,000. Senator Charles Culberson ran far ahead of the remainder of the ticket, according to incomplete returns.

WILSON GETS OHIO BY ABOUT 75,000

Democrats Make Clean Sweep, Electing Cox Governor and Pomerene Senator.

CAPTURE THE RURAL VOTE

His Support of National Prohibition Lost Herrick Support of Liberals.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—Estimates of Wilson's plurality in Ohio range from 70,000 to 80,000. A conservative figure seems to be 75,000. The Democratic leaders say the entire Democratic State ticket will be elected, with a gain of at least three Congressmen and a Legislature in harmony with the new administration.

Returns from 4,436 of the 5,578 precincts in Ohio at noon gave Wilson 454,828; Hughes, 386,032.

For Governor, 4,461 precincts gave Cox, (D.) 45,221; Willis, (R.) 423,234, a Democratic lead of 11,987.

For Senator, returns from 4,147 precincts gave Pomerene, (D.,) 391,077, and Herrick 371,931.

The Democrats tonight said Pomerene would win by upward of 30,000. They estimated Cox's lead at 10,000.

The Senatorial campaign had a national prohibition feature. Months ago, when the Anti-Saloon League announced that Mr. Herrick was pledged to national prohibition, the Liberals decided to desert him, although they followed him earnestly when he was a candidate for re-election for Governor in 1905 and was defeated.

The strength of the Democrats this year was largely in the rural districts.

The new State officers below Governor are: Earl D. Bloom, Lieutenant Governor; A. V. Donahey, Auditor, re-elected; Chester Bryan, Treasurer; W. D. Fulton, Secretary of State; Joseph McGhee, Attorney General; James G. Johnson and Maurice H. Donahue, re-elected Supreme Court Justices.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 8.—The outstanding feature of the election in Massachusetts was the great tribute paid to President Wilson by Republicans who voted for him. As Frederick W. Mansfield, Democratic candidate for Governor, said tonight, if he had made a speech in this State he would probably have carried the electoral ticket. As it was, he polled 247,327 votes, only 21,034 less than Hughes, while the Republican candidate for Governor had a plurality of 44,678, and Senator Lodge had 32,040 votes more than Fitzgerald. The President carried Boston by 18,825, which is 500 ahead of the party ticket. McCall, who headed the ticket with 274,833, ran 6,492 ahead of Hughes, and 8,377 ahead of Lodge.

The Congressional delegation, which now stands twelve Republicans and four Democrats, will stand eleven Republicans, four Democrats, and one Independent. The Independent is Alvan T. Fuller of Malden, who defeated Representative Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea by 321 votes.

Incomplete returns indicated the probable acceptance by the voters at yesterday's election of propositions for a convention to be held to revise the State Constitution, and for a revision of the primary laws, restoring the principle of party enrollment at State primaries.

MAINE.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 8.—With forty-one small places missing, Hughes has 68,545 votes in Maine, against 63,427 for Wilson, or a margin of 5,118 for the Republican candidate. In 1912 the missing town gave Taft 258, Roosevelt 874, and Wilson 432.

VERMONT.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 8.—Revised returns of the election gives Hughes a plurality of 17,000, his total vote being 38,000, or about 5,000 less than the vote polled four years ago by the Republicans and Progressives combined. This is the smallest plurality given to a Republican Presidential candidate since the civil war, except in 1912, when the Progressives were in the field.

Wilson received a few more than 21,000 votes, being the largest total given a Democratic Presidential nominee since the civil war.

Horace F. Graham, Governor-elect, has a plurality of over 25,000, and Senator Carroll S. Page is re-elected by an even larger vote.

RHODE ISLAND.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—With all the returns in, Rhode Island gives Hughes 44,159, Wilson 39,353. The plurality for Hughes is thus 4,806.

Governor R. Livingston Beeckman, Republican, has been re-elected by a plurality of about 13,000 over Addison P. Munroe, Democrat.

Senator Henry F. Lippitt was defeated by Peter G. Gerry, Democrat, by 6,800.

CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—Charles E. Hughes carried Connecticut over President Wilson in yesterday's election by a plurality of a little more than 5,000.

George P. McLean, Republican, was returned to the United States Senate by a plurality of 7,917 over Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, Democrat.

The plurality of Holcomb, Republican, for Governor, over Beardsley, Democrat, was 12,224.

Four of the five Republican Congressmen were re-elected, P. Davis Oakey, of the First District being defeated by former Congressman Augustine Lonergan, the Democratic candidate.

The Republicans retain control of the State Legislature, but the Democrats made slight gains in both branches.

The complete vote was: Hughes, 103,324; Wilson, 99,832; for Governor—Holcomb, 100,056; Beardsley, 96,015; for Senator—McLean, 105,264; Cummings, 97,347.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—As additional election districts are heard from, Hughes's plurality in Pennsylvania continues to grow. Returns from 5,649 districts out of 6,988 give him a plurality of 169,839 over President Wilson, of which 125,463 were contributed by Philadelphia and Allegheny County, which takes in Pittsburgh. The total figures for the 5,649 districts are: Wilson, 419,225; Hughes, 589,064.

Returns from the Congressional districts, which may be changed by the soldier vote, show that neither the Republicans nor the Democrats made any net gains among the Congressmen elected.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 8.—Democratic leaders are elated over the big gains made in the party vote throughout Pennsylvania. Late returns indicate that the Republican claim of 200,000 will not materialize. The Democrats expect to see this reduced to about half. They assert tonight that the State, outside of Philadelphia County, cast a plurality for President Wilson. They gained 21,000 in Allegheny County, and two of the Republican candidates for Congress, William H. Coleman and Dr. Barchfield, will have to get a large majority in the soldier vote at the border to defeat Clyde Kelly and Guy Campbell, respectively, who are both a few votes in the lead. Fayette County, the home of State Chairman William E. Crow, has gone Democratic. With about 2,000 districts to hear from, Hughes's plurality over Wilson appears to be about 125,000.

DELAWARE.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 8.—According to complete, but unofficial returns, Hughes has carried the State by a plurality of 1,158. In the contest for United States Senator Josiah O. Wolcott, Democrat, has beaten Senator du Pont, Republican, by 1,869 votes. Representative Miller was defeated by Albert F. Polk, Democrat, by 47 votes.

The plurality of John G. Townsend, Republican candidate for Governor, is 1,802.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 8.—Hughes's lead over Wilson in West Virginia was suddenly increased by 1,538 votes just before midnight by the returns from McDowell, one of the southern counties of the State. This made his total plurality over Wilson 3,505, the greatest since the count of the vote began. The vote, with later returns embracing 1,804 out of 1713 precincts, stands: Hughes, 118,000; Wilson, 104,589.

Returns from 1,205 precincts for Governor give Cornwell, (Dem.,) 111,103, and Robinson, (Rep.,) 110,850. For United States Senator, 1,285 precincts give Chilton, (Dem.,) 106,488, and Sutherland, (Rep.,) 112,282.

Indications point to Democratic loss of United States Senator and Democratic gain of one and possibly two Representatives. M. M. Neely (Dem.) is re-elected in the First District. George M. Bowers (Rep.) is defeated for re-election in the Second District by Sam V. Woods, Stuart F. Reed (Rep.) was elected in the third. Judge Null (Dem.) won over Harry Woodyard (Rep.) in the Fourth, a Democratic gain. The re-election of Adam Littlepage (Dem.) in the Sixth is in doubt, but Edward Cooper (Rep.) was re-elected in the Fifth.

Late returns on the woman suffrage amendment indicate its defeat by a 2 to 1 vote.

TENNESSEE.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 8.—President Wilson has carried Tennessee by a plurality conservatively estimated at 30,000, running ahead of the Democratic State ticket 7,000 votes.

GEORGIA.

Special to The New York Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 8.—Georgia is Democratic by 75,000 or more, as against some 68,000 majority in 1912. The party leaders claim a majority of 90,000. Hugh Dorsey, Democratic candidate for Governor, has received an overwhelming vote, but substantial balloting was done for Roscoe Pickett, Republican candidate.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 8.—Wilson electors have a plurality of 55,000 in South Carolina. Opposition to the Democratic nominees was, as usual, inconsequential.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Special to The New York Times.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 8.—The majority for Wilson in this State is at least 45,000. The majority in nearly every Democratic county has been increased. There is no decrease in the Democratic Congressmen, and the Democratic majority in both houses of the Legislature has been increased. The vote is the largest ever polled.

FLORIDA.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 8.—Out of 45,000 votes counted, Wilson leads by approximately 40,000. Sydney J. Catts, a Democrat, running independently for Governor, leads W. A. Knott, Democrat nominee, by 5,000. Park Trammell (Dem.) goes to the Senate.

ALABAMA.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 8.—With many country districts not reported Wilson's plurality in Alabama is 67,451. It will swell to 71,000.

KENTUCKY.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 8.—With all counties reported Kentucky gives Wilson 27,015 plurality over Hughes.

ARKANSAS.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 8.—Wilson's plurality in Arkansas will probably be more than 35,000.

The bill to repeal State-wide prohibition will lose by more than 2 to 1. The initiative and referendum amendment for which Senator Owen of Oklahoma and Bryan campaigned last month will probably fail by a small majority.

KANSAS.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 8.—President Wilson's majority in Kansas will be 25,000. The Democrats elect five Congressman and the Republicans three. Governor Capper and the entire Republican State ticket is elected by from 90,000 to 100,000. The women threw their votes to President Wilson on the fear of war with Mexico if Hughes was elected.

Charles H. Sessions, Republican State Chairman, made the following statement:

"We appealed especially for help for Hughes and the Congressmen, but $1.75 wheat, the 'kept us out of war' cry, and the Adamson law made it impossible for us to turn the tide."

Chairman Hubert Lardner of the Democratic State Committee said:

"It was a great victory, due to a systematic, energetic campaign."

Returns from 1,899 out of 2,474 precincts in Kansas give Wilson 245,177; Hughes 214,182. In the Governor's race, with 1,634 State precincts heard from, the figures were Capper, 226,875; Lansdon, 130,760.

MONTANA.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 8.—With 90,000 votes accounted for, Wilson leads in Montana by approximately 5,000. Myers, Democrat, is elected United States Senator over Pray, Republican, by about 2,000. The Congressional Representatives will be Miss Jeannette Rankin, Republican, and J. M. Evans, Democrat.

The race for Governor is still in doubt. Stewart, Democrat, has a lead of 1,400 over Edwards, Republican. Indications point to the election of Stewart.

The total vote of Montana in 1912 was 79,910.

ARIZONA.

Special to The New York Times.

TUCSON, Ariz., Nov. 8.—The Republican State Committee concedes Arizona to Wilson, but gives no figures. Democratic Chairman Stoneman claims the State for Wilson by from 6,000 to 8,500. The woman's party campaign against President Wilson, Senator Ashurst, and Congressman Hayden was of no avail. The Democratic women stood for Wilson and the Democratic Congressional ticket, which also received strong support from Republican women. Senator Ashurst will defeat Ribbey, Republican, by at least 7,000. Hayden, Democrat, is re-elected over Eads, Republican, on the face of returns, by 12,000.

Governor Hunt was in a close fight for re-election, with incomplete returns from Cochise County, with its big vote of copper miners, which should favor Hunt.

Arizona adopted the most stringent "dry" amendment in the United States, making it a crime to have liquor in one's possession.

OKLAHOMA.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 8.—With one-third of the total precincts in the State reporting today, President Wilson had a comfortable margin over Hughes in Oklahoma. The count from 716 out of 2,572 in the State gave Wilson 54,517, Hughes 31,627. Democratic leaders claimed Wilson would carry Oklahoma by a plurality ranging from 35,000 to 55,000.

INDIANA.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 8.—When Hughes was leading by more than 8,000, with only 382 of the 3,143 precincts in the State unaccounted, the Democratic State headquarters tonight refused to concede a victory in the State to the Republican candidate.

Later returns, embracing 2,801 precincts out of 3,143 in the State, reduced the Hughes plurality to 6,561, the vote being: Wilson, 305,136; Hughes, 311,697.

Returns for Governor from 2,625 precincts give Adair (Dem.) 283,219 and Goodrich (Rep.) 286,069.

Still later, with reports from 2,831 precincts, many of them official, the totals showed Hughes 319,157 and Wilson 310,736, a plurality of 8,421 for Hughes.

Hughes's lead was slightly below that of Goodrich (Rep.) over Adair (Dem.) in the Gubernatorial race, and also under those of Harry S. New and J. E. Watson, (Reps.,) who unseated John W. Kern and Thomas Taggart in the United States Senate. The vote on Governor for 2,767 precincts, several of them official, was: Goodrich, 309,172; Adair, 293,366. The Senatorial vote for 2,835 precincts was: New, 295,141; Kern, 279,487; Watson, 293,358; Taggart, 279,256.

Congressional returns tonight indicated that the Republicans probably would have eight representatives in the lower house and the Democrats three, with the contest undecided in the First and Eleventh Districts.

The Prohibitionist and Socialist vote, with complete returns from twenty-three of the ninety-two counties in the State, was not so large as was expected, it was said tonight. Both the Prohibitionist and Socialist candidates for Governor polled larger votes than did Hanley and Benson, the respective candidates for President. The Progressive vote was light.

NEVADA.

RENO, Nev., Nov. 8.—President Wilson carried Nevada by about 5,000.

With both Republican and Democratic State headquarters claiming a victory, the result of the Senatorial fight was still in doubt at noon, on the face of incomplete and meagre returns from all parts of the State Pittman, Republican, had a lead of approximately 300 votes over Piatt.

E. E. Roberts, Republican, is re-elected to Congress.

IDAHO.

BOISE, Idaho, Nov. 8.—Wilson's plurality in Idaho may total nearly 10,000, according to estimates tonight.

Wilson's lead of over 6,000 out of more than 60,000 votes increases as returns come in. The total vote will run from 110,000 to 115,000.

For Governor, Alexander, Democrat, leads with 32,060, against Davis, Republican, with 30,904.

The count of 408 precincts out of 748 in Idaho gave Hughes 38,780, Wilson 43,371.

WISCONSIN.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 8. — Wisconsin, one of the States conceded as doubtful by estimators of both parties up to election night, has from the moment the vote-counting began been steadfastly and surely for Hughes, constituting one of the surprises of the surprising election. Tonight, with three-quarters of the precincts of the State reporting, and the balance from thinly-populated sections of the north country rural and forest regions, Hughes led by more than 21,000, and there was no chance of this lead being overcome. It is more probable that the 21,000 will be increased to 25,000 or more.

The surprise in the national vote extended to individual counties. Seven counties, heavily populated by Germans, which were Democratic in 1912, reversed their showing this Fall, and gave majorities for Hughes.

Milwaukee was a notable exception, giving to Wilson 6,000 plurality in the face of a Republican majority to every other State, legislative, and county candidate, with the exception of a Socialist prosecutor. The State will send a solid Republican delegation to Congress, three Democrats being defeated, and an apparent Socialist victory being converted into defeat by complete returns. Governor E. L. Philipp's plurality closely approaches that of Mr. Hughes.

The Socialists increased their representation in both branches of the Legislature by one member in each house, and will have nine members in the House and three in the Senate. Outside Milwaukee, the Socialists cast only a small vote, as did the Prohibitionists.

WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Nov. 8.—President Wilson's plurality in Washington will not fall below 12,000, and it is possible that it will reach 15,000. Returns from 1,844 precincts out of 2,385 give Wilson 149,252, Hughes 138,843.

Senator Miles Poindexter, Republican, has been re-elected by a majority of 50,000. Governor Ernest Lister, Democratic, has been re-elected by 9,000. Four Republican Congressmen have been elected. Representative Dill, Democrat, is leading in the Fifth District. Washington voted heavily against modifying the prohibition law by permitting the manufacture and sale of beer.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Special to The New York Times.

PIERRE, S. Dak., Nov. 8.—It was estimated late tonight that this State would give Hughes 3,000 to 5,000 plurality over Wilson.

Prohibition has been carried by 20,000 or more, and equal suffrage by probably 10,000.

DOUBTFUL STATE TO DECIDE ELECTION

the purpose of which could not be learned.

Former First Assistant Secretary of the Interior A. A. Jones has defeated Frank A. Hubbell for United States Senator, running ahead of his ticket. W. B. Walton, Democrat, of Silver City, has apparently defeated B. C. Hernandez for Representative, and E. C. Debaca seems to have been elected Governor over H. O. Burnsum by approximately the same majorities as those given to Wilson.

DEMING, N. M., Nov. 8.—Luna County, New Mexico, including Columbus, the scene of Francisco Villa's raid, gave Wilson 604 votes and Hughes 28. About 376 ballots are still to be counted.

OREGON.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 8.—Incomplete returns from all sections of Oregon but one sparsely settled county give Hughes a plurality of 7,272. The vote was: Hughes, 106,805; Wilson, 99,533.

With returns complete from 285 of the 375 precincts in Multnomah County, which includes this city, at 11 o'clock tonight, Hughes's lead over Wilson in the county had increased to 5,763 votes. The vote for Hughes was 27,518, Wilson's vote was 24,055. If Hughes maintains this ratio he will have a plurality of 5,000 votes in Multnomah County.

The Hughes lead early this afternoon with 874 of the 1,639 precincts heard from, was 4,080. Later it fell to 3,982, but was raised to its highest figures by subsequent returns.

"We will carry the State by a safe majority," said Sam White, Democratic Chairman, at noon.

C. L. McNary, Republican Chairman, said: "The State will be found safely Republican when the returns are in."

HUGHES'S PLURALITY 185,000 IN ILLINOIS

Lowden Leads Dunne by 150,000, Only Men Being Allowed to Vote for Governor.

VOTES OF WOMEN EVEN

Republicans Gain Four Congressmen — Tavenner and Buchanan Swamped.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 8.—Republican pluralities in Illinois kept on growing today as late returns came in. Hughes's margin over Wilson has climbed to the 185,000 mark, with possibilities that it may exceed even that.

Colonel Frank O. Lowden's plurality over Governor Dunne appears to be ranging around the 150,000 point. He raced ahead of Hughes on the men's vote, women not voting for Governor.

Wilson—Men, 211,880; women, 130,051; total, 341,930.

Hughes—Men, 220,880; women, 135,150; total, 365,036.

Benson (Socialist) — Men, 21,747; women, 6,684; total, 28,431.

Reimer (Soc. Labor)—Men, 593; women, 377; total, 970.

Hanly (Prob.)—Men, 659; women, 624; total, 1,283.

Women cast slightly less than 40 per cent. of the total vote, or about 650,000 in the entire State, according to estimates

The Illinois Congressional delegation will probably land twenty-one Republicans to six Democrats, a Republican gain of four.

Republicans elected all their late officers, and, with one exception, elected their entire ticket in Cook County, including Chicago.

Republicans will have seven more than a constitutional majority in the next Illinois Senate. They will have a margin of about nine votes in the House.

The Republicans made their gain in Congressmen through the defeat of William Eliza Williams, Congressman at Large; Frank Buchanan, labor leader, in the Seventh District; Clyde Tavenner, the small army and navy advocate in the Fourteenth District, and Claude U. Stone in the Sixteenth District.

Niels Juul virtually swamped Buchanan in the Seventh District by a plurality in excess of 10,000. Buchanan's activity in behalf of the German propaganda and his indictment in that connection at New York were weapons used against him.

Down-State, William J. Graham was returned a winner by about 400 votes the vote is Tavenner 21,552, and Graonly four precincts to be heard from the votte is Tavenner 21,552, and Graham 21,904. A recount probably will be asked for.

In the Peoria district—the Sixteenth—Clifford Ireland, Republican, was elected over Claude U. Stone, Democrat, by an estimated margin of 600 to 1,000 votes.

The Cook County returns, supplemented with incomplete figures from down-State, indicate that McCormick and Mason, the two Republican winners for Congressmen-at-large, ran well along with the Republican Presidential aspirant, William Eliza Williams, Democratic incumbent, went to defeat by 75,000 votes.

NEBRASKA.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 8.—Wilson is constantly increasing his gain over Hughes in Nebraska, and with one-third of the returns received indications are that his majority will run probably to 30,000. The figures received give Wilson 40,188 and Hughes 34,166.

With 25 per cent. of the returns in the Senatorial contest Hitchcock, (Dem.,) has 49,421, and Kennedy, (Rep.,) 41,127. For Governor Neville, (Dem.,) 31,191; Sutton, (Rep.,) 21,650.

With 25 per cent. of the votes received the count on Prohibition indicates that the State-wide prohibition amendment has carried by at least 25,000.

The Congressional delegation remains as formerly, three Democrats against three Republicans, six of the members being re-elected.

MARYLAND.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 8.—Complete returns from all the counties and Baltimore city give Wilson 133,211 votes and Hughes 113,773, a plurality of 19,438 for Wilson. Early returns from the First Congressional District indicated the election of Duer, Republican, over Price, Democratic incumbent, but the unofficial returns give Price a majority of forty-five. Republican Chairman Talt issued a statement tonight that if this is not changed by the official count, a contest will be made on the ground that Worcester County, United States Senator Smith's home, had violated the Election law in issuing one ballot as a sample, and at the last moment substituting another. It is charged that the Democrats were advised of the change but the Republicans kept in ignorance thereof. Worcester County gave Price 375 majority. All county chairmen have been directed to witness the official count.

PRAISE FOR WOMEN VOTERS IN ILLINOIS

Learned How to Mark Ballots in "Schools" and Took Little Time at Polls.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Approximately 800,000 women in the State of Illinois cast their first vote for a President of the United States yesterday. They went to the polls in great numbers, despite the fact that they could not vote for State officers, Congressmen, or many of the local candidates whose contests aroused much interest.

In Chicago 130,051 women voted for Wilson and 135,150 for Hughes. In the country towns of Cook County, of which Chicago is a part, 13,810 women voted for Wilson and 21,952 for Hughes. Complete figures from down-State are not yet available, but the woman vote in the State outside of Chicago and Cook County was in much the same proportion.

"Illinois women voters showed the way to the women of the country by giving Hughes a strong majority of their votes," said Harriet E. Vittum, Illinois representative on the Board of the women's organization of the Hughes Alliance. "With the fate of the two candidates for President still hanging in the balance, we can pause a moment to look over the results in Illinois.

"Nothing could be more gratifying, from my standpoint, than the tremendous weight with which the women of Illinois have stood by the tradition of our State. Illinois women may justly feel proud of their first vote for President. No matter who wins we can never lose."

The returns indicate that in Republican wards the women were more Republican than the men, and that in Democratic bailwicks they exhibited a kindred faithfulness to the dominant party of the neighborhood. The women voted for Wilson and for Hughes generally in the same ratio as the men.

Election officials in Illinois pay a fine tribute to the women for the businesslike way in which they handled the ballot. As a rule they were much faster than the men. Some critics say this was because they voted straight tickets, but this was not borne out by the returns.

In many districts schools of instruction had been maintained for several days. The woman who never voted before went to one of the schools, learned how to mark the ballot and dashed to the polls, where there were long lines of voters waiting for a chance to get in the booths. The women refused to be advanced in the line and took their chances with the men waiting for their turn.

Thumb, Forefinger And Metric Shirts

THE whole trick in Metric Shirts is to turn out the best basic value that each price allows, and then to try to add refinements of finish beyond that price.

For example, every Metric Shirt is soft-laundered, even-stitched, smooth-folded, with collar curved to the neck and easy-to-fasten buttonholes that don't split or saw your finger nails.

"Oxweave" (White Oxford Basketweave) is the best basic value I ever came across at $1.50.

What a Trust Company is not

An individual, no matter how many times he has acted as executor, can hardly be expected to offer the equipment and experience of a Trust Company. The Columbia Trust Company, for example, is——not sick

—not out of town
—not busy with personal affairs
—not tempted to make use of the estate for personal gain
—not without fire and burglar proof vaults
—not wanting in ample financial resources
—not lacking in experience in settling estates.

Individuals seldom have much executorship experience. They have too much other business to attend to. The Columbia Trust Company's experience began years ago—and is added to daily.

As Executor, Davis Was a Failure

Mr. Davis, an executor, concealed the funds of an estate in a mattress. They were stolen during the night. Not giving a clear explanation, Davis was held liable. (Foster vs. Davis, 46 Mo. 268.)

Costly litigation and delay which resulted caused considerable loss to the estate. This is only one of many cases of such unexplained carelessness on the part of individual executors.

When the care of an estate is entrusted to this Company, matters are handled in a thoroughly business like way by experienced Trust Company specialists. There is no room for costly mistakes of judgment. Funds are secure in massive vaults. Systematic book-keeping assures attention to smallest details. Write today for explanatory booklet.

CURB, EXCITED, BETS, HEDGES, BETS AGAIN

Wagers to a Total of $250,000 Made During the Day at Ever-Shifting Odds.

10 TO 8 ON WILSON AT END

Hughes Favorite for a While at 2 to 1, but Prices Fluctuate Till He Is Only a 1 to 3 Choice.

The most exciting day's betting ever held on the Curb occurred yesterday. More than $250,000 was wagered, nearly as much as on Monday, most of that put up yesterday being based on confidential advices from California, Minnesota, and other doubtful States, which were often conflicting and frequently soon reversed. Bet after bet made on "inside information" was "hedged" a little later when fresh statements came by wire.

The odds were the most sensitive ever remembered in connection with betting on the Curb. Hughes and Wilson each changed from favorites to longshots several times during the day. Nearly every telegram or telephone message received on the Street seemed to give the odds a new tilt, and the market on the candidates resembled the ringside betting on a hard-fought prizefight.

It started with Hughes as the favorite at 10 to 8 and quickly went up to Hughes the favorite at 2 to 1. On good news from Minnesota, the Democrats began taking bets, and when the word had got around that Minnesota "looked like Wilson," he went up, point by point, until he became the favorite at 2 to 1, and Republican money became exceedingly scarce, though a few small bets were placed at 3 to 1.

Closes at 10 to 8 on Wilson.

Hughes news from California and more cheerful tidings for Republicans from Minnesota emboldened the Hughes backers to get out their money again, and the odds shifted back to 2 to 1 on Wilson, to 10 to 6, 10 to 7, and then 10 to 8. More telegrams came in to cause a Republican panic and the odds went back to 2 to 1 on Wilson. More guesses from Minnesota and California on what the final returns would be saved the Republicans from demoralization. Toward the close of the day Hughes again got back to even money, but Wilson closed a favorite at 10 to 8.

A profile of the rise and fall of the odds from minute to minute would have zigzagged like a seismograph record of a considerable earthquake. A large part of the betting was due to covering by bettors who feared for the wagers previously laid.

While it is estimated that more than $2,000,000 has been placed in the last week on the Curb through betting commissioners, there will be few big winners and losers, it was reported, because such a large proportion of the bettors have hedged on account of fear, or else deliberately have bet at favorable odds on one and then on the other, in order to clear a profit either way.

The prevalence of hedging resulted in doubling the profits of the betting commissioners, who collect 2 per cent. from both sides on each bet, or a total of 8 per cent. of the sum wagered if both men hedge. If the total money placed on the Curb amounts to $3,000,000 during the campaign, as is estimated, the betting commissioners will clear $120,000.

Large sums are reported to have been bet on the Stock Exchange, but these have been kept secret.

Bets Paid Prematurely.

None of these bets, or of those made by sporting men at hotels and cafés where betting has been lively, have been collected prematurely. A huge sum which could only be guessed at changed hands on Tuesday night between friends, when the early returns led impulsive bettors to pay their wagers immediately.

The New York cafés and restaurants will profit if there is a final reversal of the first assignment of victory to Hughes. It is safe to say that most of the money that changed hands between individuals on Tuesday night was spent over the bar and at restaurants by the supposed winners, and it would appear to be human nature that the final winners, if they get back their own and their opponents' money, will spend it as lightly.

Playing in the greatest luck apparently are the proprietors of the restaurants frequented by German-Americans, who reaped their harvest on Tuesday night and cannot lose, even though it should appear that their patrons were too forward in drinking the health of Hughes.

William A. Brady, the theatrical manager, will probably be the biggest winner on Wilson at long odds, if the President is re-elected. On Tuesday night at 9 o'clock, when the election had been generally conceded to Hughes by newspapers on the early returns, Mr. Brady, who was at the Hotel Astor with a party, said he was still convinced Wilson was a winner and that he would take a bet on Wilson if the odds were long enough.

A wealthy broker offered to bet $25,000 to $1,000 on Hughes. Brady took the offer instantly and checks for the two sums were posted with a broker in the Hotel Astor.

QUEENS IN FORM LOCALLY.

Though for Hughes and Whitman, County Elects Democratic Officers.

With the exception of the Assemblyman in the Fourth District and an Alderman to serve for an unexpired term, the local Democratic ticket won in Queens, although the county, for the first time in fifty years, went Republican in the State and national vote.

The Democrats elected Charles Pope Caldwell for a second term in Congress. Peter A. Daly, Democrat, was elected State Senator. In the First Assembly District Peter A. Leininger, Democrat, was elected; Peter J. McGarry, Democrat, won a fourth term in the Second Assembly District, and William H. O'Hare, Democrat, was elected for a third term in the Third Assembly District. In the Fourth District, where George E. Polhemus, Democrat, was running for a third term, he was defeated by Frank E. Hopkins, Republican.

A hot contest was waged for the Surrogate's office between Daniel Noble, Democrat, who was running for a fourth term, and Thomas F. Doyle, Republican. Noble carried the county by 4,754 plurality.

Hughes carried the county by 2,892 plurality and Whitman by 1,868 plurality. Calder's plurality was more than 3,500. In the fight in the Seventieth Aldermanic District to fill out an unexpired term, George E. Goetz, Republican, defeated Arthur Wenige, Democrat.

San Francisco Votes for Open Shop.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—An amendment to the San Francisco charter, prohibiting picketing, appeared tonight to have been adopted. Complete returns from 644 precincts out of 684 showed 66,743 for the measure and 63,407 against. The amendment was fathered by the Law and Order Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, which raised a fund of $1,000,000 to fight for the "open shop."

STOCKS FLUCTUATE WITH VOTE RETURNS

Steel Common Goes to 126 and Central Leather to 110, Both Record Prices.

NEAR 2,000,000-SHARE DAY

But Close of the Feverish Session Comes with but Slight Net Gains or Losses.

The political sentiments of traders in stocks found play in quick changes of market positions as Hughes appeared to gain in the election returns at one moment and as Wilson's growing strength was indicated the next. A flood of buying orders at the opening, evidently predicated on the early reports of a Hughes victory, carried the leading speculative issues forward from 1 to nearly 3 points, but within a half hour the current swung sharply the other way.

Business all day was transacted on a tremendous scale, the turnover being close to 2,000,000 shares. The professional elment was governed by the fluctuations of betting odds on the Curb and turned from buying operations to short sales, or vice versa, as the trend of wagers reflected the receipt of State returns.

After settling back to positions close to the opening prices at 11 o'clock, stocks were lifted under the biggest surge of the day, with Steel common and Central Leather the centres of trading, both going to new high records. Steel sold up to 126 and Central Leather rose more than 7 points, to 110.

The day's transactions in Steel amounted to 600,000 shares, the largest total for this stock in many weeks. After establishing these records, and lifting the general industrial list substantially, the trend gradually became reversed as betting became fairly stable at 10 on Wilson to 8 on Hughes, and, except for strong spots here and there, prices were weak at the close.

In this table is presented the more prominent issues with comparisons. The railroads, it is seen, were inclined to sag, but selling was not pronounced in any of them.

Feverish was the word to describe conditions in the Street. Bankers, brokers, exporters, and stock traders watched the news tickers constantly. In the first two hours after the Stock Exchange opened more than 100 inquiries about the election were received by telephone at the financial office of THE TIMES, and this pace was maintained during the remainder of the day. Brokerage offices contained greater crowds than any other day this year.

On the Exchange the mass of brokers around the Steel post surged back and forth without cessation, and excitement pervaded the whole floor. Long after the close of business the tickers were surrounded by groups of men who hoped to learn before going home that the contest had been decided.

In London the early reports conceding the election to Hughes were apparently considered of more favorable import than here, as numerous American stocks were bid up to prices higher than the best quotations established on the New York Stock Exchange. This bullish outburst was made known through cables to local arbitrage houses. An explanation of the sharp upturn in London was that cables telling of the true state of affairs in the Presidential contest were delayed until some time after business in stocks had gotten under way.

W. L. WARD HOLDS RULE.

Westchester Republican Boss Says He's Satisfied.

The Republicans in Westchester County had a landslide for the county ticket. Daniel J. Gaskin, re-elected County Clerk, received 14,770 plurality. Lee Parsons Davis, elected District Attorney, had a plurality of 15,068, while County Judge Frank L. Young was re-elected by a plurality of 14,128.

National Committeeman William L. Ward, who is Republican leader in Westchester, said: "It was the biggest Republican victory in the history of the county. It is my firm belief that the final returns throughout the nation will show that Mr. Hughes has been chosen President."

MICHIGAN.

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—Returns from 1,302 precincts out of 2,280 in Michigan give Hughes 221,353, Wilson, 188,136. Detroit, contrary to the hopes of the Democrats, gave Hughes a plurality on the face of the latest returns.

VOTE SELLERS RELEASED.

No Statute to Hold Them, Say Federal Authorities.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—A number of men arrested here by the Federal authorities on election day and who were said to have made confessions that they received money for their ballots were released this evening on instructions from the Department of Justice in Washington. The Government officials decided to free the men because there is no statute governing their case.

They were notified, however, to hold themselves subject to subpoena at any time to appear before the Federal Grand Jury. While there is no Federal law prohibiting the sale of votes, the statutes provide punishment for any one "who conspires willfully and deliberately with others to corruptly influence any election."

The Federal authorities intend to use the men arrested here as Government witnesses against others said to be higher up. It was said the extent and manner of the election frauds here was amazing.

ASK THE TIMES FOR NEWS.

Many Thousand Election Inquiries by Telephone.

The feverish interest in the outcome of the election was apparent last night in the telephone switchboard room of THE NEW YORK TIMES, where requests for information were coming in at times at the rate of thirty a minute.

To all requests the same reply was given—"No results as yet. No further information." The closeness of the Presidential race made it impossible to give out anything definite. Furthermore, the unceasing appeals for news were so clogging THE TIMES wires that it was difficult to get messages in or out on more imperative business. A TIMES reporter tried in vain for thirty minutes last night to reach the office by telephone.

The calls began to come in as early as 6 o'clock yesterday morning, when many New Yorkers awakened to find that the outcome was in doubt. They continued steadily during the afternoon and increased rapidly early in the evening. The greatest rush was from about 8 to 10 o'clock last night. A large percentage of the calls were from women.

LABOR VOTE FAILED TO TURN TO WILSON

Returns Show That Great Industrial Centres Gave Mr. Hughes Best Support.

GOMPERS'S PLEA FUTILE

New York, Chicago, and New Jersey Prove Adamson Law Took No Strength from Republicans.

President Wilson did not receive the united support of organized labor which its leaders promised him, and that feature of the election was much discussed yesterday by politicians of both parties, as well as by officials of trade unions.

The labor vote failed the President in New York, where the Democrats expected its aid to give them a majority of 75,000 or 100,000 in New York City, and a majority in Buffalo. It failed the President in Illinois, which the Democrats had claimed in the hope that the great industrial centre of Chicago, normally Democratic, would give the President a big margin. Instead Hughes carried Chicago and Illinois. The Democrats had based their hopes in Indiana largely on the prospect of a big Democratic labor vote in Indianapolis. In northern New Jersey, where there is a large railroad and general industrial vote, the Democrats had expected the labor vote to help them carry the State; but in Newark, with its great labor population, the Republican majority was larger than normal.

It was in New York City that the returns point to the greatest failure of the force of organized labor to follow the direction of their leaders in supporting Wilson. Practically every labor organization in the city had gone on record in favor of President Wilson, because of the Adamson law and the other humanitarian legislation of his Administration. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, came here on Sunday to urge united support for Wilson.

While, of course, it is impossible to tell just how organized labor voted, an idea may be obtained from a study of the returns for New York City. In the city Wilson got a plurality of about 40,000, whereas it would have been about normal if Wilson had gotten a plurality of 75,000. In New York City organized labor claims from 90,000 to 100,000 voters. It was the statement of labor leaders just before election that this vote was normally equally divided between the Republican and Democratic parties, but that Wilson would get from 80 to 85 per cent. of it. On the face of it, this means that Wilson would get 30,000 labor votes in the city above the party division. But Wilson carried the city by only 40,000, and it cannot be claimed that this 40,000 included 30,000 votes given him by labor, for the reason that labor was bitterly opposed to the re-election of Governor Whitman and was pledged to Seabury. But Seabury carried the city by only 21,000, which is evidence that organized labor did not support the Democratic State ticket to which its leaders had pledged it.

"I cannot understand it," said Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federated Union, last night. "While we can't tell exactly how the working man voted, it seems that at least in this city they did not give the Democratic ticket the help that had been expected."

None of the Democratic leaders wished to comment on the labor vote for publication, but it was generally said that the result was a proof of the truth of the old saying that organized labor is a poor political friend.

The Republicans said that the action of trades unions in the balloting proved the truth of their campaign statements that the labor vote of the country could not be delivered by its leaders.

LONDON CROWDS EAGER FOR ELECTION NEWS

War Situation a Secondary Question in Press, Which Attempts to Explain "the Puzzle."

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 9.—The American elections occupy leading positions in both the news and editorial columns of the London papers this morning, and the war news finds itself crowded into a secondary position for the first time since the outbreak of the war.

The papers devote from one to five columns to what they call the "American election puzzle." Some of the editorials stretch into nearly two columns in an endeavor to explain the whys and wherefores of the dramatic finish to the campaign. In the streets, hotels, and clubs little else but the election was discussed today, and the bulletin boards were scanned by eager crowds in search, not of war communiques, but of the latest election news.

It is evident, as the morning papers point out, that the Presidential contest has been followed with more interest in Great Britain than any since the Republic was founded, and that the man in the street has, as never before, made himself acquainted with the issues involved and with the personalities of the candidates.

The editorials generally emphasize, as they have repeatedly during the last two months, that the election, whatever its issue, is not likely to affect to any marked degree the foreign policy of the United States or its attitude toward the war. Thus The Times, after a painstaking discussion of the views of President Wilson and Mr. Hughes and domestic politics, says:

"But whatever the course of America's domestic politics and whoever her President, we trust and believe that she will continue to give the legitimate support, moral and material, which she has afforded throughout the war."

The Daily News says: "The election of 1916 has clothed itself with characteristics worthy of the historic times in which it has fallen. In its sustained uncertainty it has carried to a fitting climax the alternating vicissitudes of the campaign. One fact remains certain, namely, with the field shared by two candidates of honor and integrity, a President of honor and integrity will necessarily rule at the White House during the next quadrennium as in the past quadrennium."

SUFFRAGISTS ENCOURAGED.

At the headquarters of the National Woman's Campaign Committee of the Republican National Committee Miss Helen Varick Boswell and a few other women were present yesterday, recovering from the reaction after the joy in believing the night before that Hughes had been elected.

"If we have lost it merely means that we must work harder again," said Miss Boswell.

"We have won anyway," said Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, speaking for the suffragists. "We cannot lose. We always make a little progress whatever we do, and now we have South Dakota. As to which man is elected President, it is thumbs up, thumbs down with me. With either man we have to make a fight."

"Both Presidents have come out for us," said Miss Mary Garrett Hay of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party. "We only ask that the other men in the country follow their examples."

"Of either man who wins we only ask that he keeps his promises to us," said Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse of the State Suffrage Party.

MEXICO WATCHES RETURNS.

Crowds in the Capital Excited Over Our Election.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 8.—The excitement over the American election continues here. Crowds thronged the streets watching the bulletin boards. The German colony was enthusiastic over forecasts of a Hughes victory. The foreign diplomats refuse to express any opinion on the election.

Many street speeches were made tonight, the speakers asserting that Wilson has been the friend of Mexico.

Socialists' Man Elected Mayor.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—Thomas Van Lear, who was indorsed by the Socialist Party, was elected Mayor of Minneapolis over Otto C. Langum by a majority of approximately 3,000, according to complete returns today. Both candidates were running on non-partisan tickets.

THE CITY VOTE.

Wilson Led by 40,069, Seabury by 21,462, Calder by 24,049, Dowling by 31,888.

Here are detailed revised figures on the city vote:

WICKERSHAM DEFEATED.

Charles A. Sulzer Elected Delegate to Congress from Alaska.

James Wickersham, Republican, who has been Alaska's Delegate in Congress for many years, was apparently defeated yesterday by Charles A. Sulzer, Democrat. The latest returns show the vote to be very close.

J. Kukio Kalanianaole, a Hawaiian Prince, was re-elected Delegate from Hawaii. He is a Republican.

ELECTION THRILLS HELD BIG CROWDS

Broadway Features Wilson and Hughes for the Second Night.

Its interest whetted by long hours of suspense, and stimulated by the shifts in the returns, New York had a second "election night" after wondering all yesterday who was to be the next President.

Featured by a spontaneous Democratic parade that made Broadway and Fifth Avenue a noisy maelstrom for two hours, the night's events were more thrilling than those following the closing of the polls twenty-four hours before. Craving for some definite advice as to who had been elected President was shown by the crowds that struggled for place before THE NEW YORK TIMES' bulletin boards and stood for hours scanning the latest country-wide results.

Restaurants and cafés, their stocks replenished in haste when it became apparent that there would be a second night's demand for their hospitality, took care of capacity crowds waiting eagerly to get the last minute news.

Compared with the merry-making throngs of the night before, there was a noticeable difference in the temper of the throngs that last night packed the principal streets of every borough. Thousands, unwilling to retire while the result was in doubt, had stayed up most of Tuesday night, only to snatch a nap and hurry to work still in doubt. Those same thousands were on hand ready for another night of celebration, but their nerves were frayed by the growing strain and their dispositions grew fitful as the returns that were governing their emotions.

Among them was no small sprinkling of those who had received the proceeds of election bets during moments Tuesday when the result seemed certain, who had expended the gains in merry making, and who faced the possibility of being called upon to admit defeat and refund their supposed winnings. There were many others who had worried through long periods of disappointment to a moment or an hour of fierce joy that their candidate seemed safely elected at last, only to learn with the flashing of the next batch of returns that defeat once more was held imminently before them. Inevitably there were some who became quarrelsome, particularly among the portion who had turned to liquid stimulation, and the arguments that were to be heard wherever there were two or more persons in a group grew often bitter. There were more men and women on the streets last night; there were less horns and noise-making implements in general.

It was about 8 o'clock when the drift seemed altogether toward President Wilson that "Big Bill" Edwards, former Street Cleaning Commissioner, climbed upon a table in Democratic National Headquarters and shouted that the President's re-election had been established.

HOUSE IN DOUBT, SENATE DEMOCRATIC

Situation in Indiana.

It had been freely predicted that even if Indiana was carried by Mr. Hughes, ex-Congressman James E. Watson, Republican, would be defeated by Senator Thomas Taggart. Another prediction voiced by a considerable number of people was that Harry S. New, Republican, would defeat Senator John W. Kern, the Democratic leader of the Senate, who was a candidate for reelection. New won handsomely, and the returns show that Watson was not cut to any great extent.

The defeat of Senator du Pont in Delaware by J. O. Wolcott, Democrat, was expected. Senator du Pont's defeat is attributed to a factional row in the Republican Party in his State. In Delaware's next door neighbor, Maryland, Representative David J. Lewis, Democrat, was defeated by Dr. J. Erwin France, Republican, and this in the face of the fact that Maryland will cast its electoral vote for President Wilson. Elections in the past twenty years have shown that Maryland is a very conservative State and it is probable that Lewis lost votes in his own party through the fact that he was a strong advocate of Government ownership of public utilities.

While it had been predicted that Senator Clarence D. Clark of Wyoming, Republican, would not be re-elected, there was a feeling that he would pull through. Mr. Clark has been Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

The Democrats suffered a loss in West Virginia through the defeat of Senator Chilton by Representative Sutherland, candidate of the Republicans for Senator. In Utah Senator George Sutherland, Republican, was defeated for reelection by William H. King, Democrat. Utah was regarded as a solid Republican State. It was one of the two States which cast their electoral vote for William H. Taft in 1912. Senator Sutherland is regarded as one of the foremost lawyers of the upper house, whose judgment is greatly in demand when important questions are before that body. King is a Mormon and Sutherland a Gentile. It was reported that the Mormon Church, which has been credited with favoring the Republicans in national elections, decided to take no part in the Senatorial contest.

Doubt had been expressed that Senators Ashurst of Arizona, Reed of Missouri, Myers of Montana, and Pittman of Nevada, all Democrats, would be returned, but all of them were re-elected to the Senate, according to the latest returns.

President Wilson's triumph in Ohio appears to have carried through Senator Pomerene, Democrat. It was supposed until last night that ex-Governor Herrick had won the Senatorial contest in the Buckeye State.

Whether Miss Jeannette Rankin of Missoula, Mont., has been elected to Congress has not been definitely determined. Returns before midnight gave her the election, and in response to an inquiry Miss Rankin telegraphed THE TIMES: "I am elected." Later returns indicated that Miss Rankin had been defeated. Should she win her contest she will be the first woman elected to Congress. Miss Rankin is a Republican.

One of the interesting features of the unusual election held Tuesday is that the vote of National Guardsmen now on the Texas border will determine the Congressional contests in two districts in Western Pennsylvania. Representative William H. Coleman of McKeesport, Republican, was elected by a majority of twenty votes cast in his district, and Representative A. J. Barchfeld, Republican, was defeated by nineteen votes cast in Pittsburgh. Members of Pennsylvania National Guard commands from Pittsburgh voted Tuesday at the places where they were stationed along the border, and the fate of Coleman and Barchfield will not be known until the soldier votes have been officially canvassed.

Representative Frank Buchanan of Illinois, Democrat, who was indicted in New York for alleged complicity in efforts to interfere with the shipment of munitions of war to Europe, has been defeated. Representative Clyde H. Tavenner, Democrat, also of Illinois, who voted against preparedness measures, and made speeches in the House attacking the Navy League, shared Buchanan's fate. The Navy League has charged that these speeches were distributed by the millions throughout the country by Henry Ford, the Detroit automobile manufacturer. The Navy League has sued Mr. Ford for libel for publishing extracts of Tavenner's speeches in newspapers.

W. W. Bailey Defeated.

Another notable pacifist in the House, Warren Worth Bailey of Pennsylvania, also lost his seat. Mr. Bailey is a close friend and supporter of William J. Bryan and was regarded as Mr. Bryan's spokesman in Congress. The defeat of Representative John J. Casey, Democrat, in the Wilkes-Barre district, was a surprise. Casey was strong with the labor element, which usually dominates this district.

William E. Mason, who was at one time a United States Senator, has been elected from Illinois as Congressman at Large. His successful Republican running mate is Medill McCormick, who went over into the Progressive Party with Colonel Roosevelt and returned to the party before the Progressive convention in Chicago.

Until more complete returns began coming in last night it remained a toss up whether the next House of Representatives would be controlled by the Republicans or Democrats. Last night and up to an early hour this morning the reports of the results in Congressional contests indicated that the Republicans would have a majority over the Democrats, but would not have a majority over the Democrats in combination with members of minor parties and representatives of independent movements. Later on the returns indicated that the House would be Democratic and then there was a sudden swing back which at one time showed that the two major parties would be tied with two Socialists, a Progressive, a Protectionist and a Prohibitionist holding the balance of power.

Early Wednesday morning, a dispatch came from Boston that Fuller, Independent, had defeated Representative Ernest W. L. Roberts, Republican, in the Ninth Massachusetts District. Roberts is one of the veteran members of the House and has had little trouble in past contests. Fuller's chances of election were regarded as so slight that his name was not carried on the printed list of candidates for Congress prepared by the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

CITY PRESS COMMENTS ON THE NATION'S VOTE

Newspapers Find Lessons for Both Parties and Candidates in the Balloting.

Taking the election of Mr. Hughes for granted, the New Yorker Herold, under the caption, "A New Spirit Will Enter the White House," said editorially yesterday afternoon:

"The election of Hughes goes far beyond the limits of a mere Republican victory. Any one who wished to size up the result of the Presidential election solely from a narrow party standpoint would overlook the main points that were before the eyes of a majority of the voters yesterday.

"When the complete result of the election is available it will show that the American people have pronounced a sentence of annihilation upon the unneutral and pro-British policy that has had its seat in Washington during the last two years. The Democratic candidate for the Presidency was weighed in the balance by the electorate and found wanting because he had made himself guilty of a great wrong toward the interests of the country by handing American commerce over to the tender mercies of the British. He was found wanting because, instead of being the President of all the people, he had heaped insults upon a part of the nation and had sown the seeds of dissension in the ranks of the population. A President could hardly make himself guilty of greater sins, and it was to be foreseen that the electorate would use its authority to see that the place once occupied by Washington and Lincoln was filled from another quarter.

"Citizens of German origin have no occasion to conceal their satisfaction over the result of the election. They did what they could to bring it about, not because they were of German origin, but because they said that our country, with its mixed population, must finally suffer great damage through a policy of unneutrality and because they did not expect the Government to show favors to Great Britain, or to Germany, or to any other power, but to follow a firm American policy. This is what Hughes promised and this is what brought him the majority of the votes. The German element fought and won this electoral battle, shoulder to shoulder with other Americans. Even though the two years of the war have often brought us, as American citizens, depression and heart burnings, we now think of that without bitterness. Election Day has shown us that the majority of our non-German fellow-citizens want nothing to do with the campaign of malice carried on in Administration circles and in a part of the press against the German citizens.

"Hughes will be the next President. The Herold can point with pride to the fact that it recommended the nomination and election of this man of rare worth already on Dec. 22, 1915. A firm and nonpartisan spirit will enter the White House together with Hughes which contrasts strongly with the one to which we were obliged to accoustom ourselves during the last four years."

In another editorial the Herold admits that President Wilson was a powerful opponent, but it goes on to say that the support lent to Hughes by the German voters was more than enough to counterbalance the votes of the farmers, munition workers, and railroad men who were expected to line up for Wilson.

The New-Yorker Staats-eitung was more cautious in its evening edition, and, without positively asserting that Hughes had been elected, contented itself with pointing out what a brilliant victory the German-Americans had won in New York State.

A New Era in American Politics.

From The New York World.

The old alignment of States which had decided so many Presidential elections had given its electoral votes to Mr. Hughes, and apparently President Wilson was hopelessly beaten.

Then something happened. The West spoke—the West that the Republican campaign managers had contemptuously disregarded.

The West has indeed spoken, and nothing better has happened in a generation than this shifting of the political balance to a section which still maintains the old ideals of the Republic, which is not owned by its pocketbook, and which has never made a god of its bank account. To elect a President without the sordid assistance of New York, and hardly less sordid assistance of Illinois, would be a double triumph. Even to lose the Presidency by a small margin in such circumstances would be a moral victory that Mr. Wilson could always remember with pride. Whether he wins or loses in the final count of the States that will decide the result, his leadership has wrought a mighty political revolution in the United States. The cash register patriotism of New York has been spat upon by a virile American West that is keeping the faith of the fathers.

That in itself is a smashing victory for American democracy, and The World welcomes it as the beginning of a new political era in the United States.

Some Unworthy Phases of a Remarkable Political Contest.

From The New York Herald.

For the partisan, whatever his predilections, there has been ample opportunity for rejoicing at some time since the closing of the polls on Tuesday. Looking back upon the campaign as a whole, however, there is not much to inspire rejoicing in the heart of the American who believes that politics in this country should be kept upon a high plane.

It is for others more directly interested to apportion the responsibility for the "manhandling" Mr. Hughes's campaign received from the start; The Herald contents itself with calling attention to the fact. At a time when earnest work should have been under way some of the shining lights of Republican management were dividing their time between congratulating themselves upon the certainty of victory and striving to find a way to take to themselves all the credit therefor, incidentally excluding from participation in campaign work others whose knowledge and experience should have been gladly welcomed. The results of incompetent Republican management are seen in the returns from States assumed to be "safe."

How much Mr. Hughes was to blame for this condition it is not possible to say.

In Strenuous Times Keep Calm.

From The German Herold.

In such strenuous times it is well to keep calm and not fall into the blunders of the gentlemen at Democratic Headquarters, who conferred with the Attorney General and then announced that they would do something terrible if the Republicans tried to "steal the election." The Republicans are not thinking of any such thing—at least not more than the Democrats.

Above all, we note that even if Mr. Wilson goes into office again by a few votes his victory will not be such that he can pride himself on it. He has as the head of the country a tremendous official body on his side; he has bribed at the last hour the railway unions by the eight-hour day, and has not been very cautious in the choice of his means. If by hook or crook he is again elected it is clear that there can be no talk of enthusiasm for him.

LONG VIGIL FINDS BOTH CONFIDENT

the Democratic national ticket this evening when he reached the Executive Offices to receive the election returns from the States whose records were still incomplete. He authorized the following statement:

"We are now certain of President Wilson's election by a safe majority in the Electoral College. The President is certain of California and Minnesota. Besides these, North Dakota, Kansas, New Mexico, New Hampshire, and West Virginia are ours. The Republicans are not sure of a single State west of the Mississippi, except Iowa, which they have won by a greatly reduced plurality."

He retired at 11 o'clock tonight after learning the results of the balloting in the remaining doubtful States so far as the returns showed. He made no comment.

After a night and a day of anxious watching, the Administration officials settled down at the Executive Offices here for this evening, which they thought would decide whether President Wilson or Charles E. Hughes was to be President of the United States for the next four years. Their confidence of victory has been growing all day.

For Secretary Tumulty and the rest of the White House staff there has been neither sleep nor even momentary rest since the election returns began to come in late yesterday afternoon. Their vigil has been continuous and they are prepared to keep it up tonight and until they learn definitely the final outcome of one of the closest elections the nation ever has had.

President Wilson, too, received such significant returns as appeared during the early part of the evening, but he was outwardly the least disturbed of the interested persons here. All through the trying test of the last day and night he has been as calm and unruffled as though he had nothing personal at stake.

It is certain that none of the officials and newspaper correspondents who gathered in the Executive offices last night will ever forget the experience. For dramatic intensity it would be hard to equal the period from 8 o'clock last evening, when the overwhelming Hughes pluralities in the Eastern States made the President's defeat seem inevitable, till sunrise this morning, when the States west of the Mississippi had gradually piled up their Wilson votes until they threatened to overturn Hughes's early lead.

All through this Secretary Tumulty never once admitted the defeat of his chief, even at the darkest moment, that about 10 o'clock Tuesday night, when it was manifest that Illinois and New York, with New England and New Jersey, had rolled up Hughes majorities that totaled hundreds of thousands. It is doubtful whether he or any of the other men in the office had any theory which gave them real confidence in the face of such stunning odds, except that they refused to believe that the President could receive such a humiliating rebuke.

With Chairman Vance McCormick they stood pat on their predictions of victory. In the midst of the reports that Hughes's election was being flashed from all the towers in New York, their confidence began to gain some slight foundation. Very feeble it was at first—a hint here and there that Kansas or Utah was showing unexpected Democratic strength, but it served to lighten the gloom a trifle. The anxious but undismayed watchers began to study their tables of electoral votes to see whether all hope was gone. Checking off here and there a State which it seemed possible to save from the wreckage, they formulated a scheme of electoral votes which would still elect the President, and, to their growing delight, the returns began to fit into their schedule.

By 2 o'clock in the morning, when the first meagre returns from the Far West were beginning to come in, Secretary Tumulty began confidently to predict an overturn and the whole atmosphere of the offices was changed. The feeling of suppressed excitement grew as it became certain that a number of normally Republican States had been carried by the President, and all thought of sleep was forgotten. The corridor was filled with a stream of messenger boys flowing steadily to and from the telegraph operators with bulletins. It was not until long after sunrise that any member of the staff consented to leave the building long enough even to get a bite of breakfast.

All day today Secretary Tumulty and his assistants have remained at their posts, receiving and analyzing the returns from the critical States in the Far West which must give the final decision. The Secretary has kept in close touch with Democratic Headquarters in New York, and the confidential reports which they have exchanged have put him in an optimistic mood tonight. He looks weary about the eyes from lack of sleep, but insists that he can't take any time off until he knows the verdict.

The President himself retired early last night, and consequently missed the remarkable turn to the better which his cause made shortly after midnight. Like a great many other citizens, he went to sleep last night with little encouraging news on which to base his hopes for re-election. Secretary Tumulty called him on the telephone early this morning and told him the good news which had replaced the early reports of a country-wide Republican landslide, and the President expressed his pleasure.

The President played golf this morning with Mrs. Wilson. Although several encouraging bulletins came in his absence, no attempt was made to inform him of them. The President has requested particularly that only information that was really significant and decisive should be telephoned to him, so that he might be spared the waste of time necessary to attempt to analyze conflicting and inconclusive telegrams. He spent this afternoon at work in his study in Shadow Lawn, where he was kept informed of tonight's developments.

While driving along the roads with Mrs. Wilson this morning the President was greeted by many persons who congratulated him on what they regarded as his certain victory. At several places he was cheered by pedestrians who recognized him. The President remains as serenely confident of his election as ever, and unquestionably believes, with his advisors, that the States remaining doubtful this evening will return him to office with a substantial majority.

Secretary Tumulty and the Executive Staff were so tired after their long vigil that they closed the offices at midnight and went to bed. They had decided it would be impossible to get complete returns from California and Minnesota tonight.

Hope of carrying West Virginia was further spurred today by the receipt of a telegram from Senator Chilton of West Virginia addressed to the President, which read as follows:

"I did not want to wire you until I had something definite. I congratulate you from the bottom of my heart and rejoice with the country that we are still going forward and not turning back. You carry West Virginia and we will guard it and see that you get it. We elect our State ticket, a Legislature, and will have certainly three and possibly five members of Congress out of the six. I am elected by a safe majority, and I owe it to your splendid Administration."

The offices were flooded with telegrams today, congratulating the President in advance on the victory which all his advisers here regard as assured.

The offices here are buzzing with anticipation of the final decision. A telegram was received late this afternoon from J. Harvey McCarthy, a California Progressive, saying that Earls Express, a Republican paper published in San Francisco, would predict that Wilson would carry California.

Whether he is re-elected or not, President Wilson will leave here tomorrow afternoon for Williamstown, Mass., where he will attend the christening of his grandchild, the second child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bowes Sayre. With Mrs. Wilson he will motor to Atlantic Highlands, where they will board the Presidential yacht Mayflower and steam to Rhinecliff on the Hudson. They will take a train there for Williamstown at 10 o'clock on Friday morning.

TREACHERY CHARGES FIND MURPHY MUTE

Leader Refuses to Comment on New York City's Failure to Support President Wilson.

WILSON MEN THREATEN

May Take Revenge in Next City Election—District Leaders Put Blame on Hyphen Issue.

No explanation came from Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy yesterday regarding the light Democratic vote cast in the city on Tuesday. The Tammany Chief remained in seclusion all day and made no answer to the charge that the organization had "knifed" the President and had confined its attention principally to electing its local candidates. When asked if there was to be any comment upon the election, Secretary Thomas F. Smith said:

"If there is any statement to be made on the results in the city, it will have to come from Mr. Murphy."

But Mr. Murphy did not appear at Tammany Hall and neither did any of his lieutenants.

Tammany district leaders, however, hotly resented the charge of disloyalty. They said the small vote was due principally to the fact that the German-Americans and Irish-Americans did not support the ticket. These voters, the leaders said, did not like President Wilson, and nothing could make them vote for him. But this explanation did not allay the resentment of the President's friends, who expected that the organization would do its duty.

The 40,000 plurality in the city for the Democratic Presidential candidate, it was pointed out, did not represent all the shortcomings of the organization, for about 15,000 voters did not properly belong to Tammany, but represented elements favorable to President Wilson but not to Tammany. The Tammany plurality, it was stated, could not be computed at any more than 25,000. Many Democrats threatened to "get even" with Murphy next Fall for what they termed his treachery.

"It was Murphy's turn this year to show his resentment," said a prominent independent Democrat, "but our turn will come next year. Let Murphy look out then."

The Tammany leaders who showed more interest in the fate of their local candidates than they did in the President's fortunes received cold chills yesterday when it looked for a time as if John F. McIntyre had been defeated for Judge of General Sessions. McIntyre barely got through. Frank L. Dowling, who ran against Henry H. Curran for President of the Board of Aldermen received the largest plurality of any of the Tammany candidates. William F. McCombs, candidate for United States Senator, was beaten in the city by his opponent, William M. Calder.

One Tammany leader made this explanation of the unsatisfactory Democratic vote:

"Tammany is not to blame. President Wilson has offended a great many voters, ordinarily Democratic, in the city and they simply could not be driven to the polls to cast their ballots for his re-election. This is a city with a large foreign-born population, among whom are Germans, Austrians and Irish, and in a world crisis like that of the last two years it was essential to party welfare, and particularly to the welfare of the Democratic party candidates, that the sensibilities of these foreign-born folks be tenderly regarded.

"The hyphen issue should never have been emphasized. When President Wilson sent that stinging telegram to Jeremiah O'Leary, he perhaps treated O'Leary properly, but he incurred the resentment of a lot of men with Irish names. These men thought that O'Leary had been picked out for castigation because his name stood out as that of an Irish-American, and necessarily that of a so-called hyphenate.

"When the complete returns are available it will be seen that Mr. Wilson has suffered a similar loss of Democratic votes in Hudson County, N. J., which for years has been a Democratic stronghold because of the votes of foreign-born Teutons and Irishmen, who are naturalized Americans. President Wilson may have gratified many native-born Americans who resented O'Leary's activities when he rebuked the anti-British agitator, but he did not help himself among thousands of Democratic voters whose clannish sentiments moved them to bitter resentment toward the man who offends their natural sympathies.

"Tammany didn't knife Wilson. It was simply impossible for the organization to get out the vote for him or to hold Democratic voters in this city in line for the President. As to Mr. McCombs, he was a comparatively unknown man running against a man who has been electioneering for the United States Senate for years. He is personally known to thousands of voters. McCombs is well known to the organization leaders as the National Chairman of four years ago, but the rank and file did not know him.

"The charge of organization treachery may lie more justly as regards Judge Seabury. From the popular Democratic point of view there was nothing against Seabury and everything in his favor, but he had brought down upon himself the ill-feeling of Mr. Murphy because of the candidate's too vigorous resentment of stories of a personal intimacy with Murphy, based on their having been photographed together while chatting with friends in a motoring-golfing group. He had also the ill-feeling of W. R. Hearst and the hostility of the Hearst newspapers. Tammany, in my opinion, can only be called to account for the deficiency in Seabury's vote, and Hearst's attacks are responsible for a great deal of that deficiency."

Another Tammany leader said that Murphy was deceived as to the city's vote. This leader said that Murphy really wanted a big vote for Wilson in the city because of the effect it would have upon the Mayoralty election next year, but that the President's unpopularity with the rank and file of the organization because of his attitude toward Tammany could not be overcome.

PRAISE FOR WOMEN VOTERS.

Suffragists Here Proud of Independence Shown in Franchise States

Without waiting to decide which party had won in Tuesday's election, a number of women who have been active in the campaign and have been ardent advocates of suffrage tried yesterday to analyze the vote of the new women voters of the West. The reports indicated that the Chicago women had divided their support in about the same ratio as the men, 130,051 voting for Wilson, 135,150 for Hughes, and 6,684 for Benson. Complete figures from other places in which women were casting their first Presidential election votes were not yet available, but it was reported that in California also they had divided in about the same manner as the men.

Miss Alice Carpenter summed up the opinions that were expressed on the question of how they voted.

"They voted according to their own individual ideas, just as most of the men did," Miss Carpenter said. "The fact that they did not vote as a group shows positively that the women's vote cannot be 'delivered.' I think that the rest of the election results received thus far show that it is futile to expect to deliver any group vote in this enlightened day. The industrial centres seem to have gone for Hughes, and the women, who, many said, would vote for Wilson on the ground that 'he kept us out of war,' voted for whomever they chose."

REPUBLICANS GAIN MORE LEGISLATORS

Two-thirds Majority in Both Houses Can Override Governor's Veto.

Revised returns show that the next Senate in this State will be composed of 37 Republicans and 14 Democrats, more than a two-thirds majority for the Republicans and a gain of three seats for the Republicans over their representation in the present Senate.

In the Assembly there will be 101 Republican members, 48 Democrats, and 1 Socialist, A. I. Shiplacoff, who was re-elected from the Twenty-third Assembly District in Kings. This is a gain for the Republicans of three seats, of which two were lost by the Democrats and one by the Progressives.

Tuesday evening's returns showed H. A. Cotillo, Democrat, elected to the Senate from the Twentieth District, which is part of Manhattan. Later returns reversed the result in this district and showed that J. Steinberg, the Republican member, had been elected.

In the Assembly more complete returns than could be obtained on Tuesday night made several changes in the membership as listed in THE TIMES.

In the Fourth District of Kings, P. A. McArdle, the Democratic candidate, has been re-elected over S. A. Weiss, the Republican.

In the Sixteenth District of Kings C. Joseph, the present Democratic incumbent was re-elected over S. R. Green, the Republican candidate.

In the Twenty-first New York District H. C. Mitchell, the Republican candidate, won over J. F. Wilson, the Democratic nominee, who had a majority on the early returns.

In the Thirteenth New York District, T. F. Gould, the Democratic nominee, showed up a winner in the revised returns over Nathan Meyer, the Republican candidate, who seemed to have won from the latest returns obtainable on Tuesday night.

Sullivan County will send Seymour Merritt, the Republican nominee, and not W. B. Voorhees, the Republican candidate, to the Capitol.

In the Second Assembly District of Ulster County Assemblyman J. P. Le Fevre, who was a candidate for re-election, on complete returns was found to have been defeated by J. B. Palmer, the Democratic candidate.

The re-election of Speaker Sweet makes it certain that he again will be a candidate for the Speakership. Assemblyman Simon L. Adler of Monroe, who was floor leader in the present Assembly, has been re-elected, and in all likelihood will be retained in that position, while Assemblyman J. M. Calla of the Bronx, who was re-elected, will continue as minority leader of the next Assembly.

In the Senate some Republicans look for a contest between Senator George F. Argetsinger of Monroe, who was re-elected, and is Chairman for the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee, and Senator Elon R. Brown of Jefferson, the present Temporary President of the Senate, also re-elected, for that position of honor and influence. Senator Robert F. Wagner of this city will be leader of the Democratic minority in the next Senate, a position he filled at the legislative session this year.

NO COUNT OF MILITIA VOTE.

Ballots Are Being Taken to Albany for Tabulation.

Special to The New York Times.

McALLEN, Texas, Nov. 8.—No official count of the ballots cast by the troops of the New York Division could be obtained here today because Henry G. Adams, head of the Election Bureau, who came here to conduct the voting, was unable to tabulate the vote cast by the hundred and more companies. Failure to add the count of the ballot was due to the action of the First Cavalry and the Twenty-third and Seventy-fourth Infantry Regiments in sending their ballot boxes and poll books direct to the Secretary of State.

After waiting until this morning to received the boxes from the three regiments, Mr. Adams sealed the other votes up and started for Albany. The Election Bureau has the numbers of the boxes sealed by Mr. Adams, as well as those closed up and sent independently by the three regiments, and it is not likely that any of the votes will be lost on the way. Many officers and other voters have expressed the opinion that the methods of conducting the election were lax and that the system of checking the number of votes wit hthe poll books was inadequate.

Efforts to get an estimate of the vote failed because the troops were scattered in twenty-five camps over 100 miles of territory. In addition there were almost 125 polling places, since every company, troop, and battery and even smaller units had a separate ballot box. It is believed, however, that the vote was about 5,000, and that the trend will be Republican.

BOTH CANDIDATES GOT HYPHEN VOTE

Returns Indicate German-Americans Were Very Nearly Evenly Divided.

VIERECK BLAMES ROOSEVELT

Jews Censure Tammany for Wilson's Small Plurality in the City.

The German-American vote, which cut such a large figure in the campaign, disappeared on election day. The centres of German-American population, with the exception of Cincinnati, cast their votes against Hughes, who was almost the unanimous choice of the German-language press.

Hughes lost Milwaukee; he lost St. Louis. He carried Cincinnati, but by far less than its normal Republican plurality. There was evidence that Wilson had been knifed by German-American Democrats in some of the districts of Hoboken, but this was hardly perceptible in the State returns. The Democratic vote slumped in all parts of this city, but the slump was but little more pronounced in Queens and in districts in Manhattan where men of German birth or ancestry are numerous.

A close analysis of the vote, precinct by precinct, in German-American districts, may make it appear that ballots were cast now and then to punish Wilson for not favoring an embargo on munitions, but a survey of the returns by States fails to disclose where the hyphenate vote threw a single electoral vote to Hughes. Either there was no hyphen vote or it was canceled or more than canceled in its own territory by anti-hyphen votes.

Wilson had less than the normal Democratic pluralities, but he ran well ahead of Hughes in all but two of the Manhattan Congressional districts, where an active campaign was made by German-Americans. Generally speaking, the President did about as well in the district where the German influence was strong as in the other districts. In the Congressional districts in which the German-American newspapers and propagandists made their principal campaign in this city Wilson received a total of 50,495, against 39,160 for Hughes. These districts were the Third, Fourth, Thirteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second, and Twenty-third. In the Twentieth, for instance, where German-American influence was so strong that Isaac Siegel, the Republican incumbent, made a campaign partly on the issue that he had favored the McLemore resolution while his Democratic opponent, Rosenblatt, carefully considered German-American susceptibilities, President Wilson got a large plurality, his vote being 3,876, to 2,872 for Hughes.

Different explanations of this were offered by German-American leaders yesterday, but the leading one was that Hughes in the latter part of his campaign had failed to measure up to German-American expectations in his own speeches and had been much injured with that element by the association of Colonel Roosevelt with his campaign.

George Sylvester Viereck, editor of "The Fatherland, said yesterday that a careful analysis of the results showed him that both candidates had been rebuked and disowned by the German-Americans. Viereck, who opposed Wilson bitterly, did not support Hughes through the campaign. He and his followers took the position that the Republican candidate's indorsement of Colonel Roosevelt and some of his utterances as to foreign policy showed him to be as unsympathetic to German-American sensibilities as President Wilson.

Mr. Viereck said that certain other influences counted in the Middle West, principally the support of the German-American brewers in Milwaukee and St. Louis and the German anti-Prohibitionist element, who had constructed a theory from some of the utterances of President Wilson that he was an ardent advocate of personal liberty and would not suffer any Federal agency to be used in furtherance of the crusade of the "drys."

In its official interpretation of the election The Fatherland will say this week:

"There would have been a landslide for Mr. Hughes on the strength of his Philadelphia declaration for the enforcement of all American rights if Mr. Hughes had repudiated Theodore Roosevelt. A large proportion of the electorate was firmly convinced that Theodore Roosevelt was as much a candidate as Charles Evans Hughes. To them a vote for Wilson was a vote against Roosevelt. If Mr. Hughes is defeated he owes his defeat to the Colonel.

Claims Victory Either Way.

"It is too early to analyse the local returns in the various States, but judging from present appearances the election has been a triumph for Americanism in every State of the Union. Incidentally, it has been a triumph for German-Americans. If Mr. Wilson is defeated, the hyphen is the hatchet that has decapitated his hopes. If Mr. Hughes is defeated he is defeated because he permitted his Machiavellian adviser, Theodore Roosevelt, to drive the German-American vote into the Wilson camp. It is highly significant that a Presidential election is left in doubt at a time when the German-American element is in unrest. To deny a connection between the events is to repudiate logic."

The German-American blacklist on Congressmen who had voted against the McLemore resolution or similar measures and the indorsement of those whose record was approved gave the hyphen no ground for claiming to be a political power in this city. The strongest favorite of all with the German-Americans was William S. Bennet. His election the last time he ran was considered a glorious victory by the German-Americans because he asked for votes on the straight issue that a vote for him was a vote in repudiation of the Wilson administration. His failure at this election was a blow. Many of the candidates for Congress who were considered sure of winning before they started bore the German-American indorsement, but there are no clear indications that any were particularly benefited by this stamp of approval. Martin Ansorge, who sent out a notice to the voters of his district that he favored an embargo on munitions and who wore every German-American indorsement, was defeated by Congressman G. M. Hurlburt, who voted to table the German-American resolution.

The returns gave some surface indications that there had been success in the strong campaign for Wilson which has been made among the Jewish voters, who number 150,000, according to Herman Bernstein, editor of The American Hebrew. Mr. Bernstein thinks that they voted four to one for President Wilson. The Jewish daily, the Warheit, yesterday said that the Jewish vote had been five to one for Wilson. The best indication that the Jewish vote went for the President was contained in the returns from the Twelfth Congressional District, where the proportion of Jewish voters is said to be heaviest. Although Meyer London, the Socialist, was returned to Congress from this district, Benson received only a small vote. Wilson received 8,704 for President, against 1,769 for Hughes. The fact that the Jewish vote failed to bring the plurality for the President in Manhattan to a greater figure was generally blamed by Jewish leaders upon Tammany.

WHITMAN CARRIED TICKET.

Republicans Retain State Offices—Hiscock and Pound Judges.

With Governor Whitman the entire Republican State ticket was elected with substantial pluralities. Edward Schoeneck of Syracuse was re-elected Lieutenant Governor, Francis M. Hugo of Watertown, Secretary of State; Eugene M. Travis of Kings, State Controller; James M. Wells of the Bronx, State Treasurer; E. E. Woodbury of Jamestown, Attorney General; Frank M. Williams of Goshen, State Engineer and Surveyor.

Few figures for the minor State officials from the up-State counties have been compiled. In the city vote James L. Wells, Republican, who was re-elected Treasurer, ran well ahead of his ticket, defeating Cohen, the Democratic candidate, by 22,611. Kreuser, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, led Schoeneck by 22,841. Stage, the Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, led Hugo by only 1,445, and Masters, the Democratic candidate for Controller, led Travis by 4,905.

Frank H. Hiscock was elected Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals with a plurality over Justice Almeh F. Jenks estimated about 100,000. Westchester County gave Hiscock a plurality of over 11,000 in a vote of 29,642 for Hiscock to 18,000 for Jenks. Orleans County went for Hiscock by 2,749, Ontario by 3,923. St. Lawrence gave him a plurality of over 7,200 and in Schenectady his plurality is estimated at over 7,700. Jenks carried Oswego County by the close margin of 80 votes, giving Jenks 6,108 and Hiscock 6,028, according to the latest returns. Hiscock carried Albany County by over 1,200.

CLOSENESS OF VOTE A REMINDER OF 1876

Hayes-Tilden Contest Recalled by the Long Uncertainty Over This Election.

A 4-MONTH QUARREL THEN

The Cleveland-Blaine Race, Also Historic, Was Won by a Narrow Margin in New York.

Close national elections always recall the historic contest of 1876, when Rutherford B. Hayes, Republican, was declared elected President by a margin of one electoral vote over Samuel J. Tilden, Democrat, almost four months after the election. On election night in November, 1876, Tilden's election was announced in the first editions of all the newspapers, and at 1:30 o'clock was conceded by the Republican leaders. THE NEW YORK TIMES was the only newspaper to announce the election of Hayes in its last edition of the morning after Election Day.

The other memorable instance of close national elections was in 1884, when it was not known until Friday after Election Day whether Grover Cleveland or James G. Blaine had been chosen President, and then the contest was decided in New York State by a margin of 1,100 votes. It was at this election that John Y. McKane, the Democratic boss of Coney Island, who later went to Sing Sing for over-zealous political activity, gave the Cleveland ticket a plurality in Gravesend that exceeded by 2,000 the total number of men, women, and children in the town, which was 5,000.

The contest of 1876 which brought wholesale charges of fraud, gun-play, intimidation and murder, some of which were almost proved, started on election night when it became apparent on the returns not to be doubted that Tilden had 184 electoral votes and Hayes 165, with twenty votes doubtful. One hundred and eighty-five were necessary for a choice. The twenty doubtful votes were distributed in Oregon, Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina.

By sun-up of the next morning both Republicans and Democrats started after those twenty votes. If the Republicans got them all it meant that Hayes would be elected by a margin of one electoral vote.

The heat of the contest was in the South, and particularly in Louisiana. In that State the Democratic electoral candidates received a majority of the votes cast, on the face of the returns, but Republican returning boards alleged that the Democrats had used shotguns to terrify negroes, who would have voted the Republican ticket, had practiced other irregularities, and accordingly, to even matters up, they threw out enough Democratic votes to make it appear that the Republican electors were chosen.

In South Carolina, the Republicans had the electors on the face of the returns, but the Democrats charged fraud and started a contest, the ballot boxes being guarded by troops. In Florida both sides laid claim to victory and the claims were so bemuddled that it seemed impossible to make any decision without another election. In Oregon, the Republicans appeared to have carried the State, but the Democrats claimed that inasmuch as one of the Republican candidates was a Postmaster at the time the Republican ticket was illegal.

For a month conflicting claims and accusations flew through the contested Southern States. Delegations of Republicans from the North went down to see fair play and received a welcome from the Democrats that was not cordial. Tilden was accused of having been responsible for the shipment of arms and ammunition to the Democratic politicians in Louisiana.

Congress met Dec. 1. The Constitution said that in case of a contest "the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and the House of Representatives, open all certificates, and the votes shall then be counted." The Senate was Republican and many influential Republicans declared that the Constitution gave the Republican President of the Senate the right to count the votes. The Democrats asserted just as positively that no count would go unless the House, which was Democratic, participated.

Finally a joint committee decided upon a bill providing that the conflicting returns be submitted to an electoral commission of fifteen, composed of five Representatives, five Senators, and five members of the Supreme Court. There was an important clause in the bill which said that the finding of the commission was to stand unless rejected by "separate vote of both houses."

The Senate, being Republican, named three Republicans—Edmunds, Morton, and Frelinghuysen—and two Democrats—Thurman and Bayard; the House, being Democratic, named three Democrats—Payne, Hunton, and Abbott—and two Republicans—Garfield and Hoar. Two Democratic Justices—Clifford and Field—and two Republicans—Strong and Miller—were named, and to them was intrusted the selection of a fifth and final member of the commission. They chose Justice David Davis, but he refused to serve, and Justice J. P. Bradley was then named, he being supposedly an independent.

When the disputed votes of the four States were submitted to the commission, it voted every time, eight to seven, in favor of the Republicans, the vote being on straight party lines, with Bradley lined up with the Republicans. The Democratic House rejected the Commission's findings, and the Republican Senate confirmed them. Therefore, all of the twenty disputed electoral votes were given to Hayes and on March 2, 1877, nearly four months after election day, Hayes was declared to have been chosen as President by the people of the United States. The Commission was bitterly criticised, but that did not change the election and Hayes was inaugurated on March 4, 1877.

There will never, in all probability, be a repetition of the 1876 contest, for in 1887 Congress passed a law providing that each State should designate a tribunal to settle any contest over electoral votes, and that, unless such tribunal or both houses of the State Legislature should reach a decision, the vote of the State concerned should be disregarded.

The dispute of 1884 on Election night simmered down to New York. The newspapers of the next morning gave Cleveland a plurality of 10,000 in the State. Each morning it was reduced by more complete returns until on Friday it seemed pretty well established that Cleveland had carried the State by slightly more than 1,000 votes. But the Republican leaders refused to concede the State until eleven days after election day, when the final canvass of the New York County vote showed Cleveland had carried the State by 1,100 votes.

THE abiding allure of the deftly arranged room, whether it be the drawing room of some noble English Castle, the Salon of a Chateau of old Touraine, or the Morning Room of today, rests rather on its general manner than on its individual Furniture.

¶ The forthright advantage of the Hampton Shops is just in this, that here can be found not only the Furniture—the famed Hampton reproductions or the imported masterpieces meticulously selected from the leading European workshops and such minor matters as glowing Porcelains, curiously wrought metal work, embroidered cushions and harmonious hangings—but also the ripened knowledge and life-long experience which will suggest the manner in which these may be so gathered and disposed as to form that haven of good taste, the Hampton Room.

ROFRANO CASE TO GO TO JURY SATURDAY

Defense Closes Its Evidence and Counsel Are to Begin Summing Up Today.

STATE WITHHOLDS WITNESS

Chauffeur Who Was Expected to Tell of Murder Conferences Fails to Take the Stand.

Counsel in the trial of Michael A. Rofrano, accused as chief plotter in the murder of Michael Gaimari, probably will begin summing up today and give the case to the jury on Saturday. Martin W. Littleton closed the evidence for the defense yesterday, after calling additional character witnesses, among them Arthur Brisbane, the editor. Assistant District Attorney Brothers had not quite finished his evidence in rebuttal at recess, but told Justice Bartow S. Weeks that he did not expect to take more than a half hour longer this morning.

Mr. Brothers walked away when a reporter tried to ask him about the "disinterested" witness said to be held in reserve by the State. The witness, said to be James Knox, a chauffeur, was expected to testify that he had driven Rofrano to the home of Joseph Brundini in Brooklyn on one of the days when murder conferences are alleged to have been held. Knox was in the office of the District Attorney yesterday, but did not appear in the court room. There is still time, however, for him to be called as a witness, and if his testimony is what has been predicted, it will, according to the State, establish the much desired connecting link between the defendant and Brundini, his co-defendant. It will also, in the view of the prosecution, identify him definitely with the muredr conferences.

Friends of Rofrano were jubilant when Mr. Brothers failed to call Knox to the stand yesterday, asserting that it indicated that the chauffeur's story had not come up to expectations.

One of those who testified for the prosecution yesterday was ex-District Attorney Charles E. Perkins. It was in his term of office that Michael Gaimari was killed, and it was upon Mr. Perkins that Rofrano called when he heard that he was accused in connection with the murder. Mr. Perkins admitted that Rofrano had called upon him as the latter had asserted from the witness chair, and had begged to be permitted to go before the Grand Jury.

"He told me that he had nothing to do with the murder, and that Gaimari had been killed in a gambling feud," said Mr. Perkins.

Mr. Brothers also called two policemen in connection with the escape from prison of Salvatore Curica, "the man of many lies," as he has come to be known in the case. It had been the contention of the State that Curica had been assisted in making his escape, so that he could repudiate a statement made by him to Mr. Brothers involving Rofrano in the murder. Curica, after repudiating the statement in Newark, returned to the Fifty-third Street prison.

The purpose of calling the two policemen was to prove that Curica had not returned alone, as he had testified, but that he was accompanied by three men who were in sympathy with Rofrano. One of these so-called friends of Curica and Rofrano was called into the court room, but the policemen disappointed the Assistant District Attorney by their failure properly to connect him with Curica's return.

The policemen admitted that they had seen an automobile with four men drive up to the Fifty-third Street prison on the night in question, but neither identified Curica as the man they had seen going into the prison.

Before resting the case for the defense Mr. Littleton called Magistrate Freschi to the stand to deny testimony given early in the trial by Joseph La Salle, one of the gunmen who had testified against Rofrano. La Salle told of having been present at a dinner when Rofrano urged those present to help him work against Gaimari, his alleged political adversary in the Second Assembly District. The gunman testified that Magistrate Freschi had been at the dinner, but the latter emphatically denied this yesterday.

Children's Aid Society Sees Good in the "Blockade of Immigration."

Only three children of the 7,000 boys and girls in the industrial schools of the Children's Aid Society suffered from infantile paralysis during the epidemic, it was announced in the annual report issued yesterday by the society. The teaching staffs attribute the general good health of the children to the schools' sanitary and wholesome condition. In the report of the society, which this year covers the period of its work for nine months only, due to the recent law requiring fiscal reports of charitable institutions to be made on June 30, annually, Secretary Brace makes this reference to the educational work:

"We are encouraged in our fight against inefficiency and ignorance because we feel that the immigrants are really being educated through their children. If the uplift forces in New York could count on a continuance of the present blockade of immigration, the worst of the evils of poverty could undoubtedly be ended in a few years."

The care of the individual child is being more highly developed by the society each year, it is announced. In connection with the educational work the children are materially benefited through the health home, Summer home and camp for boys.

During the nine months 296 orphans and deserted children were placed in family homes, and 3,436 children in families were under the supervision of the society.

BOTH SIDES READY TO FILE CONTESTS

Fairfield County, was the only large city of the State carried by the Republicans. The voting here was registered by machines. The Democratic leaders do not allege that there was anything wrong in the voting or in the returns, but demand a retabulation as a matter of verification of the count, in view of the fact that Wilson carried all the other cities of the State.

Chairman McCormick at 1:30 o'clock this morning issued the following statement in reply to one issued by Chairman Willcox:

"President Wilson was re-elected, and Mr. Willcox showed that he is aware of that fact. His wail in reply to some imaginary person that some one expects Mr. Hughes or his managers will try to secure the election through fraud is worthy of the best traditions of the Republican Party. The public has had a chance to judge the conduct of the campaign of the two candidates, and I am perfectly willing to let the people decide which side will resort to desperate methods."

Chairman McCormick, who was at National headquarters for twenty-four hours with only an hour's sleep said last night that there had never been a doubt in his mind that President Wilson would win. He said he did not think it would be necessary for him even to change his original estimate of the electoral vote given on Tuesday night. The President was sure of 288 electoral votes, he said, and he thought it might go as high as 304.

"I haven't changed the claim of 288 I made Tuesday night and all day today," said Chairman McCormick, "and the returns are still coming in."

"But Chairman Willcox of the Republican National Committee claims 278 votes for Mr. Hughes," Mr. McCormick was told.

"That's rot," said the Democratic Chairman. "California is safe and President Wilson will get New Hampshire and West Virginia. Both State Chairmen in those States confirm this. We have got New Mexico and also North Dakota."

"How about Oregon?"

"That State is very close, but Wilson has a good chance of carrying it. I just received a telegram from there saying that one section which is normally Republican has been turned completely over."

"Have you anything to say about the vote in New York State?" Chairman McCormick was asked.

"No," said the Chairman, as his smile disappeared. "I haven't had time to analyze the returns yet, as I have been devoting all my time to the Western States. Neither have I had any time to study the result in New York City."

The National Chairman put on a stern look as he reflected upon Tammany's small vote.

Mr. McCormick was asked if the vote of the soldiers now on the border would have any effect on the result in Minnesota.

"I don't think so," he said, "but I can't tell. I think the last returns show that we will carry the State, no matter what the soldier vote should be."

Will you demand a recount in any of the close States?"

"It is a little early to say just what we shall do about that," was the reply. "We shall wait until the official canvass is made, of course. The vote in New Hampshire is very close, our last estimate of the plurality being only 152. It may be that a recount there will be necessary."

"Have you taken any steps to prepare for a contest?"

"Certainly. We have got into touch with all persons connected with our organization and authorized them to obtain counsel and see that we get a square count. We are carefully watching every place where anything unusual might occur."

The Chairman said the last reports showed Indiana to be close, but he said the Democrats did not claim it. He said he had kept President Wilson advised over the telephone all day as to developments and had told him that he was re-elected.

The Democrats at National Headquarters made up yesterday in their enthusiasm for their gloom of Tuesday night when the early returns showed Hughes to be leading. About 100 sleepy enthusiasts who did not leave headquarters at all Tuesday night were joined by several hundred more during the day, and every bulletin chalked up on the big blackboard in the room adjoining Chairman McCormick's private office was greeted with a yell that could be heard a block away. At 6 o'clock yesterday morning, when it was announced that the President had certainly been elected, the Chairman was lifted bodily upon a table and forced to make a speech.

"I congratulate the country on the election of Wilson," he said. "The members of the National Committee and the staff which assisted the Committee during the campaign deserve the greatest credit."

Mr. Morgenthau also made a short speech in which he congratulated the country on the re-election of the President. Then there were cheers for the President, Chairman McCormick, Mr. Morgenthau and finally for the people of the West, to whom the Chairman declared the success of the campaign was due. An hour later further good news was received, and Chairman McCormick gave out this statement:

"President Wilson was re-elected yesterday by the people of the United States. He will have 304 votes in the Electoral College, and this number may be increased by belated returns from doubtful States. The victory is emphasized by the reluctance of the enemy to admit defeat and is a complete repudiation of the unfounded claims sent over the country by the Republican National Committee last night."

The joy grew greater as the day proceeded. By noon the rooms were jammed, and when a telegram from O. K. Cushing, California State Chairman, was received saying the Democrats had carried the State the crowd formed into a cheering procession to the street. Sheriff Kinkead, the "fighting Sheriff" of Bayonne, and John J. Fitzgerald, ex-Mayor of Boston, found a band somewhere and a real parade was started. It went first to the Republican headquarters at 511 Fifth Avenue, where Chairman Willcox was serenaded, and then to the Hotel Astor, where Mr. Hughes has headquarters. All during the day Chairman McCormick was in communication with Democratic leaders in the doubtful States, advising them to watch the ballot counting closely and get in the latest returns.

Mr. McCormick went to his home at Harrisburg last night for a few days, and members of the committee's Publicity Bureau gave a dinner to Director Robert Woolley at the Waldorf.

"The election of 1916, with the victory of President Wilson is now a matter of history," said Colonel E. M. House yesterday. "Our eyes and our thoughts are now on the future. President Wilson has not only been re-elected, but he will carry California, Minnesota, and New Mexico, as well as New Hampshire. I make this statement on the basis of that sixth sense which any man who has dabbled in politics for forty years is bound to develop.

At Democratic Headquarters it was said at midnight last night that the Democratic State Chairman of North Dakota had wired to Chairman McCormick that Wilson's majority of 1,000 in that State had been maintained all day, and ridiculing the claim of the Republicans that Hughes had been ahead at any time.

It was also stated that The San Francisco Chronicle, a Republican newspaper, had given California to Wilson. The Democratic State Chairman of West Virginia had notified Mr. McCormick that West Virginia would give Mr. Wilson a majority of 3,000.

Word was received from Fred Lynch, National Committeeman for Minnesota, that Minnesota was sure for Wilson by about 1,000.

REPUBLICANS TO FIGHT, TOO.

Willcox Wires State Leaders to Prepare to Protect Interests.

After a day tense with excitement, during which the feelings of the Republican campaign managers had fluctuated between fears and hopes while the result of the Presidential election hung in the balance, they took steps to fortify themselves against an adverse decision by seeking legal aid to "protect the interests of the party in close States."

This decision was reached after a conference among Chairman William R. Willcox, George W. Perkins, Frank H. Hitchcock, Charles B. Warren, Republican National Committeeman for Michigan, and Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., Treasurer of the Republican National Committee.

Word went out last night to National Committeemen in all close and doubtful States to retain lawyers to look after the party's interests. The only inference drawn from this by the handful of Republican leaders beyond the inner circle whom the report reached was that steps would be taken to contest the election and petition the courts for a recount of the vote in such States.

Republican leaders whose memory reaches back far enough declared last night that not even in 1884, the exciting Cleveland-Blaine year, when the result was determined by a plurality in this State slightly above 1,100 for Grover Cleveland, had excitement run so high or the result remained so much in doubt on the day following election as it did this year. The only parallel politicians with long memories could point to was the Tilden-Hayes election in 1876, when the result in four States—Oregon, Florida, South Carolina, and Louisiana—was questioned. That election finally was decided months after by an electoral commission created by the House of Representatives, on which eight Republicans and seven Democrats were appointed. Hayes, the Republican nominee, got 185 votes to Tilden's 184 in the Electoral College.

When the pale light of early dawn shone in through the windows at Republican National Headquarters in the tall office building at Forty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, where the politicians only two or three hours before had joined in a great celebration of a Hughes victory which the early returns seemed to make certain, Chairman William R. Willcox and his aids were still there studying election returns, which by that time had become anything but cheering to Republicans.

As nearly as the fuller but yet far from complete returns could be translated into a tangible story, five States at that time remained doubtful. They were: California, with 13; Minnesota, with 12; Oregon, with 5; North Dakota, with 3, and New Mexico, with 3, or together 36 votes in the Electoral College. Of these States the earlier returns had given Minnesota and North Dakota to Wilson, and Oregon to Hughes, while California and New Mexico, according to these early reports, remained in the balance. From "safe" Democratic States President Wilson appeared to be assured of 251 votes, fifteen less than necessary to choice, and Hughes 242, or twenty-four less than the necessary majority.

The Republican campaign managers figured that there were three combinations that might carry their candidate to victory. Mr. Hughes could win by carrying California and Minnesota, or by carrying either, together with the other three States in the doubtful group.

They began at once to do their best to hurry results from the doubtful States. For fully half an hour a long distance telephone wire remained opened between the office of Chairman Willcox at Republican National Headquarters in this city and San Francisco while he was consulting with Chester H. Rowell, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of California. Mr. Rowell assured him that the Republican leaders on the Pacific slope felt sure California would land in the Hughes column.

In the meantime George W. Perkins was talking over another wire to Alvin T. Hert, National Committeeman for Kentucky, who is in command at Western headquarters of the Republican National Committee in Chicago. Mr. Hert said his reports from State Chairman Thornton of Minnesota and State Chairman William Lemke of North Dakota indicated that these States were going for Hughes.

The day was not far advanced when anxious seekers for information began to flock into the big assembly room at Republican National Headquarters in quest of information. A majority of these were Republicans who had retired happy in the belief that their candidate had won the sweeping victory the early returns indicated. They were a downcast lot as they stood in gloomy groups about the big blackboards where the fluctuations favorable or adverse to the Republican nominee were being chalked up as the returns were coming in and watched the slump in Hughes's chances.

In the inner room where Republican leaders were conferring with Chairman Willcox and his aids an air of tense expectation prevailed. Chairman Willcox and his lieutenants were fagged out with much watchful waiting, but still clung to their posts. So great was their fatigue that when the Chairman, accompanied by some friends, went out for breakfast his assistants locked themselves in his private office and fell asleep in their chairs.

It went all day by ups and downs, with the odds in favor of one candidate or the other fluctuating and the feelings of the leaders and headquarters' staff fluctuating with them. There was something akin to the spirit that pervades the headquarters of a commanding General back of the front while a momentous battle is in progress, in the air at Chairman Willcox's headquarters.

Early in the afternoon when Chairman McCormick at Democratic National Headquarters had sent out a statement claiming that President Wilson had been re-elected and a bunch of Wilson enthusiasts had started to parade through the streets with a band, the air of "Tammany" fell harshly upon the ears of the gloomy Republican watchers as the parade marched by the building. But soon after the reports from Oregon, North Dakota, Minnesota, and even California became brighter and every one began to cheer up. The reports were read in the inner sanctum of Chairman Willcox to a group of distinguished Republicans by Charles B. Warren, the National Committeeman for Michigan, before they were given to the crowd in the assembly room.

Among those who gathered there were former United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham, Frank H. Hitchcock, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, Senator Ogden L. Mills, Controller William H. Prendergast, George Harvey of The North American Review, Charles H. Sherill, former Chairman Charles D. Hilles of the Republican National Committee, Secretary James B. Reynolds of the committee, Robert H. Fuller, who was secretary to Mr. Hughes when he was Governor; George W. Perkins, James R. Sheffield, Frank Munsey, Philip Roosevelt, Frederick C. Tanner, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and Republican County Chairman Samuel S. Koenig, Herbert L. Satterlee, Hamilton Fish, Jr., and Dr. David Jayne Hill. Charles E. Hughes, Jr., was in and out listening to the reports in which his father's political fortunes were so deeply involved.

Chairman William R. Willcox before leaving headquarters early yesterday afternoon to get a little rest claimed that both Minnesota and California surely would be for Hughes. When he returned to his post at 6 o'clock in the evening reports from these States were still being received, with President Wilson leading in both. Chairman Willcox was asked if he had any statement to make. He shook his head.

"I shall have no statement to make," he said, "until the returns from doubtful States settle beyond doubt the question of who has been elected."

Mr. Willcox then left headquarters and went to the Hotel Astor, where he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes at dinner. On returning, he said:

"I believe that Mr. Hughes has been elected, and he shares that view. We ask only what is fair; we want only what we are entitled to, and that we propose to have."

Until shortly before midnight it was still a gloomy group at Headquarters. The crowd which watched the bulletin board, however, was nearly as large as that on election night, and in it were many of the same persons who had sat up until after sunrise to hear the returns.

At 11 o'clock, however, the Republicans received news that set them cheering. A bulletin was posted that "California, complete returns, gives Hughes 1,800." Later this bulletin was proved to be without foundation. Soon after bulletins from Minnesota brought high enthusiasm to the gathering. One was that Wilson's lead of 5,000 in that State had been cut down to 600 and that about 600 districts were yet to be heard from. It was also announced that for an hour each district reporting in Minnesota had been adding an average of ten to the Hughes vote. This was accounted for by the belief that the rural districts of Minnesota were for Hughes and were the last districts to send in their returns.

The announcer computed that at the rate Hughes was going in Minnesota at that time he would carry that State by between 5,000 and 6,000, and while many in his audience shook their heads, they nevertheless cheered.

Another bulletin to the effect that Governor Hatfield had just telegraphed that West Virginia was finally in the Hughes column with 5,200 majority added to the enthusiasm that the hour had created, and a number of persons left for home, again convinced that Charles Evans Hughes was to be their next President.

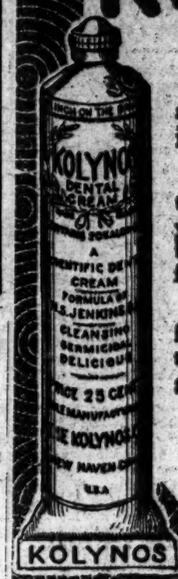
KOLYNOS
Dental Cream



The most unclean, most suspicious thing in the house is the neglected tooth-brush.

Its 3,000 bristles harbor many of the pernicious germs they remove from your mouth, and these wet, soggy bristles furnish an ideal culture medium for the multiplication of these germs.

Ask your dentist. You ought to see him frequently. Ask him about Kolynos, the delightful dental cream, and its germ-destroying power.

The Magic of India Paper

How it put the World's Greatest Library on a 29-inch bookshelf

INDIA paper is the most wonderful paper ever invented. It is so thin that 1000 sheets are less than an inch thick, yet it is quite opaque. A single sheet is strong enough to hold up many hundred times its own weight.

Genuine India paper is so tough it can be crumpled into a ball, tied into knots, drawn through a finger ring and, when ironed out, it is as strong and smooth and crisp as before. All this has been tested and proved with India paper pages from the new Encyclopaedia Britannica.

When India paper was adopted for the new Britannica, the result was a near-miracle. It put this great 44,000,000-word library of facts and information into 29 compact volumes, occupying only 29 inches of shelf space. It reduced the weight of the volumes to nearly one-third.

But the real benefit has been to increase the usefulness and popularity of the Britannica many fold. For India paper has made the Britannica convenient to handle. This invites reading—you just naturally read it more frequently than you would a big bulky book. When the war occurred, it closed the India paper mills abroad. Now, the war had made it impossible to get from Europe the flax which makes India paper—and no more India paper is to be had

Only a small proportion of the entire issue of the new Britannica printed on the famous India paper is still unsold. The India paper shortage would justify an advance in price but the remaining sets are offered at low prices and on terms which are a bargain to any one of moderate means.

Act at once to be sure of getting a set

Think what a bargain this is—the greatest and most authoritative book of fact and information ever published, printed on genuine India paper, at a low price and small monthly payments!

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is a whole library of interesting and instructive information—the complete story of world progress told in 30,000 pages, 41,000 articles, 44,000,000 words, 15,000 illustrations and maps. It is the product of 1,500 contributors, the foremost authorities in the world in their different fields. And it is written in a style so clear and fascinating that it holds the interest of a child as well as of a college professor.

No other work yields such large returns in profit and pleasure as does the Britannica—for it answers every question, stimulates your interest in men and affairs, increases your mental efficiency and keeps you in step with the forward march of progress. Where there are children, the Britannica encourages and satisfies their curiosity—it gives them the "reasons why" necessary to a good education.

The new Britannica is more than a complete, authoritative book of reference—it is a treasure-house of facts on every subject under the sun, including religion, philosophy, art, science, music, painting, literature, politics, chemistry, manufacture, trade and commerce, history, law, agriculture, education, biography, engineering.

Perhaps you have long wanted the Britannica—you know how useful it would be to you every day. You certainly ought to have an India paper set. To secure it, act today, NOW.

Sets of the Britannica in stock—which are all that can be printed on the famous India paper—are offered on the following terms:

Cambridge Issue, large paper, large type—your first payment of $5 brings you the entire 29 volumes; balance payable monthly in the same amount. This issue will never be reprinted.

The popular "Handy Volume" Issue will be sent you on first payment of only $1, balance payable at $3 a month. This is precisely the same as the Cambridge Issue—page for page, word for word—except in size, type and price, selling for 60% less. This issue is sold exclusively by Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago.

Also the new and revised Century Dictionary printed on genuine India paper. This is in one convenient-to-use volume, instead of ten separate bulky books as The Century was previously issued. This is the only complete dictionary of the English language, having 600,000 concise definitions and explanations of words. Sent for a first payment of only $1, to be followed by $3 monthly payments for a limited period.

But your order must reach us soon. These sets will not last long. It will cost you nothing but your time and a stamp to sign and send in the coupon. Do it—right away.

TOOK 659 GERMANS IN CHAULNES BATTLE

French Spend Day in Fortifying New Positions and Replying to Foe's Artillery.

BRITISH FRONT INACTIVE

Berlin Admits the Loss of Villages of Ablaincourt and Pressoire.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Stormy weather on the Somme front again today, and there was little beyond artillery activity on both sides. The French forces spent the day in fortifying their new positions north of Chaulnes, which they captured yesterday. The total number of prisoners taken in this operation is announced today as 659.

North of the Somme, says the official report from Paris tonight, the French artillery scattered the enemy gathering to the east of Saillisel.

South of the Somme and on the right bank of the Meuse there was an intense artillery duel.

The total number of prisoners taken by the French south of the Somme yesterday was 659.

The Germans last night shelled heavily the British positions west of Beaumont-Hamel, on the Somme front north of the Ancre, the War Office announced this afternoon. A German raid in this district was unsuccessful. The weather is stormy.

The British official statement tonight says.

There was artillery activity against our whole front south of the Ancre.

The weather continues stormy.

Germans Admit French Advance.

BERLIN, Nov. 8, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—British attacks between Le Sars and Gueudecourt, on the Somme front, last night were broken up by the German fire, the War Office announced today. South of the Somme the Germans lost possession of the village of Pressoire. Following is the announcement:

Army Group of Prince Rupprecht: North of the Somme during the day the activity of the fighting did not exceed moderate limits. In the night British attacks between Le Sars and Gueudecourt failed under our fire.

South of the Somme the French attacked on both sides of Ablaincourt. Our advanced detachments in the southern part of Ablaincourt were pushed back, and the village of Pressoire was lost. The northern wing of the attacking enemy forces was repulsed.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince: There were lively artillery duels in the Meuse sector.

SAYS ALLIES LOST HEAVILY.

Berlin Describes Fighting on Nov. 5 as a "Day of Death."

BERLIN, Nov. 8, (via Wireless to Sayville.)—"A day of death in France." Nov. 5 is thus characterized by the war correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt, according to the Overseas News Agency, which quotes from the article as follows:

"Again the British shortened their sector, but even on the shortened front the British were forced to engage a division of minor value, which was sent against positions that could not be reached by picked men even at the cost of destruction.

"On this day also an attack near Gueudecourt could not be launched in consequence of the German curtain of fire which held the troops in the trenches and swept the ground where assemblies were taking place with ghastly certainty. The French finally were able to develop attacks at certain places. Evidently in order to animate the courage of the men in the trenches rather than from confidence that the attempt to break through would succeed, the enemy had gathered behind the front cavalry and field guns, which, it was intended, were to cross the destroyed trenches of the opposing forces and roll up from where the breach was made the German front north and south.

"This great thrust resulted in a great day of death for the storming columns. They entered the German trenches only to the northeast and southeast of Sailly, where they were defeated in sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting, while other storming columns, in complete disorder, fell back to their own trenches.

"Three times a hopeless attack against Le Transloy was launched. The French troops were decimated by the German fire and the attempts were then abandoned. The Somme district presented a terrifying field of dead. The German artillery fire was excellent everywhere against the troops in the crowded trenches. It routed the cavalry squadrons and broke down field batteries which had been only waiting for the signal to attack.

"The French also suffered heavy defeats in the powerful engagements between Le Sars and Bouchavesnes."

TURKS TELL OF SUCCESSES.

Say Prisoners Taken on an Anatolian Island Will Be Hanged.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 7, (by Wireless to Berlin and Sayville, Nov. 8.)—Minor operations on the Caucasus and Tigris fronts are reported in the Turkish War Office announcement today, which says:

Caucasus Front—Skirmishes on our right wing resulted favorably for us. Hostile reconnoitring attempts on our left wing were repulsed.

On Nov. 4 and 5 we made a surprise attack on the island of Kecova, West Anatolia, which for a long time has been the rendezvous for bandits who, under the assistance of a hostile fleet, have attacked and looted our coast. We killed over 100 bandits and made prisoners, who will be hanged.

A hostile airplane was shot down by one of our fliers in the vicinity of Smyrna. The occupants fell into the sea and could not be rescued.

Our volunteers routed a hostile squadron near Felahie. Later two battalions of infantry sent as a reforcement were driven back. The enemy suffered heavy losses, while ours were insignificant.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 8.—The War Office today made public this bulletin:

On the Caucasus front a Turkish battalion which made an attack in the direction of Ognott was repulsed.

GUN FIGHTING ON TRENTINO.

Italians Evacuate Observation Posts in Face of Austrian Fire.

ROME, Nov. 8.—The Austrians directed a heavy bombardment yesterday against Italian positions in the Trentino, on Monte Pasubio and Monte Vanoi, says today's official report. The Italians evacuated observation posts on the slopes of Cima di Bocche.

On the Carso Plateau there were reciprocal bombardments. The Italians continue to collect much booty abandoned by the Austrians in the course of the recent Italian drive, finding yesterday a mountain gun battery of four pieces.

Austrian airmen made a raid along the Lower Isonzo. The military works at the entrance to Pirano Bay, in Istria, thirteen miles southwest of Trieste, were attacked by Italian aeronauts.

Austrians Take Fifty Prisoners.

VIENNA, Nov. 8, (via London.)—The War Office today issued the following:

On the Italian front quiet is reported at Gorizia. In the Fleims Valley, in the course of Italian attacks in the Col Bricon sector and against the Bocche position, the Austrians took fifty prisoners and two machine guns.

BELGIUM TO PROTEST AGAINST DEPORTATION

Government Says 15,000 Belgian Men and Many French Civilians Have Been Taken Away.

HAVRE, Nov. 8.—The Belgian Government has decided to protest to neutral governments against the deportation of Belgians and their alleged employment at forced labor in German factories and in military work at Verdun.

The Documentary Bureau of the Belgian Minister of War, in making this announcement, says the Government has positive information that 15,000 Belgian men and a number of French civilians forcibly were taken between Oct. 15 and 24 from various parts of Belgium, the two Flanders and the regions of Tournai and Mons.

"These unfortunates," says the note, "were crowded in open cars, exposed to intemperate weather and sent as cattle to various destinations, certain of them to Germany and others to the Verdun front. There can be no doubt that most of them will be employed on work of a military character. The Belgian Government has decided to protest solemnly to neutral countries against this particularly abominable violation of Article 3 of The Hague Convention."

LILIUOKALANI VERY ILL.

The Death of Hawaii's Former Queen Is Expected Momentarily.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Liliuokalani, former Queen of Hawaii, is very ill at Honolulu and her death is expected momentarily, according to information received here today.

Since the signing of her formal abdication of the throne of Hawaii on Jan. 25, 1895, after her arrest as a participant in the plot to overthrow the republic which had been set up by S. B. Dole, Liliuokalani sought for fifteen years to regain her sovereignty. When her dream of restoration was finally given up at the end of a long, unsuccessful siege at Washington, she petitioned for the million acres of crown lands which had been taken over by the republic.

She never succeeded in this, and finally withdrew from Washington, living thereafter at Honolulu on the $4,000 a year voted to her by the Hawaiian Legislature. Her house was the resort of royalists, and within her own doors she kept the state of a Queen with a small but devoted court. To Americans, however, she is Mrs. Lydia Dominis. She is the author of "Hawaii's Story," a book in which her remarkable intellect was fully displayed. She is a composer of hundreds of Hawaiian songs, many of which have become popular in the United States.

CHALONER ASKS BED IN AUTO

Petitions Court Here for Motor Sleeping Car in Which to Travel.

John Armstrong Chaloner, formerly Chanler, who is insane in New York but sane in Virginia, where he has an estate called Merry Mills at Cobham, filed in the Supreme Court yesterday a petition asking that Thomas T. Sherman, the committee of his property, be directed to purchase for his use a "sleeping car" automobile, costing $1,700.

Chaloner said in a petition drawn by himself that he had suffered from a nervous affection of the spine for seventeen years, which made it impossible for him to sit in a chair more than an hour at a time, but did not interfere with horse-back riding, of which he was fond. He said he has been accustomed to go to Richmond, eighty miles away, for about ten days each month, and that it was not only inconvenient, but almost impossible for him to ride in a railway coach. He can't ride horseback to Richmond, he said, because twenty miles is about as far as he cares to travel that way. He submitted an affidavit by Dr. John S. Davis of the University of Virginia, stating that the use of the proposed car would aid his affliction.

AMERICAN SHIP SHELLED BY U-BOAT

IS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

Under Charter by Another Company and Bound for Italy with a Cargo of Steel.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The American-Hawaiian steamship Columbian, of 8,579 tons gross, is sending out wireless telegraphy calls for help, stating that she is being shelled by a submarine.

The first news that the steamship Columbian had been attacked by a submarine in the Mediterranean was received in New York in a dispatch from Lloyd's in London to the New York Maritime Exchange, which stated that she was being shelled and was sending out calls for help.

The Columbian sailed from this port on Oct. 18, under the command of Captain Curtis, with a crew of 120 men, the majority of whom were Americans. She called at Boston and embarked 1,500 horses for St. Nazaire, France, where she arrived on Nov. 2, leaving that port the following day for Genoa with the cargo of steel she had brought from New York.

One of the officers on the American, of the same company, which is loading at the foot of Twenty-ninth Street, South Brooklyn, said last night that the chief officer of the Columbian was named Porter, and that he was from Massachusetts, and the chief engineer was named Simpson, who had his home in Brooklyn. He did not know their initials. The crew of the Columbian numbered about fifty white men, he added, and the others were no doubt horsemen shipped in Boston to look after the horses sent to St. Nazaire. These make the round voyage in the ship, and are signed on the ship's articles.

The Columbian was under the American flag, and had her name and flag painted on each side of her hull, and was unarmed.

She was built by the Union Shipbuilding Company in San Francisco in 1907 for the sugar trade to the Hawaiian Islands, and had been chartered by the France and Canada Steamship Company of 120 Broadway. Neither the American-Hawaiian Company nor the charterers had received any message from Captain Curtis and knew nothing of what had happened to the Columbian except the report received at the Maritime Exchange.

The Columbian is a twin-screw steamship of 8,580 gross tonnage, 472 feet 3 inches long, 57 feet 2 inches beam, and 32 feet 3 inches depth of hold.

Blow Up French Shell Depot.

BERLIN, Nov. 8, (via London.)—A great French ammunition depot at Cerisy, on the Somme, was destroyed in the course of the raid made on Monday night by a German aerial squadron, the War Office announces. It is said a series of fires and explosions was caused by bombs dropped by the raiders. Other aerial raids on the same night inflicted damage in about twenty places behind the French lines where Russian soldiers were billeted.

HEARST PAPERS UNDER BAN.

Their Circulation in Canada Prohibited After This Week.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 8.—The Hearst papers have been placed under the ban in Canada. These publications have been prohibited from circulation from Saturday next. The heavy penalties of the War Measures act will apply to any one having them in possession after that date. Facilities are also denied the International News Service.

An explanatory memorandum issued this afternoon says:

"The Postmaster General of Canada has issued a warrant under the provisions of the War Measures act whereby the Hearst papers have been refused the privilege of the mails in Canada, and are prohibited from circulation in Canada in any way.

"No person in Canada is to be permitted after Saturday next to be in possession of the newspapers or of any issues of them, and any person in possession of them shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment for any term not exceeding five years, or both fine and imprisonment."

The managers of the Hearst papers in New York and the managers of the International News Service said yesterday that they had not been advised of the action of the Canadian Government. They expressed no surprise, however, at the report, and considered it a natural sequence to the action of the British Government some weeks ago, which put the ban on the International News Service in England. They were not inclined to believe that the Canadian order would injure their service seriously.

POWER PLANTS MAY CLOSE.

West Complains of Coal Shortage at Hearing on Car Embargoes.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 8.—Representatives of industrial plants, public service corporations, and commercial organizations were the first witnesses to be heard in connection with the formal investigation begun here today by the Interstate Commerce Commission into the methods of exchange, interchange and return of freight cars by the railroads of the country.

Commissioner C. C. McChord is presiding at the hearings, which are the outgrowth of an informal inquiry held here last week into the country-wide railroad car shortage.

Among the witnesses who appeared today was D. F. Hurd of the Chamber of Commerce of Cleveland. He said that many industrial and public service plants throughout a large part of the North and Northwest soon would be forced to suspend operation unless embargoes upon the movement of their cars to foreign lines were lifted by southern coal carrying roads. These embargoes are the result of the refusal of northern and eastern lines to return other cars, when empty, according to officials of the southern roads involved.

GASES OVERCOME FIREMEN.

Helmet Squad Called to Rescue Ten Men from Blazing Cellar.

Poisonous gases in the flaming subcellar of the paper warehouse of Richard C. Loesch & Co., at 76 Beekman Street, imperiled the lives of two battalion chiefs and eight firemen last night while efforts to subdue the fire were in progress. Not until the Rescue Squad with its oxygen helmets had manned the hose lines was the fire extinguished.

Acting Battalion Chief Timothy Crowley was the most seriously affected of those who dropped in the choking smoke. He was unconscious for two hours in Volunteer Hospital before he was revived. The others were revived on the sidewalk near the burning building. A number of the firemen were overcome while trying to drag out comrades after whom they had stumbled as they groped their way in the thick smoke.

Only the paper stock in the subcellar was consumed.

ARABIA TORPEDOED WITHOUT WARNING

Liner's 437 Passengers Saved by Other Vessels, the British Admiralty Announces.

TWO OF THE CREW KILLED

Women and Children Numbered 169 —One American Known to Have Been Aboard.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The Peninsular and Oriental liner Arabia received no warning from the submarine which sank her in the Mediterranean on Monday, according to a statement issued this morning by the Admiralty, which says:

The homeward-bound Peninsular and Oriental mail steamer Arabia was torpedoed without warning and sunk in the Mediterranean at about noon on Nov. 6. The vessel had 437 passengers, including 169 women and children.

All the passengers were saved by various vessels which were diverted to the scene of the disaster. Two engineers are missing, and are believed to have been killed by the explosion. The remainder of the crew were saved.

The announcement of the rescue of the passengers was a great relief to the people of England, who generally knew of the sinking of the vessel yesterday. At that time rumor gave credence to the report that the loss of life had been very heavy. Details of the sinking and the rescue of the passengers are not yet available, but it is believed the great precautions taken by liners passing through the Mediterranean for the safety of their passengers account for the fact that none was drowned.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company has no list of the passengers, and consequently is unable to say whether there were any Americans on board.

The loss of the Arabia recalls the destruction of the Persia, of the same line, in the Mediterranean less than a year ago, causing the death of 119 passengers and 217 members of the crew.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Walter H. Page, the American Ambassador at London, today cabled the State Department the news of the torpedoing of the P. & O. liner Arabia. It has been generally reported that the P. & O. steamers are all "defensively" armed. Such was the case of the Persia, which sank in the Mediterranean some months ago.

The attitude of the American Government in the matter probably will depend upon official advices as to whether any Americans were aboard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 8.—Paul R. Danner of this city, an American citizen, was a passenger on board the British steamer Arabia, reported sunk Nov. 6 in the Mediterranean by a submarine without warning.

Danner, who is a Harvard graduate and 25 years of age, has been engaged in Y. M. C. A. work in India for a number of years, and, according to his parents, he was returning in the Arabia to spend a furlough at home.

STEAMER SEATONIA SUNK.

Captain Taken Prisoner by U-Boat —The Crew Saved.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The British steamer Seatonia has been sunk, the crew saved, and Captain Pattison has been taken prisoner, says Lloyd's agency.

Lloyd's also announces that the Norwegian steamer Reime has been sunk. She was 1,913 tons gross register and was built at Sunderland in 1912.

The Seatonia left Montreal some time in October, stopped at Mulgrave Town, Newfoundland, and left there on Oct. 20 for Barry, Wales. She belonged to the Seatonia Steamship Company of West Hartlepool, England, and was of 3,533 tons. She was built at West Hartlepool in 1898.

TELLS OF ALAUNIA'S LOSS.

Captain Benison of Cunarder That Hit Mine Here with the Saxonia.

Captain H. M. Benison, who commanded the Cunarder Alaunia when she was sunk by a mine in the English Channel on Oct. 19, arrived here yesterday in charge of the Saxonia, bringing the first details of the disaster to this port.

He said the Alaunia was about two miles south of the Royal Sovereign Lightship, near Beachy Head, about 4:30 in the morning, when the mine struck her aft and exploded with terrific force. Captain Benison said it was a German mine which had been laid by a submarine over night right in the track of ships bound up Channel. He saw a mine sweeper explode one three hours after his ship had been struck.

"I ordered the twelve boats to be lowered," Captain Benison continued, "and had the crew get into them, because it is difficult to know just how long a ship will be afloat after she is struck. The fifth engineer was in the tunnel at the time. He saw the tail shaft go up with the stern into the air, and he came on deck in quick order. In twenty minutes a patrol boat was alongside, and half an hour later we were surrounded by destroyers. When ninety of the crew of 180 on the Alaunia had got away in the boats a patrol boat came alongside and took the remainder on board. The steamship kept afloat until 9:30 in the morning, and I would have had her towed into shallow water if the tugs had arrived in time. When they eventually came out from Newhaven the decks of the Alaunia were awash, and, with the heavy cargo in the bottom of the hold, there was no chance to save her."

Fred Morris, the second steward, and Whit., the coal passer, were killed through falling overboard while getting into the boats and striking their heads against the side of the ship. The two stewardesses were in the water over half an hour, and had nothing but their night dresses. One of them had left the Cunard service and was living in New York. She was making the round voyage in the Alaunia as a holiday by permission of Captain D. J. Roberts, the Marine Superintendent, to see her relatives in London. Mrs. Scott, one of the stewardesses, is on board the Saxonia.

TWO ADMIT BLACKMAIL.

Buda Godman and Man Held in $10,000 Bail.

Buda Godman, known also as Alice Williams, and James Christian pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Thomas of the Federal District Court to having engaged in a conspiracy to impersonate Government officials for the purposes of blackmail. They were held in $10,000 bail each. Their trial has been set for the December Term of the court.

The defendants are accused of having blackmailed Edward R. West, Vice President of the C. D. Gregg Tea and Coffee Company, out of $15,000. Both of them are said to have been active members of the blackmailing gang which the police of various cities in the United States have been rounding up for several months. Miss Godman and West came here from Chicago. It was alleged they were together in the Hotel Ansonia when the woman's confederates broke in and wrung the money from West by threatening to prosecute him under the Mann White Slave Act.

As Marie Rappold Has So Delightfully Proven—

THE NEW EDISON

Sings with the Very SOUL of the Artist!

TWO HUNDRED eminent musical critics have said that they could not tell the Edison Re-Creation from the actual voice of the singer, when both were heard from the same platform. Marie Rappold lent her wonderful voice and her charming personality to this direct comparison.

What other re-producing machine has ever dared such a test?

The old talking machine principle was wonderful, until Music's Actual Re-Creation came, four years of intensive study, labor and experiment, by America's greatest wizard of invention.

Today, people who know music emphatically declare that the Edison Re-Creator stands absolutely alone in the reproduction of vocal and instrumental music, in all its power and Purity of Tone.

It takes Thirteen Hours to Make an Edison Re-Creation Record. The usual talking machine record is stamped out in a Single Minute!

Edison Records are, everyone, Laboratory Products—and always shall be, says Mr. Edison. That is why the Edison Re-Creator is a superlatively artistic instrument. Every record is so perfectly finished that every shade of every tone is indelibly stamped into its scientifically accurate grooves.

That is part of the secret why these two hundred musical critics say that the Edison is incomparable—and the Voice of the Edison is the actual re-creation of the Voice of the Artist.

Don't make the mistake of investing your money in some other machine, until you have heard the Edison, and fully realize its unquestionable superiorities over all other instruments of its kind.

The Edison is sold on Easy Terms of payment.

EXPECTS REFORMS IN GERMAN EMPIRE

Secretary Zimmermann Predicts Government Will Become More Popular.

MAY COPY AMERICAN IDEAS

Says Feature of Change Will Be Direct Responsibility to People Through Members of Reichstag.

The following interview with Eugen Zimmermann, Germany's Chief Permanent Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, obtained by Herbert Bayard Swope, appeared in The World yesterday:

"It would be useless and dangerous to deny," said Herr Zimmermann to me, sitting at his desk in the Foreign Office, Wilhelmstrasse, 76, "that the trend of political thought in Germany today is toward liberalization. Unless, because it is true that the trend exists, and dangerous because a denial would indicate opposition to the consummation of this thought.

"I do not mean to say that the plans now being formulated are not meeting with antagonism, for the Conservatives and certain of the other political divisions are strong in their opposition, but I am sure that the bulk of the best thought in Germany today is in favor of effectuating the political changes that liberalization postulates, and I feel quite sure that these changes are certain to come.

Reform May Precede War's End.

"It is possible that a certain measure of reform will be put into practice before the war has reached an end, but I should say that the real body of the reformation will not be taken up until after peace. My belief on this point is due to the fact that under the conditions now existing we are doing very well; perhaps better with a concentration of power than would be the case if the power were scattered. Further, the fact that our enemies are talking of forcing internal reforms upon us would make it seem as if such reforms would be a price of peace, and while we are anxious for the changes to come, we want them to come at our will and not under duress or coercion.

"The vast changes that Germany has undergone since the Franco-Prussian war have been due in no small measure to the form of government under which she has lived. It may be doubted if any other structure would have been successful in bringing her to the position of world power which she now occupies. With her giant's growth has come a change in her political philosophy. By easy stages her people have fitted themselves for an active participation in the affairs of government greater than was allocated to them at the refounding of the Empire, when, naturally, her former government was empirical. The old Kaiser and Bismarck adopted that type which in their opinion was best suited for the purpose Germany had. How well they builded is now a matter of history. The country has outgrown its political swaddling clothes and is now ready to have its political responsibility divided among the many instead of the few.

Ministers Now Bureau Chiefs.

"Along just what lines this change shall come is still a matter of discussion. There are, however, certain elemental considerations the acceptance of which is understood. In this class are included the reforms of the suffrage in Prussia, which still employs the plural voting system, and in some of the smaller German States, where the form of government is still autocratic.

"The important feature of the change will be the erection of direct responsibility of Government to the people through their representatives in the Reichstag. Under the present system there is actually no such responsibility. The Chancellor is at the head of the political government. He owes his responsibility to the Kaiser, by whom he is created. The various Secretaries are not actually Ministers of the Cabinet in the common understanding of that term. They are merely bureau chiefs of the Chancellor, who is not only nominally but actually their chief and to whom their responsibility is alone due.

"This condition was reaffirmed by the Chancellor in his speech in the Zabern affair, when he pointed out that the Government was not answerable to the Reichstag for the course it pursued, but was answerable alone to the Emperor.

"There is a definite belief in Germany today—and a belief that may not be far from realization—that the Government should be answerable to the Reichstag, thus making it responsive to the popular vote. Perhaps the most effective way of bringing this change about would be to amend the Constitution of the confederated empire, with the permission and approval of the Kaiser and the various ruling Kings and heads of the confederated States by whom the Constitution was granted.

"In creating the responsibility of the Chancellor to the people it would be likewise necessary to organize a Cabinet, the members of which should have powers similar in their nature to those held by the Cabinet officials of America, France, and England. The creation of such a form would obviate the present chage that Germany does not possess a popular Government and would give opportunity for the effective participation of many minds which now are lacking a mode of expression.

"Up to this point I am in sympathy with the outline of the reforms that I have sketched, but my approval stops short of accepting a plan that would involve the downfall of the Government each time the Reichstag passed a vote of lack of confidence.

"It must be borne in mind that there are in Germany today something like twenty-five separate political organizations. This number is unwieldly and dangerous to successful execution of Governmental projects because of the facility with which opposition could be welded together on one pretext or another to overthrow the Ministry. Therefore, since Germany does not possess the two-party system such as is to be found in the politics of England and America, and as the German political issues are largely internal rather than foreign, it is my idea that in the creation of the new form of Governmental responsibility there should be given to the Government a fixed tenure of office similar to that which America possesses, where the Cabinet is emplaced for four years.

"Perhaps the plan would work out in such a way as to give the members of the Reichstag a definite term of service and make the service of the Ministry coincident with that period. I would, however, depart from the practice now in vogue in America, and give the members of the Ministry seats in the Reichstag, as is the system in other countries today. Through this plan they would be in a position to explain and defend their official acts and, as executives of the people's will, have the opportunity of setting forth their plans and policies to the representatives of the people."

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

On Tuesday the French gave an eloquent reply to the recent statement of Field Marshal von Hindenburg as to their waning power. Although for some days they had been fighting desperately on the Somme front, and in addition had but finished up their work of restoring the solidity of their Verdun defensive positions, there was still enough vigor and sufficient resources to strike, and strike hard, at a third section of the front—that of Chaulnes, which for some time has been practically neglected.

This attack was different from any which the French have yet delivered. An entirely new offensive scheme was tried out, apparently with good success. This scheme was based on a sudden infantry attack without the intense artillery preparation which has marked all other operations on the west. In order that such a method could be successful, the trenches must be practically denuded of infantry. Experience has shown on the western front that no attack against existing trenches can be successful without plentiful use of artillery, unless it can be predetermined that these trenches at the particular point selected for the attack have been drained of their defenders. It has been difficult enough to forge ahead even with the artillery at their command.

While there is an absence of details, it is extremely probable that the sudden stroke at Verdun has been duplicated. The French must have had information that the German lines at Ablaincourt and Pressoire had been weakened by withdrawals. Otherwise in the face of previous experience they would not have dared such an attack as that which they launched. Having this information, they failed to give the usual warning of the attack by means of a heavy artillery bombardment, but struck quickly in a surprise movement and before the Germans could bring up the supports, broke through their positions and rushed these two towns.

When the relation between the villages of France with the many positions for both infantry and machine guns which they afford, and the German defensive scheme is realized, the importance of these two villages becomes apparent. They may very rightly be regarded as the keys to the Chaulnes position on the north. On the west and north Chaulnes is completely covered by the French lines. There is now no village, however small, between these lines and a line due east from the city. More than this, the French advance has carried their lines to within less than a mile of one of the few remaining routes out of the city toward the east, that is the road from Chaulnes to Marchelepot. This road then is under the close range fire of the French artillery, so that, except at night, its use for the transferring of men or supplies is a hazardous operation. The ground between the French lines and this road is open and flat, both being about 100 meters above the sea. It is, in fact, a small table land.

The next push should bring the French lines up to the highway itself. But it appears that the French are after something much more important than a highway. The principal means of communication between the Chaulnes district and the Somme front proper is the railroad which runs northeast from Chaulnes to the Somme, and thence up the Somme Valley to Peronne. It is by means of this road that the Germans have effected the transfer of troops to one section or other as occasion demanded. The French now are about two miles and a half from this road and well to the east of Chaulnes. If they can reach the railroad all rail communications between the Germans north of the Somme bend and those in the south will be severed except by a very roundabout way over a narrow-gauge road which comes down well to the east of the Somme Valley.

In this move also the French are paving the way for an enforced German retirement much greater than any that has yet been forced. It is noticeable that the French, after the advantages gained as a result of the fall of Combles, have made no attempt to force their lines ahead against Peronne. The position is three-quarters surrounded, but no effort has been made to complete the circle. If the French can take Chaulnes, and thereafter push their lines from Barleux south within a mile or two of the river, the capture of Peronne then will have far reaching effect. Not only will it mean the taking of one small town and a few hundred prisoners. It will mean also that all of the German forces on the western bank of the river between Chaulnes and Peronne will be outflanked, and while this alone will probably not cause them to fall back across the stream, the amount of pressure necessary to effect this will have been reduced to a minimum.

The thing that enables the Germans to hold their present lines west of the river between Peronne and Barleux is the gun positions which they hold undisturbed on the east bank of the stream. It is improbable, if not impossible, that the Germans have anything more than light field guns on the west bank of the river between these points. The range is too short for heavy artillery, as the French lines are but two miles from the river itself. With Peronne out of the way, these gun positions will be uncovered one after the other. Then the Somme will lose its value as a defensive screen and the Germans will be forced to establish their lines on the east bank. At the present rate of progress this may and probably will be a long time ahead. It is, however, but one of the larger elements of the Somme fighting.

There is another argument to be found in the ease with which the French took these two towns of Ablainecourt and Pressoire. Much has been written of the decline of German numbers. Some of it has been believed, and much of it credited to the desire of the writer rather than to the actual condition. The theory of the decline in numbers is, however, borne out in every detail of the fighting, both at Verdun and at Chaulnes. If the Germans had sufficient reserves in France, they would be able to feed their battle line from depots in the rear. This they are certainly not able to do.

We have seen German statements of the presence of the Brandenburg division of Douaumont fame, fighting on the Somme. We have seen the Verdun front in general stripped of men until the lines were too thinned out to hold. We now see another section of the front weakened in exactly the same way and for the same reason. May there not be something after all in the expectations of the Allies that sooner or later they will break through?

MRS. BOISSEVAIN VERY ILL.

Two Transfusions of Blood Made In Effort to Save Her.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 8.—Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, the woman suffrage leader, who collapsed while delivering a political address in this city a short time ago, lies in a critical condition in the Good Samaritan Hospital, having suffered several sinking and fainting spells. Two transfusions of blood have been effected with the purpose of overcoming a serious condition of anaemia.

The attending physician this afternoon expressed the hope that the treatment would be successful. He stated that the transfusion had been accomplished in each case with absolute success. The first transfusion was made on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Boissevain's sister, Miss Milholland, who came here from the East with her on her political campaign, giving of her blood. The second, today, was from the veins of Mrs. Boissevain's husband, who had hurried across the continent on receipt of the news of her breakdown.

GERMAN WAR LOAN FABLE.

Story Which Gave Rise to the Potsdam Plate Contribution Tale.

Just a column on the front page is devoted by the Kölnische Zeitung to an interesting fable concerning a certain Herr Shirker, who would not help to bring up bricks and timber when his Fatherland was threatened by a gap in a dam.

When the work was finished and the dam repaired, and "at last the high tide was over and the sun was shining again on the fields covered with flowers and fruit," the neighbors who helped to repair the dam could only express their grief by spitting when they met Herr Shirker, who had refused to work even when offered an excellent reward.

This is one of the hundreds of heart-rending appeals with are flooding the press to Herr Shirkers who refuse to fill the gap in Germany's financial seawall by contributing to the war loan.

Side by side with the war loan there is running a scheme for voluntary gold collection, to which the Imperial family have just given a fillip by contributing gold plate from Potsdam. The Empress has ordered all the gold plate and other articles which can be replaced by less precious material, and which have no "historical or art value," to be handed over. Many objects of a more personal nature belonging to members of the Imperial family have also been given. The Frankfurter Zeitung hopes that this excellent example will be followed by the other German courts.—London Chronicle.

RUSSIANS CHECK ATTACKS.

Throw Austro-Germans Back In Fight on the Stokhod.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 8, (via London.)—An Austro-German attack in Volhynia, near Sitovichi, on the Stokhod, was repulsed by the Russians, the War Office reports. An attempt of the Teutonic forces to advance in the region of Ostrovolos Settlement also was defeated.

BERLIN, Nov. 8, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—A communication from Army Headquarters today says there is nothing to report from the Russo-Galician front.

STOP BULGAR RUSHES.

Serbs Hold New Cerna Positions Against Three Attacks.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Bulgarians took the offensive yesterday against the Serbians in the Cerna River region, on the Macedonian front southeast of Monastir. They made three attacks, the War Office announces, and were repulsed. They retired to their own trenches, leaving many dead on the field.

BERLIN, Nov. 8, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The War Office today issued the following bulletin:

Macedonian Front.—Hostile attacks in the Cerna bend were without success. There was spirited artillery fighting in the Belaschitza sector and on the Struma front.

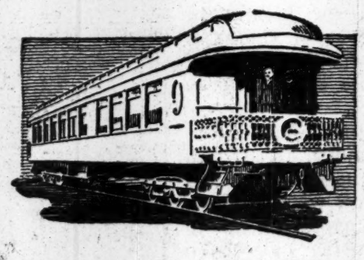
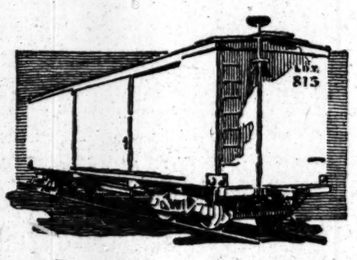
Overland Automobiles



Which Do You Prefer?



Pullman or Freight?

No one would think of riding in a freight car if he could enjoy the comfort of a big, comfortable easy riding Pullman parlor car.

So with automobiles. Most of the popular priced cars ride like freight cars. This is due to the old fashioned type of spring.

Many manufacturers still continue to use them.

The Overland does not. The 75 B Overland has the latest type of cantilever shock absorbing springs. As a result it is one of the easiest riding cars in the world.

One demonstration will prove this.

LEADING ELEVENS ROUNDING INTO TOP FORM AS CRUCIAL GAMES DRAW NEAR

MURRAY IS LIKELY TO PILOT CRIMSON

Improvement So Rapid He Will Probably Start at Quarter Against Tigers.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 8.—Not satisfied that the 'Varsity team defenses against Princeton's plays had been worked out sufficiently, the Harvard coaches sent their regulars against the scrubs this afternoon for a brisk defensive drill. The team, however, had a lot of ginger on defense, and the second team players, although driven hard by Reggie Brown, the Crimson's strategy man, were unable to make very much headway. This work over, the regulars were lined up against the substitutes for what developed to be a very hard scrimmage for this late date.

The first team worked with a will in its plays, but did not score except for a field goal, which Horween made from the 35-yard line. Horween has been working at dropkicking all Fall, and, although not so good as Bond, will do in a pinch if he is able to get into the game against the Tigers on Saturday. The 'Varsity's chance for a score was made possible only because C. Coolidge recovered a substitute's fumble on the 30-yard line.

In the 'Varsity lineup today Snow again was at right guard instead of Clark, who played with the substitutes. Clark has been rated as the first-string man all Fall, but in the late season Snow, who has had 'Varsity coaching for two years, has been improving very fast, and he has entirely recovered from his injury sustained in the Virginia game. The chances are about even now that he will begin the game against Princeton.

Bill Murray again was at quarter, Robinson being on the field, but doing no work. Murray's progress has been marked, and it is an open secret now that he will start the game against the Tigers and will take a lot of beating before he will have to relinquish his place to Robinson for the Yale game.

Flower was with both the first team and the substitutes as kicker this afternoon, practically meeting Horween in the kicking duel when working behind the protection of the 'Varsity line. Flower now appears to be in good trim and will be available surely for the game Saturday. There is a growing confidence at Cambridge that the Crimson will win Saturday, notwithstanding the team has had no real opposition for the past five weeks.

ROPE DRILL FOR THE GREEN.

Dartmouth Off for Penn Game Without Scrimmage Work.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 8.—Coach Cavanaugh's no scrimmage policy was in force again today, and he will send the big Green team against Pennsylvania Saturday without having had any scrimmage this week. The men are all trained down fine, and the coaches do not desire to take any chances on injuries before what promises to be a hard contest with the Philadelphia collegians. Unwilling, however, to let the men off without a rigorous workout Cavanaugh ordered the dreaded rope drill, and for twenty minutes the squad charged under the rope with the coaches crying to the players to run lower and buck harder. Several of the heavier men on the squad were unable to keep up the pace and were forced to drop out before the drill ended.

Merrill is still unable to take his position at guard, but Youngstrom is filling in, and is very likely to start against Penn Saturday. He is tall, ruggedly built, and extremely aggressive. His charging, both on defense and offense, is severe, and has done much to win him his place on the 'Varsity. Edwards was shifted to Thielscher's place at right half today, and Poole was sent in to the signal drill at full back. Poole has been handicapped by minor injuries this year, but now that he is in good condition and is working with the 'Varsity, it is expected that he will be a valuable asset to the team.

Gerrish has been kicking during the layoff of Thielscher. He seems to be improving somewhat, but if the regular punter cannot start Saturday the Green team is sure to feel his loss. The squad will leave here tomorrow for Philadelphia.

SECRET PRACTICE AT PENN.

'Varsity Tries New Plays for Use Against Dartmouth.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—The secret sign was hung out when the Pennsylvania football squad took part in a hard scrimmage on Franklin Field this afternoon. Long before the season opened Coach Folwell announced that there would be no secret drills, but evidently this has not worked out to the satisfaction of the aggressive Penn tutor.

Before the scrimmage the 'Varsity tried four new plays. Twenty minutes of this drill was sufficient to convince Folwell that these plays were good enough to use against the Hanoverians.

Klem Urquhart is still suffering from the split lip he received in the Lafayette game, but the injury has healed rapidly enough to permit his starting against Dartmouth on Saturday. In case he does not get in the game, Al Crane, a high jumper, is next in line, with Ray Young, brother of Lou Young, former Red and Blue Captain, a third choice.

STIFF WORKOUT FOR ARMY.

'Varsity Men in Good Condition After Notre Dame Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Army eleven was put through a stiff workout this afternoon which lasted well into the moonlight. Excepting Weems, who was hurt while substituting at centre for Captain McEwan in Saturday's game with Notre Dame, the 'Varsity men were all in the lineup. "Big" Mac alternated with Stokes, a promising lad who is showing much merit of late at the centre position. The 'Varsity used Place, Oliphant, and Vidal to carry the ball this afternoon in a short offensive drill. Oliphant got away for one of his sensational runs. On the defense the 'Varsity found some trouble in stopping Cole and Witters, scrub backs. The former is looming formidably and bids fair to be used considerably as a first string backfield man.

Near the end of the practice the 'Varsity was drilled on some new formations, which will be launched for the first time against Maine, after which the coaches sent all hands into the blocking and tackling machines.

On an adjoining field the Army's Cullum Hall team added another victim to its rapidly growing list by winning a well-played game from White Plains High School. The final score was 20 to 7.

ELI SUBS TO FACE BROWN.

Coaches Decide to Save Most of Regulars for Tigers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—Yale presented only a substitute team in its midweek game against the Freshman team today, and the coaches said tonight that a number of the first string players will not be sent into the line-up against Brown next Saturday. The coaches have had to choose between resting several players and getting them into condition for the Princeton game next week on Saturday or sending them against Brown and taking a chance on the Princeton match, and they have decided to use many substitutes against Brown and to disregard the outcome of that match.

It was learned tonight that Left Tackle Taft, Right Guard Galt and Half Back Bob Bingham will be unable to play against Brown. Baldridge, Legore and Quarter Back Smith were rested today, but it is not yet certain whether any of them will be used against that team. The coaches today decided to use Callahan at guard, instead of at centre, and to retain Rex Hutchinson at centre. Braden will almost certainly start the Brown game in Hutchinson's position at full back.

The eleven which will be sent against Brown will not be selected until Friday night. The Freshmen today held the 'Varsity to a single touchdown, made by Quarter Back Laroche. They held the 'Varsity once on downs at their 5-yard line, and once received the ball on Carey's fumble at their 10-yard line. Only an intercepted pass, hurled by Ashley, but grabbed by Carey of the regulars, prevented the Freshmen from scoring.

A thirty-yard run by Quarter Back Ashley of the Freshmen was the most brilliant feature of the ground gaining for the afternoon. John Hall and Foster Rockwell joined the coaching staff. The line-up today:

LONG, HARD TOIL AT ITHACA.

Cornellians Hopeful of Victory Over Michigan Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The longest practice of the season was held by the Cornell team in the stadium and in the baseball cage today. The men ran through their plays until after 7 o'clock and they wore a tired but hopeful expression as they went to the showers.

Everything is optimistic around the Cornell quarters and hopes have been rapidly rising in the last few days of a victory over Michigan Saturday. The coaches say that the team is in the best condition and playing its best game of the season. In 1914 and 1915 Cornell defeated Michigan, both games being played in Ann Arbor. The team which played today was the same which started the Harvard game, with the exception of Captain Mueller, whose place was filled by Hoffman.

Eilenberger played at Eckley's place at right end and indications are that he will be the first choice in Saturday's game at this side of the line. It looks as if Ryerson would be the choice at left end. His heavier build and more certain tackling make him appear more likely than Zander to stop the plunging Michigan backs. Miller and Anderson played at guard, but Tilley and Bard will be held in readiness to relieve them if they weaken before the Michigan offense.

Gillies and Jewett, the tackles, were back in shape together for the first time in three weeks. They, with Carry at centre, will complete the make-up of the 'Varsity line.

Shiverick will be back at quarter this week, while Speed, who called the signals against Carnegie Tech last Saturday, will be shifted to halfback. Whether it will be Benedict or Hoffman that will be benched to make way for Speed has not been announced, but it looks as if Benedict, because of his valuable kicking ability, will be the man kept, with Hoffman ready to replace Captain Mueller at fullback.

YOST POLISHING HIS TEAM.

Wolverine Kickers in Shape for Battle with Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 8.—The gates to Ferry Field were closed tight this afternoon while Michigan was putting more polish upon the formations specially designed for the edification of the Cornellians on Saturday.

Aided by a slight wind, Morrey Dunne and Raymond were booting sixty and sixty-five yards on almost every attempt, and both boys were placing their kicks with good precision. Dunne also shone at drop-kicking, putting over several 45-yard goals, some of them from angles. Captain Maulbetsch was place-kicking before the gates were closed, and the leader was experiencing success as far back as the 40-yard mark.

Yost has not given out any statement as to his exact lineup as yet. Whether Sharpe or Zeiger will start at right half and whether Boyd or Gracey will begin at left guard no one with the possible exception of the force of coaches knows.

The team will hold its last practice on Ferry Field tomorrow afternoon, leaving Ann Arbor at 9:45 in the evening for Geneva, N. Y. Yost will give his Wolverines a work-out Friday afternoon on the Hobart gridiron at Geneva.

FORDHAM CRACKS INJURED.

O'Connell and Lowe Badly Battered in Game with Georgetown.

The real cost of Fordham's plucky fight against the husky team of Georgetown at Fordham Field Tuesday was not known until yesterday when the Maroon followers were thrown into dismay by the announcement that O'Connell, their star full back, and Lowe, the best tackle who has ever sported the colors of the Bronx institution, may be unable to play for the rest of the season.

O'Connell was knocked out in the second period. He was painfully battered on the right side and was unable to get about yesterday. It is feared that he may have received a broken rib, and arrangements have been made for an X-ray examination today. Lowe was also in sore straits yesterday, and Trainer Weber states that he too will be put under examination today. Early in the third period Lowe was stunned for a moment, but persisted in going back into action, only admitting after the contest that he had been unable to use his left side at all during the last half of the game when Georgetown made all its score. It is feared that he may have a broken collarbone.

The other Fordham men were a tired lot yesterday, and all practice was postponed until today. As the next game is at Worcester a week from Saturday no hard work will be in order for the next three days.

UNION HAS LONG PRACTICE.

Hard Work Marks Preparations for Game with Amherst.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Union College football squad put in a long afternoon of hard, consistent work in preparation for the Amherst game next Saturday. The team survived the 45 to 0 victory over R. P. I. with no serious injuries. Wittner and Mudge will alternate at quarter back, and Powell, who has shown up well in practice, will occupy the centre of the line. The fast Garnet back field has been tearing holes in the scrub line, and Captain Rosekrans continues to be dangerous within forty-five yards of the goal posts.

TIGERS SHOW DASH IN LIGHT PRACTICE

Coach Rush, Pleased with Improvement, Lets 'Varsity Off with Easy Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 8.—There was improvement in the work of the Princeton eleven this afternoon, and Coach Rush, apparently satisfied with the manner in which his charges were performing, did not allow as hard a practice as has been the order all this week. Most of the afternoon was spent on signal drill and getting the team into smooth working order, for tomorrow's practice is the last that the team will have in the Stadium.

In the short scrimmage which was allowed the first-string eleven showed much more encouraging form than yesterday, when coaches and players were much discouraged. The fumbling which appeared yesterday and threatened to spoil the Tigers' offensive play was absent, and there was a decided improvement in the work of the backfield.

Jack Eddy and Moore, both of whom seem fairly certain now of starting against the Crimson, were the stars in the practice. Eddy got away for a touchdown in the first minute of the scrimmage. On the kickoff he received the ball on his own 15-yard line and dodged his way through the entire scrub team for a touchdown. Moore got his chance when the 'Varsity started to carry the ball, however, and got away for many long gains.

Both Tibbott and Brown were rested this afternoon. George was used in the place of Brown, and probably earned his opportunity to get in the Harvard game by his unusual plunging. Driggs, Moore, and Eddy completed the backfield. Georgi is a drop kicker of more than usual ability, and was used behind the line during a brief workout in this department of the game.

PITT TURNS DOWN OFFERS.

Panthers Receive Many Requests for Post-Season Games.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8.—The athletic authorities at the University of Pittsburgh have been busy recently refusing offers for post-season duels with various rival college teams. Offers have been pouring in from promoters who desire to pit the famous Warner machine against some other crack eleven for a game later than Thanksgiving, but all have been promptly refused by the Pittsburgh management, which has announced repeatedly that under no conditions whatsoever will the Pitt players be permitted to take part in a post-season game. The Pitt schedule ends on Thanksgiving, when the annual game with Penn State occurs, and that ends football for the year, so far as the locals are concerned.

The huge crowd expected at the W. & J.-Pitt game this week will be more truly representative of Western Pennsylvania, probably, than any other which gathers in this city. The 19-0 score by which Warner's boys defeated W. & J. last year was the widest margin of victory obtained by either team for many years, and marked the first contest in which the local eleven had defeated its rivals since 1911. The Pitt rooters, while confident of success this year, believe that Captain Peck's team will find it harder to outscore W. & J. than any of the opponents met up to this time, as Metzger's team has been coming fast and is in prime condition for this contest.

This will be the last game in which the Red and Black will have to face several of Pitt's most noted players, as Captain Peck, Thornhill, and Herron finish their courses this year, and Soppitt, star of the last two years' games with these rivals, has been forced out of football by the injury received in the Navy game a month ago. Pitt will sorely miss these four remarkable linemen, who rank among the topnotchers which this district has produced.

Thornhill, Peck, and Herron seem likely to be included in many All-American selections this year, as their work has been a feature of practically every one of Pitt's games, and Eastern critics who have watched their work class them as among the best they have ever seen. Warner has a great task before him to produce for the 1917 Panthers players to fill the shoes of these four crack players, as well as of the three or four excellent substitutes who go out with this year's graduating class.

WARNER DRIVES PITT HARD.

Puts Squad Through Severe Secret Drill for W. and J.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8.—Coach Warner of the Pitt squad got down to real business today in preparing the team for the W. & J. game on Saturday and put them through a hard workout of two hours' duration that reminded them of the strenuous times before the Pennsylvania contest. Today's practice was in secret, but when the boys came off the field they admitted that the old coach had forced them to the breaking point, as some of them had stalled off a little over the easy game against Allegheny last week, and two of the regulars were warned that their places might be taken by substitutes on Saturday unless a little more vigor were displayed.

Sies, Miller, and Gougler were worked out in punting, so that the place of Andy Hastings can be taken by a competent man in case he is not able to don his uniform against the Red and Black. He hurt himself in the first two minutes of play on Saturday, and was unable to get into the practice today. Gougler is very clever at booting the ball over the goal posts from anywhere inside the 45-yard line.

W. AND J. HALF BACK HURT.

Nuss Will Be Unable to Play in Pitt Game Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Nov. 8.—It was definitely announced at Washington and Jefferson football headquarters tonight that Furman Nuss would not be able to start in the game against Pittsburgh next Saturday. Injuries received in the Yale game have failed to respond to treatment as rapidly as had been expected. The brilliant half back has not been in a practice since the New Haven clash, and Coach Metzger said tonight that he would start Fain, the husky Southerner, in his place. It was also stated that Lally, first substitute quarter back, would not be able to play against Pittsburgh on account of an injury. The Washington and Jefferson coaches devoted their entire time today to building up the defense with the exception of a short period at the close of the afternoon, when some new forward pass formations were tried. There was no scrimmage, but the 'Varsity was coached in going down the field under punts and kick offs and in forming interference for the catcher.

30 Cross-Country Teams Entered.

More than thirty high schools have made nominations for the Columbia University annual interscholastic cross-country meet for Saturday over the Columbia Riverside Drive hill and dale course. Several of the teams have visited the course for practice trials and yesterday the Morris High School aggregation of harriers went over the stretch. The Gustavus T. Kirby cup is the trophy in competition.

COLUMBIA LOSES HEALY.

Star of Blue and White Team Injured in Stevens Game.

Captain Jeff Healy of the Columbia eleven has been lost to the team for the rest of the year on account of injuries received Tuesday in the game with Stevens on South Field. In the last play of the game Healy was blocked when going down under a Columbia punt and had to be helped off the field with an injured left knee. It developed yesterday that several of the ligaments around the joint had been torn, and it is likely that a cartilage has been broken, and Head Coach Metcalf announced last night that there was absolutely no chance of Healy's playing football again.

Healy is the veteran left tackle, and has been the mainstay of the Columbia line of defense. Since football was re-established in the Fall of 1915, after an absence of nine years, Healy has been the single lineman who has never needed a substitute, and his work has consistently made him the star of the squad.

There were no drills on the field yesterday except for the 'Varsity substitutes and class players, and a long blackboard talk occupied an hour late in the afternoon. Several members reported on the sick list, and although some of the injuries are of an unknown quality, the indications last night were that all except Captain Healy will be able to play Saturday against Swarthmore. Work for the rest of this week will be devoted more toward strategy and tactics than to increasing the physical strength of the squad by hard workouts and scrimmages.

SWARTHMORE IS HOPEFUL.

Expects Eleven to Go Through Season Without Defeat.

SWARTHMORE, Penn., Nov. 8.—Swarthmore still believes it has a team this year that is going through the entire season without a defeat. There are three more games to be played. Columbia at New York on Saturday, Dickinson in Swarthmore on the 18th, and Haverford at Haverford on the 25th. Each of these games will be a good, hard test.

The 'Varsity had a day of rest this week, while the scrubs had a signal drill. The practice of the first-string players was mainly in handling a wet ball, as Coach Roper does not wish any repetition of the fumbles which occurred in the Hopkins game. The practice was cut rather short, as Roper wishes to take no chances on the team going stale with the Columbia game so near at hand. No injuries occurred during the Hopkins game. Donnelly will not be able to take his position at centre next Saturday, as his knee is not yet in satisfactory condition.

BROWN DEFENSE IS STRONG.

'Varsity Makes Stand Against Second Team, Using Yale Plays.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—The Brown 'Varsity put in what will probably prove the most strenuous practice of the week this afternoon, following a vigorous dummy line scrimmage with a real scrimmage against a strong second team, using Yale plays and formations. The feature of this scrimmage was the stand that the 'Varsity made on its 1-yard line, holding off charge after charge before the seconds could push the ball over, and then the touchdown was questionable. This, by the way, was the only score of the afternoon, although the 'Varsity had the ball dangerously near its opponents' line on several occasions.

Huggins directed the play of the 'Varsity from the quarter back position, and the little fellow showed great skill in handling the team. Hillhouse was at full back and Pollard and Annon were the halves, although the former retired in place of Eddie Murphy, who has been doing good work with the scrubs. Owing to Conroy's slight injury Murphy will probably be retained on the 'Varsity squad. Barring eleventh hour injuries, Brown will be in good condition for its annual Yale clash Saturday and will enter the game with plenty of confidence. Brown is unquestionably much stronger than a year ago, when Yale was defeated.

NO BROWN-BOSTON GAME.

Athletic Authorities Deny Report of Post-Season Contest.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—The story printed in several of the Boston papers that Brown was considering a post-season game with Boston College to be played in Boston Dec. 9 is denied by the athletic authorities at Brown. Professor F. W. Marvel, Athletic Director, stated this morning that he had received no communication from Boston College and had given the possibility of such a game no thought. Brown will close its season with a game with Colgate in this city on Thanksgiving Day, and from all indications the meeting of these two teams will draw the biggest crowd of spectators ever assembled at a game in this city.

LAFAYETTE 'VARSITY UPSET.

Scrubs Spring a Surprise and Outdo First Line Men.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 8.—Lafayette practiced until dark on March Field this afternoon in preparation for the game that is to be played with Albright on Saturday afternoon. Most of the practice period was consumed by a scrimmage between the 'Varsity and the scrubs in which the latter outdid the former, chiefly by means of the forward pass, which received its force and direction from J. Diamond. One reason for the scrub achievement was that the 'Varsity had a new back field. Brandes, who became a back field man only last night, Martin, McDonnell, and Leininger composed the combination. This new quartet did good offensive work, but lacked on the secondary defense. Brandes has a lot of power in running, but must improve his selection of the openings to use. Leininger is developing into a fine thrower of the passes. Hutchinson was used at the end of the line in place of Woodruff, who is still out of the game. Ernst resumed his place at guard. Weldon is reported as doing well.

N. Y. U. PRACTICE SLIPSHOD.

Violet 'Varsity Shows Effects of Hard Game Against Bucknell.

In the scrimmage yesterday at New York University the 'Varsity line played ragged and listless football. The only redeeming feature of the playing was the work of the substitute backfield, of which Mackenzie, at quarter back, was the only regular. No scoring was allowed by the coaches, but the 'Varsity was constantly on the offensive. The line showed the effects of Tuesday's hard fight against Bucknell.

As the days are growing shorter, the team is being more and more handicapped because many of the squad have late hours and cannot report for practice until the daylight is almost gone. Yesterday Howard Cann, whose injured shoulder kept him out of the Bucknell game, was on the field, and played, but the coaches would not allow him to run with the ball. Provided no one is injured in the few remaining practices before the Colby game on Saturday, the entire Violet 'Varsity will probably face the Maine collegians.

Seventy Amateurs to Box.

Seventy entries have been received by the committee in charge of the New York Athletic Club amateur boxing tournament, to be held at its gymnasium, tonight and Saturday. Among those entered are the Metropolitan and National champions.

CHICLET VICTOR IN PIMLICO HANDICAP

Son of Spearmint Defeats Leochares and Flittergold in Hard-Fought Race.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 8.—Chiclet, L. Wood's colt, which has been performing so consistently during the Autumn meetings, won the second Pimlico Fall Handicap at one mile and forty yards, which was the principal attraction at the Pimlico track this afternoon. The son of that great English stallion, Spearmint, defeated a fine field, including Leochares and Flittergold, which came along in the order named.

Chiclet's victory was no easy one, as the youngster had to give up his best to defeat the field which opposed him. Runes and Daddy's Choice were the first to get away, and for a while this pair led the field. Chiclet, however, was right up with the leaders, with Leochares and Flittergold also in the first division. At the half mile post Runes fell back and Daddy's Choice momentarily took the lead, but the Herz's entry was only able to hold the position for a few yards, as Robinson, who had the mount on the winner, brought Chiclet up in a determined rush and as the runners passed the six furlong post the winner was in the lead by half a length.

Both Leochares and Flittergold challenged Chiclet, but the latter had plenty of speed and shook off the other contenders as they came alongside. But it was always an open race until the last forty yards, when Robinson started to urge Chiclet in earnest. The colt responded gamely and came on to win by a comfortable margin.

G. H. Stetson's Sixty-four, which has won his last two jumping races at Pimlico easily, annexed the Patapso Steeplechase, a selling handicap, for four-year-olds and upward, over a two and a quarter mile course. PENN STATE IN SCRIMMAGE.

'Varsity Tallies Seven Touchdowns Against Freshmen.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Nov. 8.—Penn State's stalwart freshman eleven, fresh from its triumph over the University of Pennsylvania yearlings, could not hold the 'Varsity today. Captain Clark and his teammates scrimmaged for forty minutes against the best defense the freshmen could offer, and the regulars tallied seven touchdowns. Five resulted from forward passes hurled to the backs and ends. Higgins, Ege, and Gross figured prominently in the scoring.

Jeff Clark celebrated his return to rough work by tearing through the freshman line for long gains. Whenever Hess or Ewing successfully turned the freshman ends, it was Clark who took out the tacklers for them. Neither Robb nor Beck took part in the signal work or the scrimmage. Both of them needed a rest, and they were sent to the training quarters after a couple of turns around the track.

BAR FRESHMEN SWIMMERS.

Aquatic Plans at Pennsylvania Upset by New Rule.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—Making freshmen ineligible for the 'Varsity swimming team at the University of Pennsylvania has considerably upset the plans of Coach George Kistler and the managers of the swimming affairs at the university. They have a lot of fine first year ability which has now been made useless for this year's campaign. This has acted as a douche on the whole team.

In order to offset this feeling the alumni have arranged to give a banquet to the entire swimming squad at the Hotel Walton on Saturday evening next to try and arouse the old Penn spirit in the sport. Kistler, Manager Purdy, and Captain Russell will talk to the squad, particularly to keep up the spirits of the freshmen, for whom a special schedule has been arranged.

For the 'Varsity team this schedule has been prepared: Dec. 15, College of the City of New York at New York; Jan. 13, Princeton at Princeton; Jan. 19, Yale at Philadelphia; Feb. 16, Yale at New Haven; Feb. 23, College of the City of New York at Philadelphia; March 2, Princeton at Philadelphia; March 9, Columbia at New York; March 16, Columbia at Philadelphia, and March 24, individual championships at Philadelphia.

WILLIAMS NAMED CAPTAIN.

Chosen as Leader of Swimming Team at Brown.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—H. DeC. Williams, '17, of Daytona, Fla., has been elected Captain of the Brown swimming team for this season. Practice is now being held twice a week in the pool under the direction of N. V. S. Mumford, Captain of the 1910 team, who will coach the team until after the football season, when Coach Huggins will again take charge. With a nucleus of seven of last year's team and many promising swimmers among the freshmen, the prospects are much brighter than in several years.

ELI TO TEST NEW COURSE.

Yale Crews Will Row Over the Housatonic on Saturday.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—Yale will try out its new rowing course over the Houstanic on Saturday if the weather proves pleasant. The shells are already at the temporary boathouse, and two university crews, the first sophomore and the first freshman, had a spin in them today. The work was for the purpose of making the crews familiar with the course. No attempts at speed were made, these being reserved for next Saturday, when there will be a number of trials between different crews over the two-mile course, which will be used for the races in the Spring.

NEW EXHIBITORS AT SHOW.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Belmont Make Entries in Hunter Classes.

Among the new exhibitors at the National Horse Show, which opens on Saturday in Madison Square Garden, are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Belmont. They have made fourteen entries in the hunter classes and will be among the leading exhibitors in this division. Mrs. Belmont, who was Miss Hurlburt of Warrenton, Va., has entered her thoroughbred jumper, Belray Visit, in the class in which ladies must ride. All the entries are in the name of the Belray Stables.

Mrs. Henry Martyn Alexander, formerly Miss Helen Manice, is a newcomer in the saddle horse classes. In the same category, among Philadelphia exhibitors, are the Misses Anna and Jean Lister Austin of Rosemont, and Miss Isabelle Wanamaker of Merion, hitherto prominent only as an exhibitor of harness horses.

Louis Lee Haggin of Lexington, Ky., is among those who will make their first appearance with the exhibitors of trotting road horses. Another is B. G. Harrington of Syracuse. Mr. Haggin has a brown mare called Cheetah, which has swept everything before her in Kentucky this season, and he will show her against the champions of Edward T. Stotesbury and William M. V. Hoffman.

New exhibitors of polo mounts include Joseph Clark Baldwin, Jr., Miss Elizabeth Meyer, Miss Ethel Norton, Williard D. Straight, Milton Erlanger and John L. de Saulles, one of the latter's entries being the gray mare Vinilla, bred in Chili, South America.

COLLIE SHOW LIST OUT.

Many Valuable Prizes Offered for First Annual Exhibit Nov. 27.

The recently organized Collie Club of New York has issued the premium list for its first annual show on Nov. 27 at Bryant Hall, Forty-second Street and Sixth Avenue. The new club already has stimulated the interest in this breed to a large extent and made possible a specialty show of collies for the first time in the vicinity of New York. Most of the prominent breeders and owners of collies are members of the club which has elected the following officers: Patrick Tully, President; John D. Tietjen, Vice President; Fred Leighton, Secretary, and Thomas F. Morris, Treasurer.

There are eighteen regular classes listed for the show at Bryant Hall, consisting of events for puppies, novice, American bred, limit, open, and winners. The specials are more numerous, prizes being offered for twenty-two classes. Several valuable challenge cups will be in competition and there is a long list of club specials. The Collie Club of America gives its recognition to the show by offering the Collie Club of America trophy, valued at $300, for the best American bred collie exhibited by a member. A silver medal will be given to commemorate each victory for this trophy. J. Harry Rushton offers, through the Asbury Park Kennel Club, the Woodcraft Kennel Trophy for the best dog or bitch, any breed. This trophy has been in competition since Aug. 28 last and ends with the Asbury Park show in 1917, one of the conditions being that the winner must be exhibited at the next Asbury Park show.

REBUILDING LEHIGH TEAM.

Good, Right Tackle, Will Be Back for Penn State Game.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 8.—All the heavy work that Lehigh will do before the Penn State game was accomplished today. It consisted chiefly of a scrimmage and a rehearsal of fundamentals. Coach Tom Keady is progressing in his efforts to rebuild the team, but he has as yet reached no definite decision as to the ends, centre, and half backs. Tomlinson alternated with Herrington today at Wysocki's right half back position, while Pons alternated with Robinson at centre. The good news was received that Bob Good, right tackle, will be back in time for the Penn State game. Good was called home just after the Muhlenberg contest. With Good back, Richards can again be used at one of the ends, but Gulick or Frain may get a chance.

There was no attempt to score touchdowns in today's scrimmage, but the coach did try to teach the men what plays to make when the ball was near the opponents' goal. New plays were worked out also to some extent. Considerable time was spent in getting the men to crouch lower in making charges. Brunner today was sent to a corner of the field to practice drop-kicking and placements. Brunner's toe has been a great means of bolstering up Lehigh's scores against opponents lately. In placement kicking he was successful four out of five attempts.

C. J. FENDT DRIVES DINGEE TO VICTORY

After Trailing in First Heat Winner Trots Fast Half Mile on Speedway.

Dingee, owned and driven by C. J. Fendt, carried off the blue ribbon in the 1:04 class trot, the feature of the postponed matinée of the Road Drivers' Association of New York, held yesterday on the Harlem Speedway. After trailing the entire distance in the first heat, Dingee displayed a reversal of form in the following two, and won both in easy fashion. Dingee traveled the half mile in the second tilt in the fast time of 1 minute and 5 seconds.

R. Jacobs, piloting his Master McKerron, a former Speedway favorite, triumphed in the 1:07 class pace, which culminated in one of the most exciting finishes ever witnessed on the Speedway. Pitted against Master McKerron were M. F. Kearin's Lustrous McKinney and O'Brien Boy, belonging to the stable of W. C. Urban, which finished second and third, respectively. Lustrous McKinney went to the front in the second heat and maintained an advantage of a quarter of a length for half of the distance. At the three-eighths mile post Kearins's gelding and Master McKerron were running on even terms. A hot race over the final furlong ended in favor of Master McKerron by a nose. O'Brien Boy finished third, a length in the rear of Lustrous McKinney.

Columbia Fall Rowing Ends.

Fall rowing at Columbia University has been ended because of the cold weather and Coach Jim Rice will allow a loosening of the strict training regulations until early in February, when indoor work in the machines will be inaugurated in the gymnasium.

Recently we again had the pleasure of serving our very first retail customer.

He reminded us that the morning our first store was opened at Broome Street and Broadway, he came in—the first customer—and "bought two fine suits."

Takes us back just forty-two years; for it was in November, 1874, that our firm was organized, though our business ancestry runs back to '37.

With our four great stores of today, filled with fine outfittings for men and boys, we feel we owe much to the principles on which this business has been built.

To quote from an advertisement of '79—

"One price to all—a full guarantee of every garment sold. Exchanges cheerfully made or money refunded if goods are returned for any cause."

An unusual guarantee in those days—one that can't be beat today.

Everything men and boys wear.

'PENDENNIS' DONE IN MOVING PICTURES

Thackeray's Romance, Revitalized, Delights Great Audiences in London Theatre.

ALL ITS FEATURES SHOWN

A Notable Production That Reflects Great Credit on Both Actors and Photographers.

The difficulty, in some instances the impossibility, of adapting the standard novel to the stage seems about being overcome by the "movies." A few of Scott's novels—notably "Guy Mannering," with Charlotte Cushman as Meg Merrilies—many of the Dickens novels—only one of Thackeray's—"Vanity Fair," with Mrs. Fiske as Becky Sharp—have had success as acted dramas. Now the "movies" come along and the trick of producing the master fictions before the naked eye is as easy as falling off a log. "In a little film show down in the Strand," a London letter tells us "they are reeling off 'Pendennis' to crowded and delighted audiences."

"Pendennis," which does not lend itself to the uses of the stage—too long, cumbrous and introspective—may very well be depicted on the screen. It was undoubtedly an apt selection for the experiment of commandeering the great Romancists. The history of Thackeray's hero is the history of most of the young fellows of our day who have literary talents and ambition. His follies are those of his condition and temperament; a widow's boy; a country lad; enthusiastic, bright and fickle. That he should fall in love with old Costigan's daughter was inevitable. The lad who has not fallen in love before he is 17 has nothing in him; and Pen had, as we know, a deal in him.

The old Major comes all the way from London. It is dreadful, forsooth, this idea of one of the Pendennises marrying an actress; for the elder of the stock—the dead Pendennis, Pen's father—has been an apothecary and surgeon, and the honor of the family cannot brook such a misalliance. So Major Pendennis—a compound of the military, diplomatic and cockney elements in the British character—hurries down to intervene; and he wastes an amount of ammunition on rather small game. It is usually best to let these matters take their course. The likelihood is that Pen and the Fotheringay would have tired of themselves had they been left alone. Nevertheless the Major discharges his mission handsomely, and it must be allowed by fair-minded readers that he is, all in all, a most admirable person of his class; not a popular, though a numerous, class; a class, however, which society could not well get on without; its bootjacks and hatpegs, which it uses and abuses.

It makes one young again to have those old stories revitalized, and their popularization by the movies ought to teach the actually young much they are likely never to know without. In this connection one likes to recur to them—especially to "Pendennis"—a most human story. What a toyshop it is and what pretty, familiar puppets! The second stage of Mr. Pen's love-life—to proceed with the narrative—proved, as it should, progressive. Miss Amory is certainly an improvement on Miss Costigan. The one spoke only the lines of others which old Bows taught her to speak; the other made her own lines, and was indeed, like the younger Miss Pecksniff, "a gushing thing," with white shoulders and pale cheeks and languid eyes, a very killing style of person to impetuous youths; in short, a poetess! Young Pendennis displayed throughout this flirtation a weak and generous spirit. The truth is that there was much in common between the two; but the thing was clearly impossible. One part of the mission of women is sacrifice, and here was one whose theory of life was to sacrifice everything but herself, and so she lost it all because she paid nothing.

In this world, if you get love, you must give it; if you make money, you must risk it. Miss Amory was cool and dexterous; but she was niggard and penny-wise, and so she makes a useful figure to the moral of the piece. So, we begin to know Laura better, as Pen did, and to appreciate her affectionate nature and pure womanhood, in spite of her quiet and simple ways, and to love her heartily.

The affair with Blanche Amory closes Pen's rustic existence by the River Brawl; and next we have our Prince of Fair Oaks, having failed at Oxford, transported to chambers in London, where he begins his literary life, with Warrington for a companion; and what a life it is to be sure!

Where is the man of letters who does not look back with a sneaking, half-bashful regret over those young days and nights of noble toil and splendid ambition; when to write the best histories, the best tragedies, the best poems, the best romances, the best essays, was his business and confident belief; no doubt about his genius; no doubt about his success; no distrust of the world; rose color to look upon; rose water to drink, and a little sentiment now and then to season it with, and oceans of innocent gush. The stage is Aladdin's garden, and all the fruit and flowers are red. Old Bows in the orchestra is a magician. Little Pimpette is an angel. There is no end to the variety, and not yet satiety; for who can weary of these dazzling footlights, this ravishing music, and these droll songs in the roof garden after the play is over? Cakes and ale, indeed; but also books and work, tragedies, histories, rhapsodies!

In writing the novel of "Pendennis," Thackeray confesses that he had the novel of "Tom Jones" in his mind's eye; and if the later book fall short of its great prototype in power, amplitude, and purpose, as it does undoubtedly, much of the deficiency may be set down to the conventionalism of modern life. The distance is not nearly so great between the two writers; for the author of "Pendennis," hardly less than Henry Fielding, had a wondrous wise and detective genius, the keenest natural love for truth, the bravest sense of honest dealing in all things, thorough detestation of hypocrisy, and the happiest satirical gift of laughing it to scorn, joined to tenderness, charity, and grace, which everywhere bubble up like running springs from the bottom of some deep, still well of water.

There is this fine passage in the "Sentimental Journey": "If nature has so wove her web of kindness that some threads of love and desire are entangled with the piece, must the whole web be rent in drawing them out? Whip me such stoics, great Governor of Nature, said I to myself. Wherever Providence shall place me for the trials of my virtue; whatever is my danger, whatever my situation, let me feel the movements which arise out of it and belong to me as a man, and if I govern them as a good one I will trust the issue to Thy justice; for Thou hast made us, and not we ourselves." This seems to be the moral of Pendennis, wherein it differs materially from the moral of Tom Jones, but Tom Jones was a foundling of the eighteenth century, whereas Pendennis was a gentleman of the nineteenth.

All honor to the movies if they are going to revive the age of romance in the popular heart. The novel that was once an event is hardly now an incident. Journalism has become the only wear. Yet journalism owes much to fiction. Both the novel writers and newspaper writers pick up a deal of knowledge of books and knowledge of the world during their up-and-down, rough-and-tumble way of life, and if too much of it be composed of mere decoration it yet answers a purpose and, directed by painstaking, hardworking ability, achieves sometimes immense success. Nor is this undeserved; as who shall say that Dickens has not done as much good as John Stuart Mill, and Thackeray as much good as Thomas Carlyle? Yet Dickens was never a student as Mill was, and Thackeray roamed about as his fancy led him and enjoyed himself heartily.

The weary scholar and the work-a-day drudge are often heard to complain of their lot in life. Not infrequently they make comparison between their labor and that which supplies occupation merely to their more fortunate brethren, novel writers, and verse writers. But the argument is not all on one side. Neither novel writing, nor newspaper writing, is easy writing. We hear of Scott writhing with pain, as he gives out to an amanuensis that brilliant dialogue between Rebecca and the Templar. We hear of Dickens coming from his four or five weeks' seclusion with the "Chimes" in his hand, "wan, nervous, and quite broke down." There are many examples which show that one line of literary work is hardly worse or better than another, except as the pen is guided by the inspiration of aptitude and love.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

PERCY GRAINGER'S RECITAL.

An Interesting and Varied Program of Pianoforte Music in Aeolian Hall.

Percy Grainger is bound by none of the crusted conventions in program making from which pianists find such a singular difficulty in extricating themselves. Not only for this reason but even more for the quality of his performance, the recital which he gave yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall (a benefit for the Manassas Colored School) was exceedingly interesting. His playing showed more beauty and technical finish, more continence, more artistic charm, than any playing he has hitherto done for this public. Not before has he played with such a subtle beauty of tone. Daring greatly, he began with the first book of Brahm's "Paganini" variations, music that in the hands of an artist becomes something much more than a set of difficult technical problems. Equally venturesome was his demonstration that Bach can delight a modern audience with his clavier music as he wrote it, represented by his Partita in B flat; and Bach needs not to be thundered with the assistance of Liszt, Tausig, d'Albert, or Busoni to be enjoyed.

Mr. Grainger played Chopin's "Barcarolle," op. 60, as it is not often played; not as a brilliant and overpowering piece, but sweetly, tenderly, with only an occasional emergence into brilliancy and fire, and throughout with a tone of iridescent beauty and variety of color and with crystalline clearness. And Mr. Grainger's reading carried conviction with it. Depending much for their success upon this sort of beauty and variety in tonal color, which he lavished upon them, were two compositions of Cyril Scott—"The Garden of Soul Sympathy" and "Bells," both pieces of pure impressionism in music, the latter a not too obvious following of the suggestion in its title.

The other numbers on the program involved the folk-song influences which are gaining a greater and greater hold on composers, and with which Mr. Grainger himself is so conspicuously identified. This spirit was represented not only by direct transcriptions of folk songs, but also by music either based on or more or less directly influenced by popular tunes. Of the first sort were four arrangements by Julius Roentgen of old Dutch peasant songs and country dances—arrangements in which the harmonic additions seemed to grow naturally out of the old tunes and to do them no modern violence. Another was Mr. Grainger's own setting of a sea chanty, "One More Day, My John," aiming at a somewhat more pianistic effect, but also without violating the naturalness of the tune. Finally, there was Mr. Grainger's transcription for piano of Sir Charles Stanford's orchestral settings of two Irish tunes from the Petrie collection, enchanting tunes, most skillfully employed, to which must be added another of the same sort which Mr. Grainger has played here before and which he gave as an extra piece.

Of the second category was Isaac Albeniz's "Eritaña," wherein that Spanish-French-English composer has sought to afford a glimpse of the Spanish coloring and atmosphere in an inn, like Lillias Pastria's "Near the Ramparts of Seville," though the doings in Eritaña are somewhat less exciting than in the more famous one. Also to be put in this category is Mr. Grainger's own "Gay but Wistful." It is a transcription by himself—a very skillful one—of a movement of his orchestral suite, "In a Nutshell," played at the Norfolk Festival for the first time last June. In this, as Mr. Grainger says, he has used no popular tunes, but has attempted to write a tune "combining a music hall flavor with that London blend of gaiety with wistfulness so familiar in the performance of George Grossmith, Jr., and other vaudeville artists." Whether or not the local flavor has been accurately reproduced, the character that Mr. Grainger was aiming at is conspicuously there. It is a tune with enough of individuality in its popular character to give it artistic distinction. Not all composers of this day and generation can come by such a one, and the form of its treatment is as felicitous as the invention itself.

The spirit and vitality of Mr. Grainger's playing of all these things, those of the great composers as well as those for which the "folk" were in various measure responsible, made them all delightful, and he found a richly characteristic expression for each. They showed his artistic powers in a most engaging manner.

'Cellist and Baritone in Recital.

Boris Hambourg, 'cellist, and Robert Maitland, baritone, gave a recital together yesterday afternoon in the Comedy Theatre. Both have been heard here before. Mr. Hambourg played a suite by Giuseppi Valentini, an eighteenth century composer, which was not a very interesting specimen of the period, and had evidently been subjected to extensive modern editing. Mr. Hambourg devoted a good deal of anxious care to it, especially as regards the technique of his left hand. His other offerings were smaller pieces. Mr. Maitland sang songs in German, English, and French in excellent style, with artistic appreciation of their musical significance, and with good diction. The tonal quality of neither the instrument nor the voice was helped by the hangings of stuff that surrounded the artists on the stage.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The first performance in this country of Horace Annesley Vachell's comedy, "The Lodger," will be given Saturday night in Allentown, Penn. When the play was produced in London, at the Haymarket, it was called "Who Is He?" A company of English players including Lionel Atwill, Phyllis Relph, Beryl Mercer, Harry Ashford, Harold De Becker, Frederick Annerley, and Frank Howson will appear in the piece, which will be seen here in December. Ernest Shuter, Inc., is making the production.

The time for the rise of the curtain at the Booth has been brought forward to 8:15, because of the length of "Getting Married." This latest Shaw play's engagement will continue indefinitely.

The Century Theatre Club will discuss "Turn to the Right" at its meeting at the Hotel Astor tomorrow afternoon. Two hundred and sixty members of the club saw the matinee performance of the comedy yesterday.

The first of a series of ten special matinee performances of "The Yellow Jacket" will take place this afternoon at the Cort.

Lucile Watson, who has been playing with the Dolly Sisters in "His Bridal Night," will return to the city at the end of the week to begin rehearsals in a short play, entitled "Lotus," in which she will be seen shortly in vaudeville. Rockcliffe Fellowes and Joseph Chipman will appear in her support.

Cathleen Nesbitt, who played one of the principal roles in "Hush!" during its brief engagement at the Little Theatre, has been engaged for the leading feminine role in "Such Is Life," the comedy in which the Shuberts will star Sam Sothern.

The Somme battle pictures, recently shown at the Strand, will be exhibited all day Sunday at the Astor.

Carrie King arrived yesterday from Paris. She brought with her some manuscripts of playlets acted at the Grand Guignol for presentation at the little playhouse being prepared in East Thirty-fourth Street for the exploitation of this type of play.

Chin-Chin, the baby elephant, has returned from her travels and has been added to the Hippodrome show.

Mollie Best will give a recital of some of her stories Monday afternoon, Nov. 20, at the Princess.

Marie Dressler has retired from the cast of "The Century Girl." The performance has been shortened so that it is over before midnight now.

Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell" will be presented tomorrow and Saturday nights at the Irving Place in honor of the poet's birthday. The last performance of Tolstoi's "The Living Corpse" will be given Saturday afternoon.

John E. Kellerd will begin a tour of the principal cities in Shakespearean repertoire on Nov. 27. Charles B. Hanford will play Brutus to Mr. Kellerd's Marc Antony.

'LOVE OF THREE KINGS' SUNG

Riccardo Martin and Luisa Villani in Montemezzi's Opera.

Montemezzi's "The Love of the Three Kings" was given by the Boston-National Opera Company at the Lexington Theatre last night as the third performance in its engagement there. The cast was the same as that of the company's presentation of the work last season, with the exception that Riccardo Martin sang Avito. Curiously enough this rôle, though two different companies have presented the work, had never been sung in New York before save by Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, whose performance still remains unforgettable. The other principal singers were Luisa Villani and Messrs. George Baklanoff, José Mardones, and Ernesto Giaccone. Roberto Moranzoni conducted again.

The performance was a very fine one in most respects. Mr. Martin was its weak spot. The beautiful love scene in the second act was marred by his unyielding vocal style and his manner of performing the stage business. The blame for the latter should perhaps be shared with the stage director, but however that is, the fact remains that where deftness and ease were required, Mme. Villani seemed uncertain what Mr. Martin was going to do, and he of how he was going to do it. As a result, the lovely music which Montemezzi has given the orchestra alone during the scene was robbed of much of its effect because the attention was distracted from it.

Mr. Baklanoff and Mr. Mardones, a fine pair of singers, and Mme. Villani, when they held the stage, made their scenes deeply impressive. Mr. Moranzoni, the conductor, deserves credit for much of the effectiveness of the performance. It remains a mystery how such a good conductor as he could have misjudged the acoustics of the house so far as to let his orchestra play as much too loud as it did on the opening night, and there were traces of the same fault in the first act last night. But he made amends by his evident understanding of the beauties and refinements of Montemezzi's score and his fine expression of them.

As for the opera itself, which there is no good reason for thinking may be heard here again this season, it holds still all the attractions for discerning listeners which, when it was produced three seasons ago at the Metropolitan, secured it recognition as one of the most significant operatic works a modern composer has written.

GOVERNOR BAZAAR GUEST.

Will Attend Fete of Sixty-ninth Regiment Tonight.

Major Philip E. Reville, in charge of the depot unit of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, and one of the managers of the relief bazaar now being held in the Sixty-ninth Armory, at Twenty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue, said last night that Governor Whitman will be guest of honor at the bazaar tonight. The depot battalion will leave the armory at 8 o'clock tonight and march to the St. Regis Hotel and act as an escort for the Governor to the armory.

The managers of the bazaar have designated next Tuesday night as G. A. R. Night, and a special program has been arranged. All the G. A. R. posts of New York, Brooklyn, and the Bronx and the allied and auxiliary bodies and the Spanish War Veterans will be represented.

Last night the chief feature was fancy dances by a class of children.

"Capt. Kidd, Jr.," Premiere Monday

A new play by Rida Johnson Young, entitled "Captain Kidd, Jr.," will be presented by Cohan & Harris next Monday night in the Cohan & Harris Theatre. In the cast will be seen Edith Taliaferro, Zelda Sears, Adele Rowland, Otto Kruger, Ernest Stallard, Charles Dow Clark, Charles Brown, Elmer Grandin, Lincoln Plumer, Westcott B. Clark, Edward Snader, Alf De Corsey. The play was originally called "Buried Treasure" when it was first produced out of town. On the same date "Object—Matrimony" will be transferred to the Forty-eighth Street Theatre, and "Rich Man, Poor Man," the attraction at that playhouse, will take to the road.

Benefit for Children of Petrograd.

An entertainment for the benefit of the destitute children of Petrograd will be given next Monday afternoon at the Princess Theatre under the patronage of the wife of the Russian Ambassador at Washington, the Russian Consul in New York, Yvette Guilbert and others. Among those who will appear on the program will be Marie Tempest, Mme. Guilbert, Minna Gale Haynes, Mme. Pilar-Morin, Roselle Knott, Mrs. McAlister Smith, Hilda Englund, Regina Vicarino, Gareth Hughes, M. Edouard and Mlle. de Kurylo of the Imperial Theatre, Warsaw. An act of "Go To It" and Oscar Wilde's "The Happy Prince" will be features of the program.

Edmund Breese in 'The Scapegoats.'

The Edmund Breese Production Company, a new theatrical firm, will make its first production at Norwalk, Conn., on Nov. 17, and after a brief tour the play will be presented in New York. It is a mystery play by Carlyle Moore, author of "Stop Thief," entitled "Scapegoats." Mr. Breese will play the principal rôle, and his support will be Carleton Macy, Henry Duggan, James Crane, Frederick Forrester, Robert Fraser, Isabelle Lowe, Blanche Shirley, and Lillian Kemble. James Sheagreen, for a number of years Margaret Anglin's manager, holds a similar position in the new concern.

GIRLS EXPLOSIVE WITNESSES

Will Be Sent to Baltimore to Testify in Robbery Case.

Judge Thomas of the Federal District Court issued an order yesterday for the removal of two young women, Rae Bernstein and Annie Smith, from New York to Baltimore, Md., where they are wanted as witnesses against Jacob Miller and Leon Kramer, awaiting trial on the charge of having violated the Interstate Commerce law by carrying dynamite on a passenger train. The men were arrested here on Oct. 28 on the charge of having robbed a jewelry store in Baltimore of $25,000 worth of goods. When their trunks were examined and the dynamite found they were turned over to the Federal authorities.

Assistant United States District Attorney Hershenstein, who asked for the removal of the two women, said that they had been with the prisoners about the time the alleged crime was committed. They denied this, and said that they were in Philadelphia at the time. They consented to go to Baltimore because they said they wanted to establish their innocence.

BROADHURST PLAY IN FILM.

"Bought and Paid For" Is Well Acted on the Screen.

George Broadhurst's melodrama, "Bought and Paid For," which ran for more than a year at William A. Brady's Playhouse when that theatre was new, reached the screen yesterday when a movie version of the play was exhibited at the New York Theatre. Mr. Brady, who produced the play, staged the picture, too, and to make it still more of a family institution, he starred his daughter, Alice Brady, in the rôle created by Julia Dean when the drama was the talk of the town.

"Bought and Paid For" has been translated into a photoplay a little above the average, though it is in no way unusual. It is well acted by Miss Brady and Montague Love, the English actor, who was a member of Cyril Maude's company when he first played "Grumpy," and by Francis X. Coulan, who acted Frank Craven's original rôle of Jimmy Gilly, a part he also played on the stage. Jimmy stood out in the play as a remarkably shrewd bit of character drawing, and a great deal of the original flavor of the slangy shipping clerk has been retained in the picture. The use of many of Jimmy's speeches in the form of subtitles has helped materially in bringing out the humor of the rôle.

The film has been staged in the usual movie manner with apartments bursting with a shellacked palms, flowing fountains, and Rogers groups indicative of great wealth.

THE ELECTION IN DISPUTE.

The extraordinary closeness of the voting in several States makes it practically certain that whatever may be the apparent result as at first declared upon the face of the returns, the election of either candidate will be questioned and disputed. It appears at this writing that Mr. WILSON has 251 electoral votes securely held; Mr. HUGHES at present appears to have 247. In Minnesota and in California the total of the votes cast has not at this writing been reported, and both States are exceedingly close. The result is close also in Indiana, West Virginia, New Mexico, which is now said to be certainly for WILSON, North Dakota, and New Hampshire, with the returns still incomplete. Mr. WILSON will win the election if he gets California or Minnesota and one other of the States still in doubt. Mr. HUGHES must have both Minnesota and California, or either one of them and at least six votes from other doubtful States.

The plurality for WILSON in Minnesota dwindled for some hours last evening from above 4,000 to 360, and then gave place to a small HUGHES plurality. In California the WILSON plurality diminished in a like manner, but the Democratic Committee felt confident that this plurality would be increased by returns from districts believed to be strongly Democratic.

The unofficial declaration of 161 plurality for HUGHES in New Hampshire will, of course, be made the basis for a demand that the votes be recounted. There is no evidence of fraud or of attempted fraud on either side. But both National Committees have engaged counsel, both are vigilantly scrutinizing the returns and the gathering of the returns in the doubtful States, where their appointed representatives have received strict instructions. It is not to be expected that with the great office of the Presidency at stake declared pluralities of a few hundreds either way will pass unchallenged, or that vigilance will be relaxed until the result has been ascertained beyond all doubt. It is not impossible that disputes may arise and contests be begun that for some time will keep the country in doubt as to which candidate has been elected President.

"INTERESTS" IN POLITICS.

Politics throws its roots as deep into the past as a pine tree sends its roots into the ground. That is the explanation of the most persistent and broadest division of the States into Democratic and Republican classes. Slavery made the South agricultural and, therefore, Democratic, through the Democratic tendency toward freedom of trade. The South always had to sell its produce cheap, and always had to buy its manufactures dear, whether it bought them abroad or in the manufacturing North. In either case the price included the duty. Manufactures are increasing in the South, but there is yet no such sentiment for protection as that which influences the Northern States. Even the States along the Mexican border retain their Democratic sympathies unaffected by the Mexican question.

The manufacturing North is, in the main, Republican, with such exceptions this year as Ohio. Ohio's manufactures are rapidly altering its agricultural characteristics. The Granger States have always been radical on the railway question, but that does not make it clear why Minnesota loses its old-time Republican majorities and becomes a "close" State, or why Ohio should not have been attracted by Mr. HUGHES's protectionism. It is difficult to explain Kansas. It has thrown its electoral vote five ways in seven chances, and is a law unto itself. Border questions no more affect the Northern than the Southern border. That is the more surprising because along the Canadian side of the border there is deep feeling over the question of greater freedom of trade with the United States in agricultural products.

There is an Eastern and Western division of the vote as well as a Northern and Southern. West of a line from Louisiana to Minnesota the Republican vote has become increasingly doubtful. Questions local to the Far West, such as the depressed condition of the lumber industry, the relations of the nation to the Orient, are strong in the Pacific States, but the partisan effect of such issues is tangled. The clearest division between East and West is financial rather than industrial. The West is still debtor to the East, although rapidly enriching itself, and believes more strongly than the East in the efficiency of legislation in controlling financial operations of all sorts. "Blue sky" legislation is characteristic of the West and Democracy rather than of the East and Republicanism. The same is true of the guarantee of bank deposits and similar questions. Laws upon such topics have taken their place beside anti-railway laws in the West, while the East has shown stability in its views to the contrary. It is not necessary to enlarge upon the fact that "the interests"—using the phrase in the narrow and obnoxious meaning—are influential in keeping the Eastern States Republican. That is as sure as the division of the vote into Eastern and Western camps. The fact is on the record. The trend of politics lies as much in the operation of factors of this sort as in mere partisanship, and the explanation will endure in the future as it has in the past. The economic determination of politics is as well worth considering as the economic determination of history, of which more is heard.

FROM EMPIRE TO DEMOCRACY.

It would be a great change for Germany to cast aside imperialism, and with it the outworn doctrine of divine right, to make the "Government," that is, the Chancellor, responsible to the Reichstag, not to the Kaiser, to make the Kaiser himself the servant and executive of the people, not their master, to establish the veritable rule of the people as it exists in England, France, and the United States today. That change is surely coming, it is inevitable, for divine right and imperial sway are grotesque anachronisms in a nation made up of intelligent people, but the transformation may be wrought much earlier than has been expected, indeed very soon. It is plainly foreshadowed in the interview given by Chief Permanent Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs ZIMMERMANN to Mr. SWOPE, the correspondent of our neighbor The World, who has recently returned from Germany. Mr. ZIMMERMANN is a statesman of great ability and prominence in Germany. That he should have given such an interview and authorized its publication is in itself highly significant, but the import of his language is unmistakable.

"It would be useless and dangerous to deny," said Mr. ZIMMERMANN, "that the trend of political thought "in Germany today is toward liber-"alization." There is antagonism, certainly the Prussian landed aristocracy, the conservative and military class, will not consent without a struggle to the overthrow of the imperial system which gives them great influence and privilege. But the conclusion is irresistible, from what Mr. ZIMMERMANN said, that the demand of the people is one not to be denied. "There is a subsurface movement of vast political portent," says Mr. SWOPE.

The immediate change, the change that may come before the conclusion of peace, is indicated with all frankness by Mr. ZIMMERMANN:

> The important feature of the change will be the erection of direct responsibility of Government to the people through their representatives in the Reichstag. Under the present system there is actually no such responsibility. The Chancellor is at the head of the political Government. He owes his responsibility to the Kaiser, by whom he is created.

The various secretaries are "merely bureau chiefs," and to the Chancellor alone they are responsible. It was during the discussion of the Zabern affair that the Chancellor pointed out that "the Government was not an-"swerable to the Reichstag for the "course it pursued, but was answer-"able alone to the Emperor." This change is all-important. It is the very essence of liberalization. When the Ministry is made answerable to the body of legislators elected by the people, then the Prime Minister, or Chancellor, becomes the head of the Government and the people become their own rulers. It matters not what the man who wears the crown may call himself, whether Emperor or King, though the imperial title would be an absurdity, and though for custom's sake he may speak of "his" people and call them his subjects, they are not in truth his subjects at all, they are his masters, and their own. England has a King, but England is a democracy, like the United States. It is governed through a responsible Ministry.

"A certain measure of reform" will be accomplished before the war has reached an end, according to Mr. ZIMMERMANN. The real body of the reformation will be deferred until peace comes. That is not so certain. "Sub-"surface movements of vast political "portent" do not shape themselves to anybody's prediction or anybody's convenience. The world has wondered why this change did not take place long ago in Prussia; it should have resulted from the revolution of 1848; it has wondered why the Germans have so long endured imperialism and militarism. They are united, wonderfully united for the prosecution of the war, but their endurance is sorely tried and liberalizing reform and the end of the war may have a relation one to the other not yet suspected in imperial circles.

It has been the belief of THE TIMES, long ago expressed, that the German people would ultimately and by a common movement seek freedom and peace. We appealed to the men of German race in this country, who have had experience of freedom, to use their influence to that end among the Germans of the Fatherland. That counsel may to some extent have been heeded, but the organs of German-American opinion scornfully rejected it; they have been furiously, blindly, devoted to imperialism and the military ideal. The voting on Tuesday in centres where there is a large German-American population gives very solid reasons for doubting whether the readers of the German-language newspapers have shared their opinions. It seems to us that the German-language papers could print no more important news than these letters of Mr. SWOPE published by The World. Surely they ought to give space in their columns to news from the Fatherland vastly more interesting to their readers than anything they are now printing.

"KNIFING," BUT NOT BY TAMMANY.

There is nothing in the returns to support the contention made in some quarters that Mr. WILSON failed to receive the loyal support of the Democratic organization in the city. The revised figures for all the boroughs give him a majority of 40,069. Mr. DOWLING, the candidate of Tammany Hall for the Presidency of the Board of Aldermen, for whose election it may readily be believed the organization did its best, secured in the same territory 30,888. ROBERT L. LUCE, Tammany candidate for the Supreme Court in Manhattan and the Bronx, was defeated, utterly, running 35,000 behind Mr. MULLAN, candidate of the Republicans and Progressives, and 20,000 behind his own Democratic running mate for the two contested Supreme Court vacancies, Mr. MITCHELL, who was elected.

There is everything to indicate that Mr. WILSON received in the city all the votes the organization could muster for him. The causes of the phenomenal Democratic slump in the city must be sought elsewhere. The safest assumption is that division upon questions ordinarily nonpolitical, and foreign, certainly, to the issues of normal American politics, accounted in the main for the local result. An examination of the appended table of the votes and pluralities of the candidates for President, Governor, Senator, and President of the Board of Aldermen will serve to dispel illusions about "knifing" by Tammany:

THE FEDERAL CLEARANCE SYSTEM.

The Federal Reserve check clearance system is growing larger and cheaper. In New York City the clearing house items of the Federal Reserve Bank are now in a minority to the out-of-town items cleared. For the month ended with Oct. 14 the daily average of the bank's clearing house items was 3,858 and of out-of-town items 31,716. This is particularly interesting to the drawers of small checks, for the total of out-of-town checks cleared here was only $202,473,032, against $320,035,719 for the smaller number of clearing house items.

The number of items is important, for the charge is per item, not per cent., and has fallen to 1 cent. The Richmond bank reports a cost of clearing of 3.18 cents per $1,000. Fifteen thousand banks are now clearing over 200,000 items daily. The average cleared daily is $97,666,107. Until this system was established business men paid an average of $2 per $1,000 for cashing checks which ought to have been paid to them in full by their drawers, and for a service which the banks are performing at a cost small in comparison. The charge is for the transmission of money, and the money is not transmitted for the most part. The transfer under new and old systems alike is by book entries, generally speaking, the banks not being express companies.

The new system is making its way on its merits, there being nothing compulsory about it. But nonclearing banks are finding themselves asked for cash over their counters, and they are finding it more convenient and cheaper to clear than to pay cash. The cost to the Federal banks is so trivial that there is a suggestion that perhaps it will be absorbed among miscellaneous expenses, and that even the small charge now made to bank customers may disappear. This will be more popular with bank customers than with the banks, which have been protesting against the loss of their perquisite.

The weekly clearings between Federal banks at Washington through the gold fund established there for that purpose are also making quiet progress worth attention and approval. On a recent day $158,000,000 was cleared with the use of less than ten millions of gold. On that day the gold fund totaled $158,558,000, but the work was done by bookkeeping entries. In the words of the circular statement: "The economical working "of this system is apparent, and its "potential usefulness to the country "is manifest."

UNNECESSARY LITIGATION.

For several months a joint committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the State Bar Association has been considering plans for the prevention of unnecessary litigation, and now a report has been submitted to the two organizations. The greater part of it consists of rules for the guidance of business men, although many others will find them useful. These rules relate to contracts of all kinds, wills, methods of arbitration, and the duties of executors. We are impressed by their clearness and simplicity. Every man engaged in business should read them. And they should be known to every one who has made or intends to make a will. Undoubtedly they will be published in a form convenient for general distribution.

The committee's aim is to prevent litigation by directions concerning action which is the cause of it and by agreements reached before suit; also to promote settlements by arbitration, or otherwise, after disputes have been taken into court. There is much litigation which could be avoided by obedience to the rules set forth in the report. It increases the cost of business and thus imposes an unnecessary tax upon the public. It may be that the work undertaken by this joint committee was suggested by what the Arbitration Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, under the direction of Mr. CHARLES L. BERNHEIMER, has accomplished in the last few years by good advice and wise action in hundreds of commercial disputes. It has had the support of many prominent members of the bar, and we are confident that the beneficial effect of the recommendations made will be seen for a long time to come.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Seeking News by Telephone.

Much as the telephone is valued by everybody and enormous as is its potential utility, that perhaps most wonderful invention of the nineteenth century is not yet old enough to have produced a sufficiently widespread recognition of its intrinsic limitations, especially in newspaper offices. This leads to occasional misuses and excessive demands, the result of which is failure to secure all the advantages that would follow if every resort to this precious form of communication were at once wise and considerate.

These reflections are prompted by the fact that the present election has been one of the times when the telephone, besides creating precious, almost priceless, facilities for the newspapers, has also caused not a little inconvenience to them—so much of it, indeed, that it has been found necessary in many offices to emphasize, by the adoption of new rules in regard to the answering of inquiries, the fact that the first task and duty of a newspaper is to send out information in printed form. Nothing, obviously, can be allowed seriously to interfere with the accomplishment of that purpose, and there has been much of such interference in the last two days because a great number of people have "called up" what ever happened to be their favorite paper and asked for election news.

Their desire for information is legitimate and even commendable, and there is in every office an inclination to satisfy it whenever the possibility to do so exists. So numerous have these inquiries been, however, that they have overwhelmed the newspaper wires, to the frequent preventing of their use for the collecting of news through the established channels, as well as to the taking up of the time of the office staff to an intolerable extent. The consequence has been a forced withdrawal, for the present, of a privilege the exercise of which by the public would tend both to delay the issuing of the paper and to make its contents inferior to what they would otherwise be.

In other words, the place to look for election news is in the paper or on the bulletin boards. It cannot be given to individual seekers for it over the telephone.

A Good Plan, but It Didn't Work.

A peculiarity of this Presidential election is that for once a long established and usually successful method of determining from scanty data the results of the balloting has worked less efficiently than it was confidently expected to do by those familiar with its possibilities.

Everybody has noticed, presumably, that in most elections correct announcement of defeats and victories for the principal candidates is made soon after the returns begin to come in. That can be done when conditions are not exceptional, because from the first few returns, when due consideration has been given to the sort of voting group from which they come, there can be deduced something more than a probability as to what has been done by other groups of the same kind. In any one State, for instance, the influences that have been exerted on its several farming communities in the immediate past have been much the same, and when returns from a few dozen or scores of them show for a particular candidate a gain or loss, as compared with the candidate of the same party at the last election, the chances are that the farmers all over that State have changed their minds to about the same extent. Like reasoning and computation apply to the cities, and the experts in such calculation can often come amazingly close to the total vote of a State, though they have heard from only a small part of it.

That the plan proved fallacious Tuesday evening and led to announcements that afterward had to be withdrawn or modified was due to the confusing effects of wholly unfamiliar issues and to recent large displacements of population. It was no longer safe to view a man as a farmer or a mechanic or an urban capitalist, for he was also vehemently interested in the outcome of the war in Europe. So, too, broad areas once largely or wholly agricultural have recently been turned to manufacturing and have a large infusion of new inhabitants.

The result of these and other changes was that the settlement of the Presidential contest was too soon admitted by all the pencil experts in newspaper offices, and by all of them outside except the few whose business it is to claim victory and deny defeat on what may be called general party principles. Newspapers used to do the same thing, but now most of them seek only to tell the truth and to do it as soon as possible. Hence, alas! we all went wrong for hours and did our exulting or lamenting too soon.

Nobody Was Hurt or Troubled.

Another opportunity for commending the New York police is provided by their handling of the election night crowds on Broadway and in its vicinity. And there were some new dangers against which precautions had to be taken—dangers due to the fact that in many places, just now, there are huge caverns under both street and sidewalk. The covering of these abysses is sufficient for ordinary traffic, but there was proper disinclination to subject it to the strains brought to bear by great masses of humanity in motion, and hence the established habits of election night multitudes had to be subjected to a considerable amount of interference by the police.

This decidedly delicate task was performed with skill and tact, so that no tempers were seriously ruffled and no unnecessary irritations were excited. In other words, the police were intelligently efficient, and knew how to get obedience without making any offensive display of force. There were no accidents and no panics, and clubs were not trumps.

But some of the credit must go to the crowds. They showed a commendable amount of cheerful docility, and, as they heeded requests, there was no need to give stern orders. And, seemingly, everybody in the crowds was happy. They had all seen Presidents come and go before, and they were fairly confident that the United States would survive, whatever the result of the election might be. That conviction conduces to equanimity, whether your own man wins or loses, and the New York crowd is made up largely of practical philosophers.

A REPLY TO HALIL BEY.

Examination of the Charge That Armenians Are to Blame.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to make a few remarks regarding a statement made by Halil Bey, Turkish Foreign Minister, and recently published in THE NEW YORK TIMES. There is a natural tendency in every human being to exculpate himself from a culpable act. Halil Bey proves this psychological fact in saying, in behalf of his Government, that "Armenians had none but themselves to blame for all their woes."

A retrospective view of all the events, in chronological order, will prove the absurdity of such a statement. The Minister, whose sympathy for the Armenians is fully appreciated, has a rather hard task in trying to justify his Government in committing the crimes which will stain the honor of the Osman for generations. The Bey is kind enough to admit that the Armenians are the most progressive element in the empire, and yet he fails to give the real reasons why such a progressive race should be treated with a policy of extermination and annihilation. Is it because they are not coreligionists, or is it because they are an impediment in the path of the retrogressive element—a moral force protesting against misrule and injustice and advocating equal rights?

Whatever may be the case, Halil Bey utterly fails in telling the truth when he makes the statement that, "in spite of all the precautionary advices, Armenians rose when Russians invaded Asia Minor." What a ridiculous and erroneous statement! How could a non-existing force rise? Nothing but the ghosts of the dead and the cry of the dying could have risen against the Government. Armenia was almost evacuated and deprived of the flower of her life before the war began; all the able-bodied men were serving in the Turkish Army. The young Armenian, during the Balkan war, had fought side by side with his Turk compatriot and given his life for the country; only children, women, and old men were left behind. The Turkish Cabinet had already compensated the faithful services of those prominent Armenian Ministers whom the Bey liked so well by murdering them or sending them into prison and exile. These men would have done anything within the limits of honor and reason to avoid a catastrophe. Halil Bey himself and the world at large know very well the reconciliatory spirit of the Armenians, who, after being subjected for centuries to the maltreatment—massacres, murder, and plunder—of an abominable Government, gave their assistance and hearty co-operation to the Young Turks when the Sultan was deposed and a constitutional form of government proclaimed.

Assuming for a moment that some did resort to self-defense, does this justify the Government in using the most barbaric and cruel means toward the deportation and extermination of the helpless and innocent?

FOR TUBERCULOUS SOLDIERS

Mrs. Wharton Explains the Work of the Franco-American Sanatoria.

Paris, Oct. 20, 1916.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since the publication of my letter asking for help for the French tuberculous war victims I have heard that there was some uncertainty in America as to the specific object of our undertaking and as to its relation to other enterprises of the same kind in France.

In especial, I have been asked in what way our Franco-American tuberculosis sanatoria differ from the Government sanatoria organized by the French Ministry of the Interior, (under the Superintendence of M. Brisac,) for which the Duchesse de Richelieu has made so successful an appeal in the United States. I can best answer by quoting from our circular:

> The Tuberculous War Victims' Sanatoria work in direct connection with the French Government, receiving tuberculous soldiers when they leave the Government sanatoria and keeping them till they are cured.

It will be seen that the two enterprises are neither conflicting nor on parallel lines. Our work is, in fact, designed to supplement the Government sanatoria, to care for the soldiers when they leave the latter, and to prolong their treatment until they can return to their ordinary life without danger to the community. The tuberculosis menace is so terrible in France that every serious endeavor to remedy it should be warmly supported; but the public is naturally right in wishing to be sure that the organizations it assists do not overlap.

Here is the verdict of M. Justin Godart, Under Secretary of State for Department of Health of the French Ministry of War, on the work we have undertaken:

> Your organization will constitute a highly valued and beneficent support to the work of caring for the many soldiers who, as a result of the war, are menaced with tuberculosis or have already developed it. In this respect I especially commend your plan of creating, in different parts of France, a series of sanitary stations. No pains will be spared to insure to your undertaking, together with whatever support it may require, that independence which I agree with you in regarding as essential to its success and to the efficacy of its action. I need not add that from now on you are authorized to announce that the co-operation of the Tuberculeux de la Guerre is accepted by the Service de Sante and the work placed under its patronage.

Let me add to this explanation my warmest thanks for the response already made to my former letter. Our trying-out hospital has now been open for three weeks, and our first sanatorium of 100 beds will be opened before Christmas, and I earnestly beg for donations to found single beds, ($600,) or wards of twenty beds, ($12,000.)

Gifts of money should be sent to Walter Berry, Treasurer, 14 Rue Saint Guillaume, Paris.

Gifts in kind should be addressed to the office of the "Tuberculeux de la Guerre," 61 Rue de Varenne, Paris.

Alarming Our Neighbors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article this morning entitled "Colombia's Protest" spoke very wisely of the expediency of cultivating the friendship and good-will of the Latin American countries. The good-will has an economic value when we consider that Colombia and the other republics are among our most important customers. In this connection it might be appropriate to remark that the campaign oratory of the last few months has not been conducive to such good understanding. It is unfortunate at any time to make foreign policies the bone of contention between parties; Republicans and Democrats are supposedly divided only upon questions of domestic policy, and under ordinary circumstances present a united front to foreign countries. A suspicious neighbor like Colombia may find it hard to realize that the noisy advocacy of war with Mexico or the continued denunciation of doubtful outrages committed by Mexicans upon American citizens, or the assertions that we have acted with perfidious intent in our dealings with Mexico and Haiti are largely the disturbances of election time. If there is anything neither party wants it is to carry our arms into Mexico and to bring war to a country now struggling with its own turbulent population. The country needs help, not threats of aggression. War would benefit no one, least of all the United States.

It is to be hoped that Nov. 7 will mark the end of the present type of oratory, and that denunciations of our policy toward Mexico will cease to be headlined in the public prints. As THE TIMES has said, our relations with our Southern neighbors require more just and tactful treatment.

PRESCIENCE.

One thinks of many things at times like this,
While waiting in the trenches to attack—
Of half-forgotten griefs, an hour of bliss,
A waltz one had, a hunt behind the pack!

They say a dying man lives over all
His life in just the passing moment's space;
It may well be that one about to fall
May live old joys—revisit some loved place.

If that be so, then, when our cresting charge
Sweeps o'er yon trench line, as it shall, and soon,
I'll pause a moment by a river's marge
And watch the waters 'neath the peaceful moon.

Then she shall steal beside me and her hand
Be clasped in mine an instant ere we part.
So—at the last—I'll know and understand
All that was hidden in her wilding heart.

• • • •

The Captain's passing down the line! I feel
The battle thrill that tingles through the air!
He cautions us to silence and cold steel—
We're moving out to storm the German lair!

• • • •

Perhaps they're sleeping!—Heavens, what a flare!
They've thrown the whole of hades down the hill—
They've swept the smoking, shaking hillside bare!

• • • •

'Tis strange; I'm cold—numb to my finger tips!
The fighting must have ceased—I hear no roar!
I'm conscious but of kisses on my lips,
And faint, far waters lapping on the shore!

THE WILL OF FRANCE AT THE DECISIVE HOUR.

The Reply of Senator Berenger to the Confident Assertions of German Press and Public Men.

By HENRY BERENGER,
Senator of France and Secretary of the Army Commission.
Translated from the Matin.

The great events which are passing in Europe are not the result of circumstance. They are the reward of will. It was because our armies willed that they did not perish on the Marne, later on the Yser, and finally before Verdun. It is because we have willed to survive victory that we have established behind our armies an arsenal commensurate with our armies, which, no more than they, can either be destroyed or exhausted. It is because M. Aristide Briand willed the unity of front and unity of action that he has been able successively to rally under our flags, by this lucky symbol, all the free people of France.

It will be an historic honor to our President of the Council to have given, by the clairvoyant force of will, to our country the diplomacy for her war—a diplomacy capable of inspiring heroism in our soldiers and work in our factories.

Those who, like us, for many months, have exercised upon his acts the parliamentary control with the independence and energy which belong to it, should today especially render to M. Aristide Briand that homage due the complete statesman of our warring France. Hence, we are able to place full confidence in the head of our government and should even encourage him to inspire anew among all that indomitable will to win which is already, for our enemies, the token of their defeat.

But the task is yet far from being completed. The more the completion seems favorable the more should we redouble our efforts to advance it.

However glorious the sun may rise, in 1917, not a Frenchman should forget that in October, 1916, the invader is still in France; that the Boches are still twenty leagues from the capital, and that they still blacken by their infamies ten of our departments.

Nor should we ever ignore the fact that Germany goes on extracting from her mines and ours more coal for her engines and factories, more iron for her cannon, her shells, and her rails.

If they lack bread and meat they do not lack oil and steel. Nor do they lack laborers, for they have our prisoners and our outraged population.

We must expect assaults of fury still more violent, as their self-deception becomes more bitter.

Their angry declaration of war against Rumania, their grotesque celebration of the return of the Deutschland, their fetichistic supplanting of Falkenhayn by Hindenburg, and their endless manifestoes concerning universal annexation, all proclaim among those disappointed barbarians the supreme crisis of Pan-Germanic delirium.

To become convinced of this it is only necessary to read the enemy's papers—the Tag, which advertises a great offensive in the west in order to impose "a German peace"; the Frankfurter Zeitung, which announces for Germany "the end of the great period of the strategic defensive" and the advent "of positive operations"; the Deutsche Tageszeitung and the Tägliche Rundschau, which comment in the same precise manner on the declarations of the chief of the German General Staff on the Somme.

The time is not, therefore, one which should alone keep us strictly vigilant; it should still more cause us to redouble the activity in our chancelleries, in our general staffs and in our making of the materials of war. We should ask our Governments to press home, without delay, our advantages of the entire eastern front as well as those on the western. We should profit by the daylight which is still long, and let the great guns of all our armies speak—those of Saloniki and the Strypa, like those of the Alps and the Somme.

No isolated front, no independent considerations, whether in the Balkans or elsewhere, should either obscure or obstruct the general conduct of the operations of the Entente.

How can we forget that in a few weeks the port of Archangel will be closed, and that it is of the greatest importance to the Entente—to every member of the Entente—to have established, before this period, between Russia and us the Mediterranean supply line for food and munitions?

The concentrated Rumanian and Russian armies, the army of Saloniki—so powerful today with more than 400,000 troops, supplied with guns and all necessary material, trained and drilled during long months in its intrenched camp—ought to be fully ready to realize the most just and decisive views of M. Aristide Briand by co-operating without delay with the general operations of the Entente.

More than ever we should impose everywhere on our enemies that diplomatic and military initiative which all recognize as the superiority of a force indomitable in its right.

We must bring to their knees those who have boasted that they would force Europe to hers. The people of Paris and of France—this great people, one and inseparable since the memorable days of the Marne—have well understood the lesson of the eleventh hour.

In these days of anniversaries France does not forget her great dead in the renaissance of life which represents the European coalition today very nearly complete.

Without those who sacrificed themselves in the days of threatened catastrophe, where now would be the munitions of the factories, the treaties of diplomats, and the successful results of the alliances?

More now than ever before may their example be present among us! May each one of us remember that the final decision will alone belong to the best armed and to the best organized!

Austro-Germany is already vanquished diplomatically. It remains to achieve this in a military sense.

If to bring this about we must make more guns and shell, and if to make them we need more workers and more machines, and if we have to send forth more soldiers, workmen, and tools, why, let us ask of our civil and military chiefs what we have asked of them before—the decision, always the decision!

Senator and Secretary of the Army Commission.

WHY OFFICERS RESIGN.

A Militiaman Answers the Charge That They Lack Patriotism.

New York, Nov. 6, 1916.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

During the last week you have published some very harsh things about the eight hundred and odd National Guard officers who have resigned since their regiments were called out for border service. I should like to demonstrate that the motives which impelled most of those resignations are a greater disgrace to the honor of the nation than to that of the individuals who have acted upon them.

When the National Guard was called out last June, officers and men alike thought that war was imminent, and very willingly threw their personal interests to the winds. Any one of those officers who are now publicly accused of cowardice could have escaped there and then by refusing to take the Federal oath. Whatever may be our present opinion of their courage, we must concede that there was one occasion, at least, on which they were not found wanting.

When the guard reached the border war had seemingly been averted and every one hoped to get home in the course of two or three months. The first hint that our service might be considerably prolonged was contained in an announcement, made by General O'Ryan at the end of July, to the effect that the New York State guard might remain in Texas until next year. That utterance called forth my letter of July 30, (published by you on Aug. 6,) in which I predicted the collapse of the guard and the advent of universal military training.

Three more months have passed and many regiments which were among the first to reach the border are still there. Others which arrived later have been relieved, and there are still others which have not left their home States and appear to have been excused from border service entirely. The general impression seems to be that the guardsmen now on the border are there for an indefinite stay.

The only reason which has been given by the Administration for the retention of the guard in Texas and elsewhere is that the bandit raids have ceased since its arrival. Northern Mexico is in a state of anarchy and will probably remain so for years. As long as this condition exists there will always be the possibility of raids by bands of irresponsible Mexican criminals which the popular mind seems to confuse with the forces of the Carranza Government. If the United States is committed to a policy of non-intervention (to avoid confusing ourselves we will disregard Pershing!) it becomes its absolute duty to prevent those criminals from crossing the frontier to murder or rob its citizens. This is a form of police duty which most of us do not consider to be properly the work of the National Guard and is certainly not the purpose which we had in mind when we voluntarily took the Federal oath in June. It is our belief that for many years to come there will be need of a permanent border patrol. Such a force cannot be created from the National Guard nor, apparently, from the regular army, which is now, as always, numerically weak. Our feeling is that it can be raised if proper inducements are made in the way of pay, but we see no signs of action and are correspondingly depressed.

Do you wonder that we chafe at the overwhelming sacrifice which we alone in this whole nation are asked to make? Many of us have given our time, our income, our future and, in fact, our all without hope of relief, while thousands of men of military age minus obligations, and of little immediate economic value, escape entirely. Is it really surprising that those who are fortunate enough to be officers consider the national demands unreasonable and escape through the only avenue which is open to them? Let those condemn them who sit at home wielding the pen and sacrificing little but ink to their ideals. We who remain on the border doing our duty with very mingled feelings and a great contempt for the national conscience will exonerate them, believing that if this country ever really needs men most of these ex-National Guard officers will come forward just as readily as or more so than the vast majority of their fellow countrymen. They, at least, have already done just a little more for the flag than 99 per cent. of those who wave and applaud it.

NATIONAL GUARDSMAN.

The German War Code.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May not the verisimilitude of Dr. Richard Gottheil's story, as told under the head "Was France Aggressor"—when the Koelnische Zeitung is quoted as having said frankly: "Circumstances often compel us to swerve from the right path and to answer lies by lies. This is the only way to silence the liars. When our soldiers' strong arms have prevailed, we shall be glad to return to our habit of strict frankness"—find support in the following citation, equally brutal in its frankness, from the German War Book, (Chap. II.):

> Bribery of the enemy's subjects with the object of obtaining military advantages, acceptance of offers of treachery, reception of deserters, utilization of the discontented elements in the population, support of pretenders and the like, are permissible; indeed international law is in no way opposed to the exploitation of the crimes of third parties (assassination, incendiarism, robbery, and the like) to the prejudice of the enemy.
> Considerations of chivalry, generosity, and honor may denounce in such cases a hasty and unsparing exploitation of such advantages as indecent and dishonorable; but law, which is less touchy, allows it.

These amazing admissions suggest that the editor of the Koelnische Zeitung and the compilers of the War Book must have enjoyed, if they ever read the essay in anti-Lissauer days, the cynical humor of De Quincey's "Murder as a Fine Art." That essayist held murder objectionable because ultimately it led to indecorum. When a man once begins to commit murder habitually, he cautioned, very soon the assassin comes to think little of robbery, "and from that he goes to drunkenness and Sabbath-breaking, and from that to incivility and procrastination."

A Shipping Revival.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I be allowed to record my appreciation of the editorial article entitled "American Shipping Revival"? It is excellent that there should be a revival of the business of building ships in American yards, but we are still a long way from enjoying an "American Shipping Revival," which can only be said to exist when all classes of freight producers unite in the insistent demand that the control of the ocean transportation of American products shall be in American hands and the goods themselves as nearly as possible carried in American bottoms. Here is the key to the whole situation, and the proof of my statement lies in the fact that Great Britain, the most astute of maritime nations, has just closed her shipyards to the building of vessels for foreign nations.

This should be a warning to us that if we are to have a real shipping revival it must be in the construction of ships—not to assist foreigners in keeping us from our place on the sea, but for our own carrying trade; so that we may carry our own goods in our own bottoms and not have their delivery jeopardized by the action of foreign competitors who may or may not take pleasure in our success.

MISS GREER, KIN OF BISHOP, IS A BRIDE

He Performs Marriage Ceremony of His Granddaughter and Robert C. Myles, Jr.

IN CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN

Chancel of St. James's Chapel Like a Garden—Bride Walks with Father—A Quiet Wedding.

The wedding of Robert C. Myles, Jr., a son of Dr. Robert Cunningham Myles and Mrs. Myles of 875 Park Avenue, and Miss Dorothy Greer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Greer of 126 East Fifty-sixth Street and Lawrence, L. I., and a granddaughter of the Right Rev. David H. Greer and Mrs. Greer, was solemnized at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights. It was a small wedding—although a large one in St. Bartholomew's Church had been planned—owing to mourning, and none except relatives and a few close friends were asked.

The ceremony took place in St. James's Chapel, the chapel built in the Cathedral in memory of the late Bishop Henry Codman Potter. It is much larger than any of the other chapels, and the chancel was turned into a garden by the arrangement of tall growing plants and large white ball chrysanthemums as though growing in a garden. Bishop Greer, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks of St. Bartholomew's Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who walked with her father, wore a short frock of white satin shirred full around the waist, with a folded girdle. The court train fell from the shoulders, where it was held with pearl clasps, and a Medici collar rose from it at the back, forming a ruff effect. The long tulle sleeves were trimmed with cords and the gown was embroidered in pearls. The voluminous tulle veil fell from a coronet of tulle and orange blossoms and flat folds at the back, the top of her blonde coiffure being left unveiled. Her flowers were lilies of the valley and white orchids. The bride's only attendant was her little cousin, Miss Constance McLane, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. McLane, (Miss Mary C. Greer,) who wore a white mull frock with many ruffles, a blue sash, and a small brown tulle hat wreathed with flowers, and carried a wicker basket filled with yellow roses.

Mr. Myles had his brother, Beverley R. Myles, for his best man, and the ushers were Charles G. Moller 3d, O. Carley Harriman, Edward H. Clark, and Francis Brooks of Boston, the last a cousin of the bride.

The ceremony was followed by a small reception at Bishop's House, the home of the Rev. Dr. Greer and Mrs. Greer. Those who received included Mrs. Greer, the bride's grandmother, in gray velvet and embroidered gray chiffon, with hat to match; Mrs. Lawrence Greer, in brocaded blue chiffon; Mrs. Myles, in dark blue satin and georgette crêpe, and Miss Jean Greer, in gray chiffon trimmed with fur.

Mrs. Myles was a débutante of less than a year ago, and her engagement was announced on Dec. 31, 1915. Mr. Myles was a student at Yale and was to have been graduated last June, but left the university to go with the banking firm of Harriman & Co. On his father's side he is a descendant of Paul Russell of Hereford, England, who founded the family of that name in New England, of which James Russell Lowell was a member.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

Adolph Lewisohn to Display Enormous Plants in Museum Tonight.

Six trucks of enormous chrysanthemum plants, the finest lot ever shown by any one in the country, guarded by mounted police, came down from Adolph Lewisohn's Heatherdell Farm, Ardsley, N. Y., yesterday afternoon to be placed on exhibition at the Fall Chrysanthemum Show of the Horticultural Society of New York, which opens at the American Museum of Natural History tonight.

There are four great pyramids or circles, solid masses of blossoms, a pink and a white one, between twelve and thirteen feet in diameter, and a couple of white ones more than ten feet each in diameter. Two pillars of chrysanthemums, yellow and pink, are ten feet high and four in diameter at the base. Two great fans of chrysanthemums are unique, being in two colors, one bronze and white and the other yellow and white, each side one color. They are twelve feet in diameter by seven high.

The pink circular plant which occupies the central place in the big foyer of the Museum, and shows the maximum of perfection to which the chrysanthemum may be brought, is contrasted with two small hanging baskets on either side containing the original little yellow chrysanthemum from which all the others have been developed. The baskets hang from rustic branches and are part of the collection grown by John Canning, the Lewisohn gardener.

The plants are the biggest feature of the show.

A FEDERAL SURGEON ON HEALTH REFORMS

Dr. Ramus Makes Some Interesting Predictions Regarding Future of Public Vitality.

EXPECTS FOOD SUPERVISION

Which Will Mean Grappling with the Political Powers—A New Index of Greatness.

Dr. Carl Ramus, a surgeon of the United States Public Health Service, has contributed an article to the current issue of the International Journal of Surgery on "The Future of Public Health," in which he gives an insight into the development and present activities of the Federal medical organization with which he is connected and makes some interesting prophecies regarding its future work. He believes that it will only be a short time before the question of the nation's food will come under public health supervision, as well as the problem of conserving the eyesight of school children. He also says that alcoholism and crime will become integrals of the category embraced in the term "public health matter."

The writer asserts also that future national domination will not be measured by military strength and wealth, but by public education, public sympathy and public health, the three concrete representations of the evolution of psychology denominated by knowing, feeling, willing.

"In former times," says the writer, "the claims of nations to greatness were based almost entirely on their military power and their wealth, meaning of course the power and wealth of a few and the practical enslavement of all the others. Occasionally, where despots affected interest in learning or art, then learning and art were added to the things held in respect. But power was then the outward equivalent of civilization, as indeed it is today in the writings of some of the modern German philosophers.

"In our time power and wealth still hold their places, but they no longer, in themselves, are the criterion of national greatness. With our most enlightened people the greatness or smallness of a nation or State is now mainly judged from three factors that were unknown or held in contempt by most of the ancient Governments. They are: Public education, public sympathy, and public health.

"There is no better argument for the fact of progressive social evolution than this subtle and vital shifting of position of the standard of national greatness. The obvious advances that have been made in education, sympathy, and health are the best proofs of a rapid evolution in all three of the elements of human psychology—knowing, feeling, willing.

"Public health, then, is one of the signs of the times. Its slogan is 'Prevention.' The public health of the future will go far beyond the narrow limits now marked off by the contagious and infectious diseases. With present results and increasing understanding it does not seem rash to say that the handling and elimination of communicable diseases represent merely the first elementary steps. The real public health activities of the future are concerned with the welfare of the people in relation to food, education, work, amusement, and environment; in other words, they are vitally bound up with the evolution of economic conditions. A recent and very interesting publication along this line is Bulletin of the United States Public Health Service, No. 73, entitled, 'Tuberculosis Among Industrial Workers,' by Surgeons Robinson and Wilson.

"The beginnings of this wider public health movement are already before us. The United States Public Health Service was first an organization for the treatment of sick sailors. Later it took over the medical inspection of arriving immigrants. In 1893 it was given charge of the Federal quarantine. After an interval of nineteen years a new era began for the service when Rupert Blue became Surgeon General. He foresaw that public health was a far wider thing than the management of contagious diseases and epidemics, and he laid his plans with that in view.

"First he caused to be brought about several badly needed reforms in the organization of the service in the matter of compensation, allowances and promotions. This stopped the frequent resignation of valuable officers and made the service again attractive to young men of ability and of promise. Having now a corps he could depend on to stay with him, Dr. Blue was in a position to enter the larger field of public health work when the occasions should arise.

"Thus, without in any way interfering with the prerogatives of State Boards of Health, the Public Health Service was soon in active co-operation with the local authorities all over the United States, and in disease matters of the greatest common interest that the Federal Government had never before concerned itself with.

"In the larger view everything that affects the personal health, safety, and efficiency is a public health matter; for example, even the carelessness which leaves an obstruction where it might cause some one to fall and be injured.

"Consequently, the time is near when the very important question of food will come more or less under the public health supervision. And then, naturally, the first thing to attend to will be the denatured food articles that have been foisted on us for so many weary years—white flour, white rice, white sugar. Many people now know that animals fed exclusively on white bread will soon die; while others fed exclusively on whole wheat bread will live and thrive. Also, it is more or less commonly known that beri-beri may result from a diet composed mainly of polished rice.

"Lastly, Surgeon Goldberger of the Public Health Service has apparently proved that the terrible pellegra is due to the lack of essential food elements in the diet. The remarkable and ridiculous part of the situation is that when those of us who know better desire to buy natural flour, rice, and sugar we have to pay more for them than for the wretched denatured products.

"Right here, of course, is where the Public Health Service will have to face its worst enemy—politics. Millions of dollars are invested in factories and refineries where wheat, rice, and sugar are denatured for the deluded public. If many people learn the truth about the denatured stuff that is sold to them they will begin to demand the real articles, and after that it will be only a question of time when the operators will have to go out of business. Hence it does not take a seer to predict the course that will be adopted by the operators when their time of reckoning comes.

"Some may take the view that, as there is still considerable contagious and quarantinable disease in the world, in spite of scientific knowledge of its causation, it is too soon to take up the immense problems so intimately connected with economics. Actually, the difficulty here is the same as will be with the foods—politics. There is no longer any sanitary problem to be solved as to the causation and elimination of many of the contagious diseases, notably those known positively to be carried by mosquitos and flies.

"We know the causes and we know the cures. The problem is entirely political. A wealthy man or corporation owns an area of low-lying land which breeds mosquitos. He is ordered by the Board of Health to drain his land. Usually it costs the owner less to fix a political boss than to drain his land, and the Board of Health is silenced! It is much the same proposition about slaughter houses, which breed flies. It costs less to satisfy politicians than Boards of Health!

"Judging from the past and the present, we may be absolutely certain that such a state of affairs will not be tolerated much longer—any more than slavery or piracy would be tolerated now. Human conscience has evolved beyond the last two, and is near the place where it will repudiate rotten politics. And then the communicable diseases will vanish, like slavery and piracy.

"Another matter that will receive attention from the public authorities of the near future will be the eyesight of school children. Some years ago it was painfully common to see very many children wearing glasses—many more than we see now. Why were there so many of them, so comparatively few now, and none at all a generation or more ago? Just the introduction of a new craze or fad. There is no valid reason for thinking that children's eyes were greatly worse twenty years ago than they were a hundred, except, indeed, for the added eyestrain caused by the imposition of useless and absurd subjects for study, which was rather more common twenty years ago than now.

"Any oculist can find some slight abnormality in almost every eye. When the craze was on it was thought that defective eyes on a large scale were becoming alarmingly common and that glasses were absolutely necessary. Now we know better, realizing that nature easily adjusts herself to moderate defects. But sanity did not come until hundreds of thousands of children's eyes had been ruined by wild and reckless use of glasses.

"It is becoming insistently evident that the only true wealth of nations is the efficiency of their human life. Efficiency is inseparable from health. At present the authorities consider this only as far as public health and safety are affected by violence and by a statutory number of communicable diseases. This is inconsistent with the larger view of health and efficiency. As surely as that the sun rises the time will come when personal health will be the care of the State.

"Economically nothing could be more stupidly wasteful than the present way of charging up the health of a family to the scant wages of the father. In well-ordered States of the future, public health will be counted as one of the chief assets. Medical treatment should be as much the vested right of every citizen as is now rough police protection. Policemen are paid by the State or city. Physicians should be public servants, paid from public funds, with some reasonable arrangement which would allow people to have the doctors of their choice.

"As the public responsibility develops—the community conscience, according to Jane Addams—alcoholism and crime will also become public health matters. Overwork, overeducation, and, in fact, every state or condition which has any bearing on health and happiness, will be seen to be proper subjects for such supervision."

They separated on their honeymoon in the Highlands of Scotland and in August, 1903, Mrs. Gallatin obtained an absolute divorce.

GERMANY EXPLAINS EXILE CASES ANEW

Rebukes France for Not Earlier Protesting Against "Transplanting" Populations.

QUOTES THE HAGUE RULE

Says People in Occupied Territory Would Have Starved and Harvests Have Been Ungathered.

Because the French Government waited three months before issuing its formal protest to neutral countries against the removal by the German authorities of some 20,000 inhabitants of the cities of Lille, Roubaix, and Tourcoing from their homes last April for the purpose of compelling them to do farm work in the occupied part of France, the German Government, in an official statement printed in the North German Gazette, charges the French Government with having made its complaint merely in the hope of intensifying the hatred of the French people for the Germans and of inducing some neutral powers to enter the lists against Germany.

The publication of the protest of the French Government caused considerable comment in many neutral countries, and there was talk of action in favor of the deported civilians, most of whom were women and children, by the United States, Spain, Holland, and the Vatican, but the only power that took definite steps to this end was Spain, whose repeated representations to the German Government obtained a promise that the deported persons would be sent back home as soon as possible after the Fall harvest work was done, according to a cablegram from Paris printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Oct. 8.

The statement by the German Government, in which the act of deportation is referred to as "Verpflanzung," (transplanting), which was briefly mentioned in a cablegram at the time it was issued, reads as follows:

"During the last third of April, 1916, the supreme administration of the German Army transplanted some 20,000 inhabitants of the northern French cities of Lille, Roubaix, and Tourcoing to the country. There is no doubt but that the French Government learned of this measure within a very brief time. Only a short while after the carrying out of this measure the supreme army administration took occasion to enter into correspondence with the representatives of neutral Governments regarding the matter in question. Besides, the Gazette des Ardennes [the newspaper printed in French by the Germans in the occupied territory] has been transmitting communications from the transplanted persons to their relatives since the early part of June. Despite this, the French Government took no stand in the matter and only at the end of July, consequently, after about a quarter of a year, made it the starting point of a systematic campaign of incitation against Germany which has spread over the whole world.

"The reception that these calumnies have found, particularly in neutral foreign lands, affords a fresh incentive for the following detailed exposition:

Neutral Aid Inadequate.

"The actual facts in the course of the affair are follows:

"In spite of the praiseworthy provisions taken by the Spanish-American Relief Committee, the matter of feeding the inhabitants of the populous cities of Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing, in the industrial part of Northern France, was encountering constantly increasing difficulties. Because of the shortage created by the internationally illegal English blockade, food from Germany for the inhabitants of occupied France was available only in insufficient quantities. Furthermore, at the beginning of the year, in view of the repeated threats by the British that they would tighten the blockade, it was impossible to tell how long, if at all, the bringing in of American supplies would be allowed by England. Therefore, if the supreme army administration wished to insure the feeding of the urban population of Northern France in all future emergencies, it was necessary to take energetic measures. In view of the fact that as a consequence of the English blockade large numbers of the city population were without work, while on the other hand, even with the comparative density of population in the rural districts a scarcity of labor was evident there, the transplanting of part of the urban population to the land as such an energetic measure followed automatically.

"An appeal to the inhabitants of the cities asking them to volunteer to work for pay at cultivating the land and gathering the crops met with no success. Therefore, the only thing left to do was forcibly to draft the city people who were able to work. The city commandants in the three northern French cities announced the coming transplanting in a proclamation which was also imparted verbally in the town halls concerned and explained to the local authorities. In this proclamation the reasons for the measure were made public and special attention was directed to the fact that the persons who were to be transplanted would be sent to the interior of the occupied provinces of France and there, far behind the front, would be employed in agricultural work, but not in military tasks, for pay and with their maintenance fully assured. Each of those transplanted was to be allowed to take sixty-six pounds of baggage with him, and the people were advised to get this baggage ready at once.

Calls It a Military Measure.

"The selection of those to be transplanted had to be begun without delay, as the failure of the attempt to get volunteers had already resulted in time being irretrievably lost. The transplanting was a military measure, an action in connection with the war, and was, indeed, unavoidable, for its object was the supplying of labor essential for the insuring of the harvest. The extraordinary favorable April weather necessitated a speeding up of Spring cultivation. This was what decided the time for the selection, which, by the way, was not begun at 3 o'clock in the morning, as is asserted in the enemy and neutral press, but at 5 o'clock, after the population had already been ordered in the proclamation not to leave their homes before 6 o'clock in the morning. A good-sized group of people was gathered together and at the rendezvous. They were first of all fed from the field kitchens that had been requisitioned in great numbers. Then those who by reason of their appearance or special claims in evidence were unavailable or otherwise unadapted for the work were sorted out by the officers in charge of the selection with every possible regard for their personal and family affairs and allowed to return to their homes. During this work of selection the committees were represented by special commissioners, or the delegates of the Red Cross. As a general thing only such young girls were taken along as had been already accustomed to standing upon their own feet and earning their living by their own efforts. All possible consideration regarding the care of old persons was also shown.

"In so far as families, women, and children were concerned, the persons transplanted were quartered with the inhabitants of the country places to which they had been sent under the supervision of the local authorities and under an understanding with them. The single men were brought together in labor colonies.

Says Workers Were Selected.

"Although already during the arranging of the manner of transportation, a material percentage of those who had been originally ordered to go had been released, a special investigation service was instituted after the work of transplanting had been accomplished for the purpose of seeing if any hardships had resulted from circumstances either overlooked at that time or due to later developments. As a result of this investigation, 1,993 of the transplanted persons were sent back.

"The result of the transplanting has been a greater exploitation of the soil and an increase in the harvest. The majority of those sent to the country are by no means dissatisfied with their position, as is evinced by their own remarks, especially as their reception by the country folk was extremely friendly, their food good, and their earnings sufficient. The complaint of a lack of communication with their relatives has been followed by the installation of a regular service for the exchange of news. A great many of these people have declared their readiness to stay in their new places of abode even after the harvest has been gathered and the work of preparing the soil for the new crops finished.

Justified by Law.

"From the standpoint of international law, the measures adopted by the military administration of the occupied district appear to be fully justified by Article 43 of The Hague Rule for Land Warfare, which reads as follows:

After the legal authority has actually passed into the hands of those occupying the country, the latter are under obligation to take all measures possible to restore public order and to maintain the course of public life, and, indeed, according to the laws of the occupied country, in so far as there exists no insurmountable hindrance.

"There is no doubt that provision for the insuring of the feeding of the population belongs to the work of maintaining public order and public life. But, owing to the circumstances prevailing, this could only be done through the agricultural output of the occupied territory itself. If this production was endangered, and if there also was a particular lack of the labor power necessary for the work on the land, then it was necessary to use every available means to prevent a state of distress. In the matter of deciding what measures should be taken in such cases, the laws of the land are the first factor to be taken into consideration, according to the article quoted; but if these laws fail, then, according to the final words of the article, the occupying power has the right to adopt its own supplementary measures in the case of the difficulty thus created. In the case at hand the only way to do away with a state of distress was to compel a part of the population to work in their own interest. That it really was a case of distress, and that the measures taken by the military authorities for the attainment of the object aimed at were imperative and efficacious, is amply proved by the exposition of the circumstances of the case.

"When the French Government only after a quarter of a year came forward with its complaints against the measures adopted by the German Army administration this affords the clearest kind of evidence that it was not a matter of mitigating the alleged sufferings of the inhabitants of Northern France, but a question of creating sentiment adverse to Germany among its own and neutral peoples, and that it had saved this means for a time when the French Government thought it was in need of stronger material for incitement. This time came at the end of July. The comparatively insignificant results of the Somme offensive that had been undertaken with an enormous display of force and announced with an enormous amount of noise, the prospects of a third Winter campaign, the impending opening of the French Chamber of Deputies, and, finally, the wish to mobilize more neutral nations against the Central Powers, all these were plainly the reasons that induced our enemies now to bring out the indignation that they had kept in cold storage for a quarter of a year and rage over it.

"This object would never have been accomplished through a truthful presentation of the actual occurrences. Because of this, the enemy propagandists saw themselves obliged to resort to the expedient, as reprehensible as it is common to them, of giving the desired 'punch' to the exposition of the circumstances by the addition of sensational inventions. The assertion that the persons transplanted had been sent, not to France but to Germany, and that, furthermore, they had been forced to work in the trenches or in the munition factories, was particularly adapted to this end. The limit was reached in the assertion expressed in a letter from Professor Bossi of Genoa to the Popolo d'Italia of Aug. 26 to the effect that the women of Lille had been sent to the country for the purpose of immoral traffic with German soldiers.

"All these assertions bear the self-inflicted brand of being a shameless web of lies, the sole object of which is to drag the German name and the reputation of the German Army in the mire once more, to revive the sinking war spirit of the Entente countries and to incite the neutrals against us."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Queer Behavior of a Market That Tried to Keep Abreast of Returns.

With one eye on the stock ticker and the other on the news tape, Wall Street passed through one of the strangest sessions in its history yesterday. The result of the election seemed certain beyond question when most people retired on Tuesday night, and the sudden change in front shown by the Western returns Wednesday morning upset all calculations. This was seen first in the cancellation of a great many orders just before the opening, but the orders withdrawn were replaced in most cases by others, and the wide fluctuations that reflected the swing, now toward Hughes and now toward Wilson, as the day wore on, were accompanied by the biggest business the Stock Exchange has seen since Sept. 25. The day's total was about 2,000,000 shares, but the net result of the price changes was surprisingly slight for such an excited session.

There were times yesterday when it looked as though Hughes had been able to retain enough of the doubtful States to give him the election, and prices moved rapidly forward, only to fall back again a few minutes later with the receipt of more disturbing news. The final spurt, coming just before the close, was made when the re-election of Wilson appeared to have been accomplished. As the betting odds current at that time were from 8 to 10 to 7 to 5 in favor of Wilson, the theory that the market would follow the election news closely suffered.

At the high point of the day the average price of fifty active stocks stood at a new record, a full point above the previous high record, but at the close the average showed a net loss from Monday's last prices of about ⅜. At the high point United States Steel sold at 126, the best figure ever reached by this issue, but from that level the price declined to 121⅞, recovering again to 124¼, one point above Monday's last price, at the close. The closing was irregular, with the industrials faring better than the rails.

Considering the wide fluctuations that were made by most issues, the net changes from Monday's final prices, generally considered to have been made on the expectation that Hughes would win, were small. Steel swung through a range of 4⅛ points and closed with an advance of 1 point; Utah Copper fluctuated 2⅜, closing with a net loss of 1 point; Central Leather sold 6⅛ above its low price and retained 4½ points at the close. The range of some of the other issues which were prominent for their activity, with their final gains and losses, was just as striking. Westinghouse moved 2⅛ and showed a decline of 1 point; Union Pacific fluctuated 2⅜ and lost ½; American Car and Foundry, 3⅝, with a decline of 2⅜; American Smelting 3 points, with a loss of 2½; American Locomotive ranged over 3½ points and closed unchanged, while Baldwin's range was 4⅛, with no change at the close. Crucible's swing covered 5¼ points, with a net loss of only ¼, while Marine preferred, fluctuating 5½ points, retained a lead of 1⅜. Reading lost 1⅜.

No one had ears for anything but election news, which swept through the financial district from all quarters. Little interest was manifested in the Government crop report, in the war news, even though that included a very brief account of the sinking of the Columbian, an American vessel said to be flying the American flag, or in the October statement of the Kennecott Copper Company, showing only 7,300,000 pounds produced, against 8,000,000 in September and 10,750,000 in July. It was exclusively an election market, with the results still to be written into prices.

LONDON MARKET ACTIVE.

American Securities Advance and Then Decline Later.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Money was abundant and discount rates were quiet today.

The stock market maintained a good tone on the war news, and most of the business was in allied bonds, rubber stocks, and Canadian industrials at steady prices.

American securities were marked up one to two points and were fairly active early on reports of Hughes's election, but the uncertainty of the result later, caused business to slacken, and prices eased off before the opening of Wall Street, which was awaited with interest.

There was no such excitement today among traders in American securities as there was in the days before the war, when dealers assembled as early as 8 o'clock in the morning after an election to engage in heavy transactions based on the outcome. This was due to the fact that Treasury restrictions prevent all but cash transactions. At the opening the market was influenced by the early reports of the election of Hughes. The leading American stocks were marked up $1 to $2 on the expectation that values would be run up in Wall Street.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The New York Stock Exchange Committee on Securities has ruled that contracts for St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company, prior lien mortgage 4 per cent. bonds, due 1950, series A; adjustment mortgage 6 per cent. bonds, due 1955; income mortgage 6 per cent. bonds, due 1960, "when issued," must be settled on Thursday, Nov. 16. Only temporary bonds for $1,000 will be a delivery. Adjustment mortgage bonds and income bonds must be delivered with October coupon attached or the equivalent in cash. Notice regarding settlement of "when issued" contracts for the prior lien bonds and the new stock will be given at some future date.

It is expected that the Finance Committee of the International Mercantile Marine Company, at its meeting this afternoon, will consider, among other refunding plans, one calling for an additional issue of preferred stock to be given to preferred stockholders in lieu of back dividends. Payment on the back dividends is to be made in full, according to this plan, on the basis of par for the new stock. This plan, which has the support of a large group owning a large proportion of the preferred, would necessitate a special stockholders' meeting.

Books close today for the special meeting of the Western Maryland stockholders, on Nov. 17, to vote on the plan of readjustment announced last week by President Gray.

The National Bank of South Africa, R. E. Saunders, Agent, has removed from 6 Wall Street to 10 Wall Street.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Eating Its Cake and Having It, Too.

For once Wall Street seems likely to have two Presidential markets in one year. The result of this year's balloting was just as much in doubt at the close yesterday as it was on Monday. Traders bought and sold stocks in large blocks, and where they caught the swings right had some quick profits, but those who had expected to buy stocks at the opening, either up, on a Republican victory, or down, on a Wilson success, were nonplused by the inconclusive returns, and in most cases canceled their orders. If the votes are nearly all counted today traders will have a better opportunity to back their judgment on the future.

Almost a Record.

With approximately 630,000 shares dealt in yesterday United States Steel common saw its third biggest day since the formation of the company in 1901. On Oct. 6, 1909, the total turnover in this one issue was 633,800 shares, a record which was lowered two years later, when Sept. 22, 1911, saw a total of 716,950 shares done.

An Opportunity in Steel.

Steel at 126 equalled the price reported on Tuesday night as made between speculators at the Waldorf who were impressed with early reports of a Republican victory. If purchases and sales actually were agreed upon at this price uptown, the sellers had excellent opportunities to get the stock for delivery in yesterday's market at prices from 2 to 4 points under the sale quotations, as Steel sold at one time as low as 121⅞. Here was presented a chance to cover at a good profit some unique short sales.

Copper Income Growth.

The Nevada Consolidated Copper Company had net earnings of $3,901,000 in the September quarter, compared with $1,509,600 in the same quarter last year, and $422,725 in the corresponding period in 1914. The figures graphically reflect the prosperity of the copper industry, an income in three months of 1916 being more than nine times greater than in a similar period two years before. The company's output of 8,360,148 pounds in September was the third largest month of the year, being exceeded in June and July only.

Securities Via Submarine.

If the German cargo-carrying submarine Deutschland brought over any securities on her second trip to this country, the bankers in Wall Street have not received them. When the arrival of the submarine was first reported it was said that she carried a valuable lot of securities, but inquiry among banks with German affiliations has failed to confirm the report. In view of the fate of the Bremen, bankers on both sides of the ocean naturally have been reluctant to risk the shipment of securities on submarines, but now that the United States Government has agreed to permit the carrying of mails, beginning with the next trip, it is not unlikely that the submersible will be intrusted with securities in the future, the shippers, of course, taking all possible precautions and using all safeguards to protect themselves in the event of the loss or destruction of the Deutschland.

German War Industries.

An inquiry recently made by a German newspaper into the profits earned by "war industries" in Germany discloses an unusually large increase for the year 1915, compared with 1913, the last year of peace. This fact obtains not only in the case of manufacturers of gunpowder and kindred articles, but applies to concerns engaged in the manufacture of dyestuffs, automobiles, &c. The profits of the Benz Automobile Company, for instance, increased from $1,250,000 in 1913 to over $3,255,000 in 1915. The net profits of the Krupp Company advanced from about $7,500,000 in 1913 to approximately $21,600,000 in 1915. Commenting on the large profits, The London Economist says the figures "give much strength to the argument that the contractors are making far too much out of the misery of the people as a whole, and vigorous agitation is in progress demanding either that the war profits tax should be considerably increased or that there should be a strict revision of the prices paid for war material by the Government."

A Shortage of Cotton Seed.

The Federal Department of Agriculture is urging cotton planters to take thought of next season and to save enough of their best seed to meet the Spring planting needs. The primary factor in the cotton seed shortage is the small cotton crop grown in most of the Southern States this year, because of drought, floods and the boll weevil. Moreover, the seed produced has been going into the mills for crushing, drawn out by offers of twice as much per ton as it has commanded in recent years.

Executor and Administrator— The Difference

An Executor is a person or trust company designated by a person in his will to carry out its provisions.

An Administrator is a person or trust company appointed by the Court to distribute personal property of a person who dies leaving either no will or an invalid will.

An Adminstrator with the Will Annexed is a person or trust company appointed by the Court to carry out the provisions of a will if the executor designated in the will is dead, refuses to qualify, or is incompetent to act, or where no executor is designated.

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York is permitted by law to act as Executor, Administrator, and Administrator with the Will Annexed.

Exercising such functions is not an incident with us, as it is with an individual—it is our business. Acting in such capacities, it is our duty to manage estates with efficiency, economy and conservatism; it is our purpose to give the problems which arise in each estate, personal and interested attention.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Throughout the day the extraordinary condition of uncertainty regarding the result of the Presidential election was the dominating influence in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. United States Steel common occupied the most prominent position in the market operations. More than 80,000 shares of that issue changed hands, it accounting for about one-half of the business. Many other prominent stocks made good gains early and then reacted.

City of Edmonton, Province of Alberta, Canada

Six Per Cent. Treasury Bills

Dated July 1, 1916. Due July 1, 1918. Denomination $1,000. Principal and Semi-Annual Interest (January and July 1st) Payable at New York, Toronto or Edmonton.

In offering this issue of securities, we wish to particularly call your attention to the following facts regarding the City of Edmonton:—

Edmonton is the capital of the Province of Alberta, which has an area of 250,000 square miles, about six times that of the State of Ohio.

Edmonton has a population of about 60,000, having increased from about 19,000 since 1908.

The country surrounding Edmonton is noted for its fertility and agricultural developments, thus giving the community a sound business foundation.

Edmonton has a great resource in the vast coal beds adjacent to the City.

It owns and operates its street cars, telephones, waterworks, power plant and other utilities.

It is a conservative statement when I estimate that Americans have invested in recent years at least one billion dollars in Canadian securities of all types. Consequently the interest of Americans in the progress of Canada is more than that of a neighbor; relatively it closely approaches that of an intimate partnership.
—Louis Guenther in The Financial World, Oct. 28.

The City is a railroad center of great magnitude. Canada's greatest railways, The Grand Trunk Railway, Canadian Northern Railway and Edmonton, Dunvegan & British Columbia Railway, radiate from it. Edmonton is also the terminus of the Winnipeg-Edmonton Line and The Calgary-Edmonton Line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and in addition there are a number of branch lines giving direct connection with the Western and Northwestern parts of the Province.

To call attention to the progress of Canada in spite of war and the conditions co-existent with it in the last two years commends still more the issues of its municipalities, particularly those of a city like Edmonton, which is in a large measure the center of the great Northwestern Canada.

EGYPTIAN SITUATION FORCES COTTON UP

Sensational Advances in Liverpool Cause Rise of 34 Points in New York.

BULLISH CENSUS REPORT

Ginning Figures, Far Below Those of Last Year and the Year Before, Tend to Help Prices.

Although cotton prices yesterday moved with a degree of uncertainty that reflected more or less confusion concerning certain factors, the undertone at times was very steady and the market made a sharp gain. At one time prices had registered a maximum advance of 40 to 45 points over Monday's closing. Part of this upturn was lost before the close, but final quotations were 31 to 34 points net higher.

The census report on ginning was somewhat overshadowed by a sensational advance in Liverpool, where prices were 33 to 34 English points above Monday's closing. Over our Election Day the English market became wildly excited over the situation in Egyptian cotton, and the market in this commodity advanced more than the equivalent of 2c per pound overnight. This represented one of the wildest movements on record and was largely responsible for the sharp advance in the quotations on American cotton. The close in Liverpool was unsettled, at an advance of 25 to 41 English points compared with Monday.

The Census Bureau placed the amount of cotton ginned prior to Nov. 1 at 8,619,063 bales, thus indicating a ginning of 1,313,097 bales since Oct. 18. These figures for the period compare with 1,671,000 bales last year, and 2,207,000 bales two years ago.

This showing was construed as bullish, and the local market opened at an advance of 15 to 33 points. Trading was very heavy, but there was a good deal of liquidation by the old bull element. The West was credited with selling freely, some of the liquidation coming as far as California. Spot firms were good buyers during the first hour.

B. S. Castles issued another bullish interview yesterday, stating that he had bought 10,000 bales of cotton and he believed the price was going to 25 cents a pound.

No one has any idea of the percentage of the crop ginned up to Nov. 1, although some Southern wires say the proportion will run as high as 88 per cent. Some Texas advices say that 90 per cent. has been picked. The Oklahoma Board of Agriculture estimates the crop of that State at 628,000 bales, but the Southwestern traveler of S. M. Weld & Co. takes the view that more than that amount has already been picked.

Market closed irregular.

IRON AND STEEL MARKET.

Ship Steel Bought for as Far Ahead as Last Half of 1918.

Politics have had no effect on the buying of iron and steel, and the rise in prices continues. On leading finished steel products, such as plates, structural shapes and bars, some mills are refusing to make quotations for next year, except on secific amounts to cover contracts in the hands of manufacturing consumers.

The Iron Age in its issue of today says:

"The pig iron market shows a continuance of the excited conditions of the past two weeks, with further sharp advances in price. At the same time, the action of steel products has confirmed the predictions of higher prices and of full occupation of the mills throughout 1917.

"October pig iron output exceeded all expectations. It is the furnace companies' habit to make a spurt in that month and in this case all records were broken with a total of 3,508,840 tons or 113,189 tons a day, against 3,202,366 tons in the thirty days of September, or 106,745 tons a day. The large steel companies, particularly in the Pittsburgh and Chicago districts, strained for great outputs, and were unhampered by the coke shortage which affected some merchant stacks.

"Car orders are growing as prices rise. In the last three weeks fully 36,000 cars have been placed and builders are now beginning to choose between offers, being well booked for the first half of next year and on tank cars for all of 1917."

The Iron Trade Review will say today:

"The excitable trading in pig iron has gone through another week and has lifted prices another $1 to $2 a ton on the average in all districts under heavy buying and a steady shrinkage in offerings by the makers. Many furnaces have joined the ranks of those producers with no metal to sell this side of July, and buyers are forced to bid constantly higher figures to induce the acceptance of orders. Plate makers are fairly swamped with tonnage from the shipyards, and car builders and one large independent boosted his price this week $15 a ton. There has been buying of ship steel in the East as far ahead as the second half of 1918, which sets the pace for extended future orders up to this time. Equipment orders by the railroads still are mounting, and the total of awards of this character for the last week was the largest yet shown."

Post Office News Item.

Postmaster Morgan gives notice that a fraud order has been issued by the Post Office Department against the National Mail Order Brokerage Exchange, at 520 Globe Building, Minneapolis, Minn., which is conducting a scheme for obtaining money through the mails by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises, in violation of Sections 3929 and 4041 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, and that communications addressed to this concern are unmailable within the meaning of Section 4 of the Act of March 2, 1889, (Section 484, P. L. & R., 1913.)

The scheme conducted under this name consists in the sending out of circular letters in which a silk petticoat worth $4.75 is promised to the addressee provided she will remit 10 cents to the concern and send five exact copies of the letter received by her to five of her acquaintances. The promoters of the scheme have left Minneapolis and cannot be located, and many thousands of letters are now being received at the Post Office at Minneapolis for this concern, which cannot be delivered and are being treated in accordance with the provisions of a fraud order issued against the National Mail Order Brokerage Exchange on the 28th instant.

Postmaster Morgan advises that the legislation of the Republic of Colombia requires the collection of customs duty upon parcels from other countries in every case in which the addressee has caused the parcel to be opened and assessed, notwithstanding said parcel is subsequently refused by the addressee. In such cases the amount of the customs duty must be paid by the sender before the parcel will be returned to him.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Chicle and Pigments Were Among the Articles Classified.

The Inter-ocean Forwarding Company lost, before the Board of General Appraisers, in a contention relating to the classification of developed photographic plate negatives of glass which were assessed by the collectors at 30 per cent. as manufacturers of glass. Entry was claimed at 15 per cent. as photographic dry plates as unenumerated manufactured articles. The board, by Judge Sullivan, decided the Collector made the correct classification, that officer being affirmed.

Crim & Wemple, representing G. W. Sheldon & Co., claimed that importations of chicle should be given entry at 15 cents per pound as crude chicle. The Collector held that the commodity was both refined and advanced in value. It had been coagulated and ground. Judge McClelland, finding against the claims of the importers, held that it seemed to be the fact that the processes to which the chicle had been subjected before importation were "beyond that necessary to the proper packing" thereof. As the merchandise was held to be advanced in condition and value, the Collector was affirmed in taking 20 per cent. duty.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, protested the Collector's return on merchandise invoiced as "Tuscan red, No. 4,076, D. X." Duty was levied at 20 per cent. under the provision for lakes. The claims included 10 per cent. as oxide of iron, the same rate as pigments, 15 pe. cent. under paragraph 63, or at 10 or 15 per cent. under the catch-all porovisions of paragraph 385. Judge McClelland said the trend of the examination of the importers' witnesses and testimony seemed to indicate a purpose to establish a difference between a "lake" and a "color lake." It was held that the term "lakes" was sufficiently comprehensive to include all lakes, this view apparently being confirmed in the case of the Farbwerke-Hoechst Co. vs. the United States. In affirming the Collector, it was held that his classification appeared to have been fully warranted.

Fensterer & Ruhe were partly sustained in claims affecting drinking glasses composed of blown and molded glass, the former chief value, and of casseroles, plates and dishes composed of earthenware, colored, and enameled. Duty at 45 per cent. was taken on the glasses under the blown glass ware provision, while the earthenware articles were taxed 40 per cent. as colored and enameled earthenware. The board sustained the claim for 30 per cent. on the glasses as manufactures of glass, but declined to lower the tax on the earthenware, it being held as to the latter that no proof was submitted.

Dress and Waist Makers Lunch.

Yesterday saw the start of the noonday luncheon of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association. There were about twenty members present. Norman Hapgood was the speaker. The topics discussed were of a general nature and had no relation to the business of dress and waist manufacturing. It is the intention of the association executives to hold these luncheons at the Hofbrau Haus weekly, and to have present small groups of manufacturers.

Mail Goes on Deutschland.

Prominent importing houses were notified yesterday from the German Embassy that mail destined for Germany and to be carried by the merchant submarine Deutschland must be on board by 9 A. M. today. Quite a number of letters were received by business houses in this city which were brought by the Deutschland on her last trip across. The New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation received word from its Leipsic representative. The German fur buyers, it seems, prefer to have the sales in this city rather than in London.

Dress Goods Quiet.

The trade in dress goods has assumed a quieter trend. A large amount of orders has been booked for the Spring season. Immediate business is slack at the present time, the garment manufacturers supplying their fabric needs of the moment with goods from stock. In the coating branch of the trade the style seems to be entirely devoted to cloths with a nap finish. Color is selling quite a quantity of merchandise. In the suiting end the demand has been for more or less staple fabrics. Color is the all important item with buyers.

More Woolens Needed?

Trade has been at more or less of a standstill during the last week in the men's wear woolen market. This is ascribed to the election. A brisk demand is expected to start up toward the close of this week. The clothiers, according to all reports, have been doing an exceptionally heavy business on overcoats, and anything adaptable in the way of overcoatings is grabbed up by the piece goods buyers. With the volume of orders for next Spring now on the books of the manufacturers, the mill agents feel that the clothiers have not made arrangements for all the woolens they will need. Supplementary orders are therefore awaited.

Crude Rubber Prices Firmer.

The continued lack of big buying in the local crude rubber market is having no bad effect on prices. Things were especially quiet yesterday, the trade apparently having adopted a "watchful waiting" policy for the time being. Brazilian sorts continued firm under the scarcity of supplies in leading primary markets, as well as here, up-river fine being quoted at 82½ cents for spot, and 82 cents for afloats to arrive soon. Up-river coarse and upper Caucho ball were reported about on the same basis of 47½ cents a pound. The plantation rubbers were steady to firmer. For first latex, spot, 68 cents was asked, while for similar shipments of smoked sheets the price quoted was 6½ cents.

Duty on Carbonic Acid Capsules.

The Treasury Department has requested Assistant Attorney General Hanson to appeal to the Customs Court a recent decision of the Board of General Appraisers dealing with the question of the assessment of additional duty on carbonic acid gas and capsules containing the same. It appeared that because of an advance by the Appraiser on the capsules, the value of the entire shipment was increased and additional duty was assessed. The board on the other hand, in reviewing the issue, held that no additional duty accrued, on the theory that the capsules were "containers" and consequently not the subject of appraisement. As the issue is a novel one, the department desires the question to be thrashed out in the court.

Coal Rates Continue High.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that there has been less demand for premium coal in the local anthracite market during the last few days, with the result that prices on domestic sizes have stopped advancing, though they have not declined owing to the very limited tonnage offering for sale at the loading ports. Production was materially reduced last week by a series of holidays more or less local to the mining region, and the election day shutdown has brought about a further curtailment of output. It had been anticipated that this interruption of supply would have the effect of forcing the market still higher, but there have been other influences at work to prevent this. Bituminous prices have been maintained at high levels during the last week, with the main tendency still upward.

Bleached Goods Buying Keeps Up.

While there has been a falling off over the Election Day period, leading handlers of bleached goods say that buying keeps up surprisingly well considering the length of time over which it has been spread and the higher prices that are now being asked for the finished cloths. One reason for this is said to be that big buyers realize that, in spite of the advances that have been made, standard lines of bleached cloths are still low when the cost of the goods in the gray is considered, as well as the higher bleaching cost, &c. Some of the larger buyers, especially in the Central West, are said to be buying certain constructions of goods in the bleached state entirely, where they used to get them in the gray and have the bleaching done themselves, because they have found it cheaper to do so. At least one leading line of 4-4 bleached goods is still a cent or so under the 1907 price.

Silk Business Shows No Halt.

Little fault is to be found with the business that is being done in the local silk trade these days. Houses that sell direct to the retail trade, as well as the jobbers, report the stores to be taking goods freely. In some cases mills are already sold ahead until May, with others having the opportunity to accept business that far ahead if they want to in the face of the present condition of the raw silk market. For the moment, at least, the situation at Yokohama is causing some uneasiness here, specially among certain concerns that are said to have taken business for late deliveries without being fully covered on their raw materials. There has been no marked change in the character of the demand of late, taffetas, Georgette crepes, louisines, and similar weaves being well up in the running. A profusion of fancies is called for in the business taken to date.

Gray Goods Buyers Mark Time.

Buyers of gray goods here were inclined to mark time yesterday, pending the settling of the Presidential struggle, and as this procedure seemed agreeable to sellers, there was not a great deal of business done. Very little trading in print cloths was reported for delivery past Feb. 1. Spot sales of 38½-inch 64-60s were reported in a limited way at 8 cents, while December-January shipments of 39-inch 68-72s sold at 9 cents. Second-hand offers to sell at a little less than the market, which were reported on Monday, were apparently withdrawn yesterday. The situation in print cloths was reflected in coarse-yarn goods, where there was little doing during the day. Closing printcloth prices, which were more or less nominal, follow:

39-inch, 80-80s	10½c	38½-inch, 64-60s	8c
39-inch, 72-76s	9¾c	38½-inch, 64-56s	7¾c
39-inch, 68-72s	9c	38½-inch, 60-52s	7¼c
39-inch, 56-44s	6¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s	6¾c
38½-inch, 64-64s	8½c	27-inch, 64-60s	5¼c

Underwear Lines Priced Higher.

A leading Southern line of men's ribbed cotton drawers, shirts and union suits was opened yesterday for the Fall, 1917, season at prices which showed an average advance of 50 per cent. over those asked a year ago this time when the 1916 quotations were given out. So far as could be learned, this was the only line priced yesterday, though it was said that some Northern-made goods of a similar nature would be priced in the next week or so. In one case it was said that the opening was planned for next Wednesday. While prices have not yet been made on leading lines of fleeced underwear for next Fall, the chances are that this will be done soon. One well-known concern reported yesterday that definite information regarding the time of opening would probably be available within the next day or two. While it was said that, on the average, jobbers' orders for the Southern goods opened yesterday were no larger than those placed last year, they were no smaller, which seemed to show that goods are needed, and that wholesale buyers have become more or less reconciled to the necessity of higher prices.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR WOOL.

Sales for Week Were 15,000,000 Pounds—Higher Prices Prevail.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 8.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Every kind of wool is strong, and during the week under review it didn't seem to make much difference which way the election was going as far as the wool market was concerned. Sales for the week were 15,000,000 pounds. The week under review was more active than any for a long time. Business was transacted at advance prices, and there is every indication that these high figure will continue. The urgent need of the dealers to get something to sell as well as the scarcity of the wool has forced prices higher than they have been for some time. The market has a more solid foundation than any previous high market has had.

"The coming heavyweight season in the woolen and worsted goods market is expected to be a particularly good one. The demand for woolen suitings has been specially active. There has also been a very good demand for staple overcoatings. The woolen goods market appears to be on the brink of a relatively big increase in the demand. At no time in recent months has the woolen goods market appeared more satisfactory.

"While the cotton goods market was considered remarkable a number of weeks ago, today it is in an even more remarkable condition, the prices strong and tending upward, and with the demand reasonably strong, in view of the high quotations which are noted."

Crossbred Wool in Demand.

London, Nov. 8.—The 7,700 bales offered at the wool auction sales today were mostly crossbreds and they were readily absorbed by the home trade at firm prices. A few New South Wales scoured merinos sold at 4s 5d and Victorians brought 4s 2d.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Price changes in the wheat market were feverish, but during the greater part of the session the undertone was strong, and the late positions sold at new high records for the season. Strength in Winnipeg over our holiday and reports that the British Government had made very large purchases there seemed to be the basis for the upward movement. In the local cash market No. 2 hard, Winter wheat, was quoted at $2.02½; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $2.08½; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $2.11¾, all free on board, New York.

CORN.

Prices in the corn market were strong in sympathy with wheat and on firmness in Europe and in Argentina. Advices from abroad indicated a liberal foreign demand, and it was intimated that corn will be wanted for mixing with wheat flour. The Government report indicated a total yield of 2,643,508,000 bushels, compared with 2,717,332,000 last month and a final last year of 3,054,535,000 bushels. Cash offers were small and prices were firm. In the local cash market new No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $1.10, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, to arrive.

OATS.

The oats market was firmer, advancing ¾@1c a bushel, in sympathy with wheat and corn and on buying by commission houses prompted by firmness in the cash position. The local cash market was firmer; standard quoted at 60¼@60¾c; No. 2 white, 59¾@60¼c; No. 3 white, 59¼@59¾c; No. 4 white, 58¾@59¼c; fancy clipped white, 62¼@64¾c; ordinary clipped white, 61¼@62¼c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Prices in the provision market were higher, with a fairly active demand prompted by the strength in corn and also on evidence that at least some of the leading packers were on the buying side. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 43,000; estimated for Thursday, 26,000. Kansas City received 12,000 and Omaha 5,600.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Prices in the market for cottonseed oil experienced a sharp advance early in the day, prompted by the strength in the cotton market and the advance in lard. On the advance, however, there was quite active selling, and toward the close prices were somewhat reactionary, although final quotations were 11 to 30 points net higher. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market shared the nervousness and irregularity displayed by other markets as a result of election uncertainties during yesterday's session. The opening was steady at an advance of 3 to 4 points, but demand was limited and prices soon eased off under scattering liquidation, with the close showing a net loss of 3 to 5 points. Sales were reported of 33,750 bags. The local market for spot coffee was quiet and unchanged at 9¾c for Rio 7s and 10¾c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

There was no feature to the sugar futures market, trading being generally quiet, with a little scattered selling and a light demand, causing prices to sag, the close being 4 to 9 points net lower, with sales for the day 5,650 tons. Operators on the Exchange appeared to be willing to await fresh developments in the spot market before taking sides either way in futures. Range of prices:

The local market for refined sugar was unchanged at 7.50c to 7.60c for fine granulated. There were fair withdrawals on old contract, but new business was light. There were no fresh developments in the market for raw sugar, the market being purely nominal and without buyers showing interest at the moment. Full duty sugars were offered at 5¼c, with bids of 5 1-16c solicited. Quotations follow: Centrifugal, 6.46c; molasses, 5.59c; cost and freight, 5⅛c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts two days, 13,917 packages. Supplies are coming forward slowly and the market is lightly supplied with fresh goods of nearly all classifications. There is a firm feeling and some buying interest, but values are generally unchanged, except for ladles and packing stock, which are higher. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, per pound, 37½@38c; extras, (92 score,) 37c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 35½@36½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 34@35c; thirds, 33@33½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 38½@39c; extras, 37½@38c; firsts, 36@37c; seconds, 34½@35½c; creamery held higher than extras, 36@36½c; extras, 35½@35¾c; firsts, 34¾@35¼c; seconds, 33¾@34½c; thirds, 32½@33½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 36@36½c; good to prime, 34@35½c; common to fair, 30@33½c; renovated, extras, 32½@33c; firsts, 31½@32c; lower grades, 30@31c; imitation creamery, firsts, 31½@32c; ladles, June make, firsts, 31@31½c; current make, firsts, 30½@31½c; seconds, 30c; lower grades, 28½@29½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 30c; No. 2, 29@29½c; lower grades, 28@28½c.

EGGS.—Receipts two days, 16,633 cases. The market opened rather quiet on fresh gathered eggs after the holiday, possibly due to the political excitement. Receipts are moderate and contain but a small proportion of newlaid qualities, and holders are generally feeling confident as to the permanency of recent values. The light business reported is chiefly within the ranges recently quoted. Storage eggs are very firm; there has been some increase in the demand of late, stock is held with great confidence, and some sales are reported a little above recent quotations, necessitating some further revision. Nearby white eggs in light supply, but the extreme prices recently ruling have curtailed the demand to some extent; most of the supply is more or less defective and selling at the secondary quotations. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 42@44c; extra firsts, 40@41c; firsts, 37@39c; seconds, 34@37c; thirds and poorer, 31@33c; dirties, No. 1, 30½@31c; No. 2 and poorer, 28@30c; checks, good to choice, dry, 29@29½c; undergrades, 26@28c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 33@33¼c; firsts, 32@32½c; seconds, 31@31¾c; lower grades, 28@30½c; dirties, 26@29c; refrigerator, State whites, 33@36c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 62@68c; ordinary to good, 45@60c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 45@60c; nearby, white, pullets, 45@55c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 40@55c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 45@52c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 37@44c.

DIDN'T WANT BOERS IN EAST AFRICA

Captured Archives Show German Governor Discriminated Against Those There.

DE WET TURNS ON REBELS

Testifies Against Treason Prisoners Who Asked Him to Lead Another Rebellion in South Africa.

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 16.—Letters found in the Government archives at Dodoma, German East Africa, when that town was occupied by the British forces, and published in the South African papers, are having a marked cooling effect on the pro-German ardor of the irreconcilable Afrikander element. These documents, which are composed of original correspondence between Dr. Schnee, Governor of German East Africa, and various officials of his administration show that the Boer settlers there, who formed a considerable colony, were regarded as undesirable aliens and discriminated against contrary to the law of the colony, which provides that all white settlers are to be treated on an equal footing.

In a letter signed by the Governor himself, dated Dar-es-Salaam, July 25, 1913, and addressed to the Commissioner of Revenue at Kondoa-Irangi, Dr. Schnee says:

"I wish to point out to you that, though it is true that under Article 5, Section 2, of the Kongo law we are not supposed to treat Boers on a different footing from German or other European settlers, nevertheless our experience with them in the Aruscha district has shown that it is not advisable to allow them to settle in any region where game is plentiful. Nor is it wise to allow them too far from the seat of a Magistrate's office, where they would be out of control and be able to give rein to their poaching instincts."

Attached to this letter was a communication signed by Graf von Gotzen for the Imperial Governor, which reads:

"From reports thus far received concerning the Boers and half Boers, (halb Buren,) it seems doubtful whether they would form fit and desirable settlers. Both from the experience gained at Aruscha and from the attempt made to use Boers in the defense of our borders, I have decided that in future no Boers are to be allowed to settle outside the area of the already established Boer settlements, and such only between Meru and Mara and between Nyassa and Tanganyika Lakes, and to forbid further encroachments on their part in any other direction, except in particular cases, where such permission might serve some Government object.

"For the above reasons I feel obliged to refuse permission to Boers to hire or purchase ground, as requested, until at any rate I have been able to satisfy myself of the desirability of each separate applicant. In this connection I request military stations in future to attach a precise report concerning each individual."

De Wet as a Cold Douche.

Another factor in dampening the spirits and curtailing the activities of the Afrikander extremists who have been trying to foment a second rebellion is the uncompromising attitude against it of General Christian De Wet. After the old fighter, with many of his supporters, had been released on parole last Spring from the long term of imprisonment to which they had been condemned for their part in the first revolt early in the war against Germany, his public utterances at Boer celebrations in his honor caused not a little resentment on the part of the Unionists, coupled with the fear that he would not live up to his oath to refrain from political agitation during the period of his sentence. Events have proved this suspicion to have been without justification. One demonstration of this was furnished interestingly last Friday at Bloemfontein, where he appeared in court as a witness at the preliminary examination of Christian Peter van der Merwe and Gerrit van Niekerk Schonken, accused of high treason.

His physiognomy never for a moment relaxed its accustomed austerity as he told how he had been approached, evidently with the idea that he would not hesitate to break his word and head the proposed new rising. With characteristic caution, he requested that his testimony, which was given in Dutch, should be recorded in that language as well as in English. "Not that I wish to be narrow-minded," he explained, "but a word may be wrongly translated and make a difference." Incidentally, he admitted that he had commented sarcastically on the slowness of the Government agents in getting wind of the conspiracy which had been developing for some time. De Wet had been ill at Bloemfontein and had gone to Durban to recuperate, when early one morning he was approached on the beach there by the two accused. Apparently they did not doubt that they had only to make formal solicitation to enlist him as the leader of the movement. "Johannesburg and Pretoria are so well organized," he was told, "that both places can be taken at any time, Government and all."

He turned on his heel and walked away without deigning to reply.

Subsequently they called on him at his home in Bloemfontein, and Schonken again introduced the subject, saying that, as the people regarded the General as their father, his interviewers had come to see him about the plans under way for another rebellion.

Their reception appears to have been grimly cold, for De Wet testified that he answered:

"Are you and van der Merwe going about organizing a second rising?"

To this leading question Schonken responded cautiously:

"I cannot say yes to that, nor can I say no."

"Well," commented De Wet, breaking off the interview abruptly, "if I had been going about in connection with another uprising, as you have been doing, I should have been in jail long ago. I am surprised that the Government has not yet arrested you."

When it became known that the General had been summoned as a witness in the high treason proceedings, van der Merwe went whining to him.

"What will become of my poor, sick wife if I am put in jail?" he wanted to know.

"I am sorry for your wife, but you have only yourself to blame," replied the General curtly, and he refused to discuss to matter further.

Gerhardus Snyman de Bruyn, a farmer of Bloemfontein, testified that on Aug. 11 van der Merwe called on him and told him that De Wet had been made acquainted with the plans for the rising, and that the General had said that if matters were as stated he would be with them heart and soul. Later the accused told the witness that Commander Neser was to organize in the Cape; that General Victor of Vryburg would go to Potchefstroom to organize there, and that General Muller with General Eloff would take Pretoria.

Botha Denounces Agitators.

That the movement had made some progress was shown by remarks concerning it made by the Premier, General Louis Botha, in an address the other day at a meeting of the South African Party in the Free State, held at Bloemfontein.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that efforts are being made to foment a second rising. The whole story will be made public in time and people will then be able to see for themselves. Persons are now going about the country and by secret oaths are swearing in other people to take part in a rebellion. They may be of little consequence, but it causes me deep grief, for while some are still in jail others are doing that sort of thing. An end will have to be put to it.

"I ask you to realize that those who are misleading these people can be of no manner of assistance to them, for they cannot even help themselves. The stronger men behind the movement ought to feel thoroughly ashamed of themselves. A second rebellion could never succeed, and its only effect would be to blacken the Afrikander people and to do them harm."

Apropos of De Wet, the following pen picture of this most wily and resourceful of the old Boer leaders, contained in a new biography of Premier Botha by Harold Spender, recently published, describes him as he still is to all who come in contact with him:

"Never did I set eyes on a man who seemed to stand so much alone. His face was a study in resistance—it recalled one of those graven visages far up the Nile, hewn out of the very rocks, ancient leaders in the land of Africa. His body then seemed all muscle—thickset, pillarlike in its erectness, 'four square to all the winds that blow.' Looking on him, one could understand the fear that he inspired in his own men when he rode on through the night, wrapped in his own thoughts, devising one of those schemes of escape, almost miraculous in their cunning, which perplexed an empire and puzzled a planet. He spoke only in Dutch, and then only in few words. He still regarded all Englishmen with a dour reserve that rarely softened or melted. Only on one or two occasions have I seen his face light up with enthusiasm, and that was always when he recalled one of his own achievements in evasion."

PRAIRIE DOG WAR IS ON AT THE ZOO

Army of the North, Led by Smudge, Has Best of It So Far.

FIGHT WHEN SUN SHINES

Nobody Has Found Out as Yet Just What Started All the Trouble.

The war in Europe no longer holds first place in discussion among keepers in the Zoological Park in the Bronx. The park now has a war of its own, and while there has as yet been no casualties, the bitterness of warfare is not lacking. This war is between opposing clans in the prairie dog inclosure, and it is carried on with the industry characteristic of a feud in the Kentucky mountains.

To quote Charley Snyder, the principal keeper, "the little animals are always at it when the weather permits." The most surprising thing about it is, the keepers say, that the prairie dogs are usually most peaceful. Just what started the feud no one knows.

It was Keeper Snyder who first noticed that the animals were in a state of war. As he was crossing from the bear pits one day last week his attention was attracted by the chattering of the prairie dogs. He went over to the settlement and there he found that two opposing forces had met near the centre of the inclosure and appeared to be intent upon telling each other a few plain truths. Sometimes the remarks appeared to be too frank, for the animals would rush at each other and there would be a lively mixup for a few seconds. The skirmish ended when several of the dogs lost their balance and tumbled over backwards.

"The war is on," Snyder reported seriously to Curator of Reptiles Raymond L. Ditmars.

In response to Mr. Ditmars's inquiry Snyder told him what he had just seen. From a close study of the little animals Snyder believes that the animals occupying the northerly burrows of the village have declared war upon those living in the hillocks near the southwestern side of the inclosure. The leader of the army of the north is Smudge, a war-like old prairie dog, who has been in the park almost as long as Snyder. Always noted for his aggressive disposition Snyder believes that it was Smudge who started the war. The northern side had the best of it at the start, for Smudge has always been a believer in preparedness. Before beginning hostilities the Smudge party built a barricade of sand in front of their end of the village.

When war was declared Smudge led his followers over this barricade, and the actual fighting has been on that side of their "trench." Though taken by surprise, Snyder reports the dogs at the south end of the inclosure rallied to the call of those first attacked, and since then they have conducted a very spirited defense. Their leader appears to be a large Canadian prairie dog. He is usually at the fore whenever there is any trouble, and it is apparent, Snyder says, that the others act under his orders. Snyder is also the authority for the statement that Smudge keeps sentinels posted to prevent the opposing army from surprising his force and rushing the barricade.

"A battle is really worth coming to see," said Snyder. "It is amusing because no one is really hurt. It is a sort of football engagement, with a few timid ones chattering from the mouth of their homes. There is very little doing in the morning. It is too cold. Just as soon as it warms up the watcher will see old Smudge appear at the entrance to his burrow. The dogs on sentry duty will run up to him, and I really believe that they report conditions outside the barricade.

"This done, Smudge will chatter a second or two, and his army will begin to appear. When all is ready Smudge leads them out. Then the opposing clan issues from their strongholds. As a preliminary there is much popping in and out of heads, shaking of black-tipped tails, shrill calls of squatting sentries and other war-like manoeuvres.

"The method of attack consists in rushing at an adversary that has been sitting up, chattering taunts, taking a position in front of him and 'talking back.' When the taunts become too personal one or the other will give a shove that will send his enemy tumbling backward. When the other recovers his balance and his dignity he will come back, and for a time the two will engage in shoving each other about. In the end one will give up. A retreat by any one of the combatants is considered a decisive defeat.

"If a dog dives into a burrow the victor joyously fills up the mouth of the hole with loose dirt. He packs this down by butting the ground with the top of his head. The entombed and intimidated animal seems to be ashamed to dig his way out for at least an hour or more.

It is interesting to watch the victors with squeals of delight, hard at work, packing down the earth in the entrance to the hole of the defeated ones."

Snyder holds that the Smudge clan are jealous because the animals at the south end receive a lion's share of the attention and admiration of the visiting public.

"How will the war end?" one of the visitors asked Snyder.

"The cold weather will end hostilities," he replied. "Even now the battles are confined to the middle of the day when the sun shines."

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Investor Buys Cliff Street Building Held at $180,000—Former Nordica Home in Ninth Street Sold Again—Fifth Avenue Burden Home Transferred—Leasing Activity.

Real estate men were evidently more interested yesterday in the Election Day results than in realty market conditions. Of the few deals reported, the one of chief interest involved the purchase of the new five-story building at 27 Cliff Street, in the far downtown district. The structure fronts 27.1 feet on Cliff Street, adjoining the northwest corner of Fulton Street, and extends to Ryder's Alley, 164.7 feet deep on the southerly line, a plot of about 4,250 square feet.

The building was recently completed by Thurston & Braidick and has been purchased by Seig Goldstein for investment. It is leased on a long term and the property has been held at $180,000. The Charles F. Noyes Company was the broker. It sold to Mr. Goldstein a few years ago the property at 60 Cliff Street. Stoddard & Mark represented the sellers as attorneys and Ascher & Goldstein the buyer.

Buys Lower Fifth Avenue House.

In the lower Fifth Avenue section the three-story dwelling at 6 West Ninth Street 22.3 by 93.11, was purchased by August Zinsser, President of the Yorkville Bank, who will occupy it after alterations. It was sold by R. F. Childs through J. Irving Walsh, as broker. The residence was the former home of Mme. Nordica. It adjoins the Berkely apartment house on the Fifth Avenue corner.

Operators Buy West Side Dwelling.

Ennis & Sinnott, operators, bought from the estate of Laura H. Smith, 146 West Seventy-sixth Street, a four-story dwelling on a lot 20 by 102.2. Laurence McGuire negotiated the sale.

Burden Residence Transferred.

Title was recorded yesterday from I. Townsend Burden to Edward B. Close of the former Burden residence at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Ninety-second Street, covering a plot 100 by 100.

Long Island.

Henry A. Rogers of Worthington Whitehouse, Inc., has sold a tract of woodland in Broad Hollow Woods, Wheatley Hills, L. I., for the estate of Oliver Titus. This property has been sold to the same client who last month purchased from the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company its woodland adjoining the above. The property adjoins the estates of Beekman Winthrop and E. D. Morgan.

Recent sales at Howard Beach Estates by Smith & Richmond have been made to E. L. Enggren, L. F. Van Dyke and Robert Kuck.

Sells $75,000 Groton, Conn., Estate.

Joseph P. Day has sold for Henry C. Rowe his Eastern Point property of about twenty-eight acres at Groton, Conn., opposite New London. It has a frontage of 2,200 feet on New London Harbor, and was held at $75,000.

Commercial Leases.

George R. Read & Co. leased the five-story building 192-194 Chambers Street to the Consolidated Fruit Corporation; also the six-story building 448 Greenwich Street to Butler Brothers.

Bleiman & Co. have leased the store and basement of 30,000 square feet at 632-634 Broadway for the estate of Helen C. Juilliard to Springarn Brothers for a term of years.

Pease & Elliman have leased to Crane & Co. of Chicago for Lee & Fleischmann the westerly store in the building under construction on the site of the Berkeley Lyceum at 23-25 West Forty-fourth Street, running through the block to 22 West Forty-fifth Street. The store is 50 feet wide on Forty-fourth Street and 25 wide on 45th Street.

Goodale, Perry & Dwight, Inc., have leased the sixteenth floor at 19-23 East Twenty-fourth Street to the Bigelow-Hartford Carpet Company and the parlor floor at 64 Madison Avenue to Tribus & Manket.

Private Dwellings Leased.

William B. May & Co. have leased 26 East Seventy-third Street for the Barney Estate Company to George Doubleday, in conjunction with Cruickshank & Co.; 22 West Fifty-second Street for the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company to George W. Schurman; 39 West Fifty-sixth Street for George C. Smith to Dr. Hermann Biggs, and 27 East Thirty-eighth Street for Herbert A. Sherman as agent to Mrs. Minnie D. Meicham.

Moore, Schutte & Co. have leased the dwelling at 530 West 143d Street for the Gramercy Investing Company to Henry M. Gollhardt.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Edgar A. Levy to Frank B. Porter the four-story and basement, nineteen-foot dwelling at 116 East Seventy-second Street, which Mr. Levy bought to protect the light of the twelve-story apartment house which he built at the southeast corner of Park Avenue adjoining.

Realty Notes.

A meeting of the West Side Taxpayers' Association has been called for this evening at 267 West Thirty-fourth Street.

Charles H. Ayres will speak on the Torrens law before the members of the Harlem Property Owners' Association this evening at 147 East 125th Street.

The New York Title and Mortgage Company has placed fourteen mortgages aggregating $105,000 on fourteen plots in Bronx Borough west of Jerome Avenue and north of Burnside Avenue to the Clemilt Realty Company.

REPORT VILLISTAS IN BATTLE AT DORADO

Obregon Orders More Carranza Troops Against Bandits in Chihuahua.

FISHER'S DEATH CONFIRMED

American Physician Was Stabbed at Santa Rosalia—Mexicans Leave Ojinaga.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 8.—Unconfirmed reports of a battle between the Villa bandits and the reorganized Carranza troops at Dorado, Chihuahua, between Parral and Jiminez, Friday and Saturday have been received here by United States Government agents and by Carranza officials.

General Alvaredo Obregon, Mexican Minister of War, has ordered another division from Coahuila to proceed against the Villa bandits in Chihuahua, according to a message from him to Mexican Consul Eduardo Soriano Bravo here today. These troops will reinforce the recently organized division under General Francisco Murgia, which is proceeding northward from Escalon.

A foreigner who arrived here from Santa Rosalia late last night confirmed the report of Dr. C. H. Fisher's execution by Villa bandits at Santa Rosalia following the capture of the town by the Villa troops on Oct. 6. The foreigner said that Dr. Fisher was stabbed to death by the bandits.

The foreigner also confirmed the report that Villa bandits cut the ears from many Carranza soldiers and unspeakably mutilated the Carranza officers. Villa was reported to be at La Generala Ranch, near Parral.

PRESIDIO, Tex., Nov. 8.—A report that 150 bandits, said to be followers of Francisco Villa, are at La Mula Pass, south of Ojinaga, Chihuahua, has caused much excitement across the river in the Mexican border town. Many Mexican families are leaving Ojinaga for Presidio, and the Mexican customs authorities have brought their records to the American side of the border.

Preparations are being made by the Carranza garrison under Colonel Riojas to defend the town, and the Carranza officers are reported to be sending their families across the line in anticipation of a fight with the bandits.

EL PASO, Nov. 8.—A report was received here late last night from Chihuahua City that Edgar Koch, German consular agent at Parral, either was killed or was being held for ransom by Villa bandits in the vicinity of Santa Rosalia. Koch is believed to have started from Parral with the $50,000 worth of silver bars for an American mining company.

DIAZ MEN HOLD RAILROAD.

13 Cars Carrying Carranza Troops Missing Near Santa Lucrecia.

PUERTO, Mex., Nov. 8.—The adherents of Brig. Gen. Felix Diaz, nephew of the former President, General Porfirio Diaz, hold the Tehuantepec Railroad south of Santa Lucrecia. Since Friday last a train of thirteen cars with Carranza troops aboard has been missing.

On Oct. 23 rebel forces attacked a train, killing nine soldiers and wounding eleven. The passengers were robbed.

PROMOTION BOARD NAMED.

Daniels Selects Nine Members of Board of Rear Admirals.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Secretary Daniels has designated nine members of the Board of Rear Admirals to select line officers due for promotion. The board consists of Admiral Henry T. Mayo, Vice Admiral De Witt Coffman, and Rear Admirals Austin M. Knight, Nathaniel R. Usher, Frank F. Fletcher, Walter McLean, Augustus F. Fechteler, Albert Gleaves and Albert W. Grant.

The board will convene at the Navy Department on Dec. 2. All promotions to the grades of Commander, Captain and Rear Admiral of the line of the navy, including the promotion of those Captains, Commanders and Lieutenant Commanders who are carried as additional numbers are to be made by selection from the next lower grade on the recommendation of the board.

The Secretary of the Navy will furnish the board with the number of vacancies in the grades of Rear Admiral, Captain and Commander to be filled during the following calendar year, including the vacancies existing at the time of the convening of the board and those that will occur by operation of law from the date of convening until the end of the next calendar year, and with the names of all officers who are eligible for consideration for selection together with the record of each officer.

No officer can be recommended for promotion unless he receives the recommendation of not less than six members of the board. Not more than ten Captains can be appointed in any one year.

SUIT TO TEST ADAMSON LAW

Union Pacific Begins Action in Federal Court in Omaha.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 8.—The Union Pacific Railroad Company filed suit in the Federal Court here today to test the constitutionality of the eight-hour law recently passed by Congress and known as the Adamson act. Thomas S. Allen, United States District Attorney, and four Union Pacific trainmen representing the different railroad brotherhoods, are made parties defendant.

The bill of complaint alleges that the law is unconstitutional because it is not a proper regulation of interstate commerce, because it violates the guarantees of the fifth amendment to the Federal Constitution, and because it is unworkable as applied to existing conditions under which the trainmen are operating. The bill of complaint is a printed document of considerable size, and contains copies of all the schedules under which the trainmen work.

BOSTON WRECK COSTS LIVES OF FORTY-FIVE

All Bodies Removed from Car Which Plunged Into Channel —Toll May Reach Fifty.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—Forty-five persons, all of them men, were known today to have lost their lives in yesterday's disaster, when a crowded electric car plunged through an open drawbridge into Fort Point Channel in the South Boston district. Twelve persons escaped and of these ten were so badly injured they were sent to hospitals for treatment. Conductor George McKeon, one of the injured, said he had rung up sixty-two fares and city officials expressed the fear that others outside those whose bodies were found were missing.

The car, which had plunged head first into the mud at the bottom of the thirty-foot channel, was raised early today by a powerful floating crane after all the bodies had been removed by divers.

Most of those who escaped were standing on the platforms. Among them was Miss Lillian Frank, the only woman known to have been on the car.

Not more than three or four persons, it is believed, escaped from inside the car. The divers said that when they first explored the wreck the windows were smashed and blocked with the bodies of the drowned. That the men trapped within the car fought madly for their lives was shown by numerous cuts and bruises.

Theory Advanced That Explosive Struck Machine When Being Launched.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—In an attempt to launch a bomb from their aeroplane at the Indian Head Proving Grounds this afternoon, Lieutenant Luther Welsh, U. S. N., and Lieutenant Clarence K. Bronson, U. S. N., were killed by the premature explosion of the missile. The wreckage of the machine and the bodies of the two men fell into the Potomac River.

The men were engaged in experimenting with bombs for use against vessels, according to the Inspector of Ordnance at Indian Head, who added:

"The bomb detonated immediately beneath the aeroplane. It was being launched by Lieutenant Welsh and apparently struck some part of the machine. It was seen to detonate and the aeroplane broke in two and fell into the river. Hardly any trace of aeroplane or passengers has been found yet."

A search party proceeded at once to the scene of the wreck, the Navy Department announced, and dragged the river. Nothing has been recovered but a portion of one seat of the aeroplane and a part of the tail.

Lieutenant Bronson, at the time of his death, was detailed for aviation instruction at the Curtiss Aviation Station, Newport News, Va. He had been attached doing the last two years to the aviation school at Pensacola. He was piloting the machine when the accident occurred. Lieut. Welsh was detailed as ordnance officer to the Indian Head proving grounds.

He was promoted to Lieutenant, junior grade, last year. Last September he was ordered to Newport News, Va., to undertake a course of instruction in aviation at Curtiss Aviation Station.

Lieutenant Welsh was born in Kansas City, Mo., June 20, 1889, apointed midshipman July 5, 1905, and graduated in 1909, number four and a "star" in his class. He was assigned to the Missouri and later to the North Dakota. He was detailed to the Bureau of Ordnance for temporary instruction at George Washington University in 1911. Later he continued his course at various steel plants. In 1913 he was promoted to Lieutenant, junior grade, and became aid on the staff of the commander of the Third Division of the Atlantic fleet. An open letter to

James W. Gerard

American Ambassador to Germany

Dear Mr. Gerard:

Few men are ever placed in the trying position that you occupy today. As America's Ambassador to a country torn with strife, as well as the representative of every other country that is at war with Germany, you have come through a severe ordeal with dignity and honor. It is a sterling tribute to your capability and fineness of mind.

Therefore it is with distinct pride that I address this letter to you. While I am only advertising a cigarette, nevertheless a cigarette has its uses and its pleasures, else why is it that the American people annually spend $120,000,000 to buy them? This sum of money proves that the cigarette is a great, big institution and one of our leading industries.

And of all the brands manufactured, I think the LORD SALISBURY more nearly approaches the ideal cigarette of a cosmopolitan country than any other cigarette now in existence. And the most potent reason for this is that

The LORD SALISBURY Cigarette, made and guaranteed by The American Tobacco Company, is the only 100% pure All-Turkish-tobacco cigarette in the world that sells for as little money as 15 cents for 20. Is it not the reasonable cigarette?
